BACK COURT WAR ON GUNMEN

DARING BRITON PRIES SECRETS OF RED RUSSIA

Outwits Agents of Infamous Cheka.

BY SIR PAUL DUKES.

[Chief of British and allied secret service in soviet Russia. Knighted for his intelligence work in the bolshevik lines. Author of "Red Dusk and the Morrow."]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

At the top of a high building near Whitehall, London, there was until recently an office known to but few privileged individuals and accessible only to recognized habitués or holders of unimpeachable credentials. You presented these to the elevator operator, who whisked you up to the roof and deposited you in a multi-angular alcove, until somebody was fetched to speak to you.

Your introductory letters might be to a Maj. Stevens, or a Capt. Wilkins, or some such name, but it invariably transpired that in that building there were at least half a dozen Maj. Stevenses or Capt. Wilkinses, and you would have to explain minutely where, how, and when you had come by your introductions.

Across the Roofs.

If you were found bona fide and were conducted further through this mysterious elevated abode, you threaded your way through mazes of narrow and tortuous passages, up and down short flights of stairs, and across bits of roof.

Through open doors you might catch glimpses of little dens with map covered walls, or tables with mechanical models and geometrical instruments, or the air would be pervaded with the odor of chemicals. This bewildering labyrinth was the headquarters of the foreign secret intelligence service, and it was from here that I was dispatched upon my mission of penetrating soviet Russia to conduct intelligence work in that country.

Russian Conditions Peculiar.

There are, I suppose, established methods for conducting secret intelligence service in enemy countries, but the conditions in Russia were quite peculiar and required special knowledge and treatment. Thus it was resolved that, novice though I was, the method whereby I should return to Russia and the means by which I should communicate with the outside world should be left entirely to myself to discover in actual practice.

In my book, "Red Dusk and the Morrow," I have described how I entered and escaped from soviet Russia, but hitherto I have been diffident in describing in too great detail the methods by which I developed the technique of the service. With changing conditions, however, I feel I can somewhat loosen the strings of caution and I shall scarcely subject any one to risk of detection as long as I avoid names and addresses.

Some weeks after I had been dispatched from the roof labyrinth near Whitehall, and while I was at Archangel, the news arrived like a bombshell of the murder by the bolsheviki of Capt. Crombie, British naval attaché, at the British embassy in Petrograd.

Régime of Terror Foreseen.

This event had a profound effect on the position of remaining foreigners in Russia, showing that the régime of terror was to be extended to them also. It rendered it necessary for me to assume the most perfect disguise possible, and I spent weeks growing a thick woolly beard and long hair, and trying in what sort of shirt and trousers I could make myself look most like a rampant red ruffian. Ought I to feel satisfied, I wonder—or ought I not—at the recollection that I achieved this end (as you can see from the picture) without any artificial assistance whatsoever? It really came quite naturally to me! But the secret of acting, they say, is not only to look, but also to feel and live your part. And I soon accustomed myself to doing that, too.

My disguise complete, I quit the remote seclusion of arctic regions and with the passport of a commercial traveler journeyed south to Finland. Soviet Russia was still at war with the neighboring states, but with the aid of some Finnish patrolmen I ran across the Finnish-Russian frontier at dead of night, furnished with a false Russian passport, and arrived next day in the northern Russian capital, Petrograd. It was a curious situation to be in, homeless and friendless in my home city; for, in my transformed individuality, I resolved I would not subject any of my numerous friends

Moses J. Wentworth Dies of Pneumonia

Capitalist and Pioneer Expires at 74

Moses J. Wentworth, pioneer and capitalist, died early this morning in his home, 1240 Lake Shore drive. The immediate cause of his death was pneumonia, although he had been in poor health for the last five years. He was 74 years old, and had been a resident of Chicago since 1868.

Mr. Wentworth was born in Sandwich, N. H., May 9, 1848. He graduated from Phillips academy, Andover, Mass., in 1863, and Harvard in 1868, and settled in Chicago in September of that year. He was admitted to the Chicago bar in 1871. He was a member of the 29th, 30th and 31st General Assembly, and was the Democratic nominee for presidential elector from the First district in 1888. In 1885 he was made life member of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society of Boston. He was a former president of the Calumet club and of the Harvard club of Chicago.

Bank and "L" Road Director.

He was a director of the Merchants Loan & Trust company, of the State bank, trustee of the Newberry library, director of the Metropolitan Elevated, trustee and president of the congregation of the Fourth Presbyterian church and vice-president of the James C. King Home for Old Men.

On Dec. 7, 1891, Mr. Wentworth married Miss Lizzie Shaw Hunt, who with two sons, John and Hunt, survive him. He was a nephew of "Long" John Wentworth.

Mr. Wentworth was one of the benefactors of the Chicago Historical society. The chief mark of his care for the welfare of the society was the gift of the files of the first Chicago newspapers collected by his uncle, John Wentworth. The earliest paper in this collection is the Chicago Democrat, the first issue of which was published Nov. 26, 1833.

Sons in Flying Service.

The sons of Mr. Wentworth, John and Hunt, were both in the Overseas Flying Service. John has the distinction of being the discoverer of the grave of Quentin Roosevelt, behind the German lines, and of reporting the same to the American command. Both are members of the Historical Post of the American Legion.

BULLETIN.

JOHANNESBURG, March 11.—(By the Associated Press.)—A Scottish detachment was ambushed at Benoni today by strikers hidden in a plantation, who poured a heavy fire into the soldiers, killing eighteen of them and wounding twenty-five. The Rand Daily Mail places Friday's casualties at 600, of whom 80 are believed to have been killed. The casualties among the strikers are not known.

JOHANNESBURG, March 11.—Following the lull upon the declaration of martial law throughout the Rand on Friday morning, systematic and widespread fighting has again broken out.

Most of the suburbs of Johannesburg are now controlled by the strikers, who have been reinforced in some instances by mounted commandos of Boer farmers, armed with rifles and bandoliers. Benoni, which was besieged yesterday, fell before the renewed assaults of the strikers this morning. This town is only twenty miles from Johannesburg.

Brakpan, fifteen miles distant, also is in the hands of the strikers. Reports from other districts indicate defeats for the police with heavy casualties.

Johannesburg Faces Civil War.

Anxiety is growing in central Johannesburg, where the prospect is that the citizens will have to defend themselves from the revolutionary commandos which are pressing in from all sides.

Airplanes reconnoitered above Benoni this morning after its capture. The machine guns drew a heavy fire, and Aviator Captain Cairey Thomas was shot through the heart while flying at a low altitude over the town. The airplane of Capt. Thomas was blown up just outside of Benoni by the strikers.

Later an aviator, flying very low, bombed and blew up the Benoni Trades hall, which was crowded with strikers, most of whom were killed, including several leaders, it is reported.

At Brakpan a commando attacked a mine. Special constables who were defending the property were defeated, eight police and one native being killed. Later the managers and two others were taken out and shot by the attackers. Brakpan and Benoni are littered with the dead and wounded, the small ambulance force being insufficient even to remove the fallen from the streets.

At Jeppe, east of Johannesburg, 2,000 strikers armed with hand grenades and revolvers are fighting steadily to prevent the police from reinforcing Fordsburg which is hard pressed. Continuous firing from this quarter can be heard in central Johannesburg. The total casualties in Johannesburg are: killed, nineteen police and thirteen civilians, and wounded, eighteen police and thirty-nine civilians.

Dynamiting Resumed.

An omnious hush fell Friday night and the fighting was suspended. At dawn Saturday bombing and dynamiting were resumed, but there was less small arm fighting, neither party showing a disposition to attack.

It is evident that the strikers are planning thorough and decisive blows to be struck simultaneously against the strategic points throughout the entire Rand. It is believed that the object of the strikers is to gain control of the region and set up soviets.

VIVID STORY OF 13 MAROONED YANKS

Row 750 Miles Among South Sea Isles.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—"In the annals of the South seas few stories hold more of adventure than does a late dispatch from American Consul General Wilber, at Wellington, N. Z., reporting the wreck of the American schooner Columbia River, from Auckland for Portland," says the consular bulletin today.

"All went well; survivors say, till just before dawn on the third day out, when the watch suddenly reported, 'Island close to, on port beam.'

"The startled captain leaped from his berth and ran to the wheel—but too late. In fact, so near was the beach that even before the anchor could be let go, the schooner piled up on the beach of Sunday island.

Even the Goats Are Tired.

"Shaken but safe, the officers and crew dropped over the bows and down on the beach—to wander for days over the barren rock. Empty of all life it was except for a few sad, enervated goats.

"A ship calls once a year at Sunday island, the captain knew; but he did not know the time of year. Suva, in the Fijis, 750 miles away, the nearest civilization!

"They talked it over—everybody from the captain to the cook. And for sheer daring and pluck the decision of six sailors to take an open lifeboat and strike out for Suva has few parallels among ocean adventure.

Little Craft Sets Out.

"Equipped with food, kerosene oil, distress signals, sea anchors, an oil stove, and an extra mast and sail, the little 22 foot craft set boldly out, with its crew of six—and the captain—leaving six men to wait on the barren land.

"Two sails were set, and the little company, dividing into two watches, worked at the oars when the wind failed. Each watch comprised three men, one man relieving one of the rowers every half hour. The wind was not always kind; once for two long days they lay becalmed. Rain added to their discomfort. When the sun shone, the heat was pitiless; at night the cold was intense.

"After fourteen dreary days the adventurers arrived. The British ship Chatam, the first encountered, was hailed. The crew were made comfortable and shown every hospitality by the Britishers, who sailed the next day and rescued the marooned men.

"I WROTE THE 4-PLY TREATY," HUGHES STATES

Says Nothing Was Put Over on Us.

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—Secretary of State Hughes wrote the four-power Pacific treaty.

The secretary himself volunteered this information to Democrats who have been seeking to befuddle the treaty issue by intimating that the treaty was written in England or Japan and brought over here and forced upon the American delegates to the arms conference.

In a letter to Senator Underwood, Democratic senate leader and member of the American delegation, Secretary Hughes today disposes of the authorship issue and characterizes intimations that the American delegates were induced to accept a cunningly contrived foreign scheme opposed to American interests as "a very poor and erroneous conception of the work in connection with the conference."

Settles Its Authorship.

"I understand," the secretary wrote, "that in the course of debate in the senate upon the four power treaty questions have been raised with respect to its authorship. It seems to be implied that in some way the American delegates have been imposed upon, or that they were induced to accept some plan cunningly contrived by others and opposed to our interests.

"Apart from the reflection upon the competency of the American delegates, such intimations betray a very poor and erroneous conception of the work in connection with the conference, no part of which—whether within or outside the conference meetings—was begun, prosecuted, or concluded in intrigue. Nothing could be farther from the fact."

"Nothing to Blush For."

"It is, of course, wholly inconsistent with the amenities of international intercourse that the informal and confidential suggestions and conversations incident to negotiations should be stated, but the senate may be assured that a full disclosure of everything said or done in the course of the negotiations would reveal nothing derogatory to the part taken by any of the American delegates or involve any consideration or acceptance of any position not entirely consistent with the traditional policies of this government.

"It should be remembered that the four power treaty dealt with a subject—the Anglo-Japanese alliance—which as an agreement between two powers competent to make and continue it, was not, and in the nature of things could not be, appropriately placed upon the agenda. Technically it was a matter outside the conference, although the conference furnished an excellent opportunity for conversations remedying it.

America Had Its Way.

"While I cannot, of course, undertake to state what was proposed or suggested in confidence by any of the delegates I think it entirely proper to say that the negotiations relating to the four power treaty were conducted within limitations defined by the American government.

"The views of this government as to the importance of the termination of the Anglo-Japanese alliance has been communicated long before the conference met and it had also been clearly stated that this government could enter into no alliance or make any commitment of the use of arms or which would impose any sort of obligation as to its decisions in future contingencies. It must deal with any exigency according to its constitutional methods.

"In preparation for the conference, the American delegates reviewed the matter thoroughly and the entire course of the negotiations in connection with the four power treaty was in accord with those principles, and, as I have said, within the limits which we defined.

He Who Runs May Read

"The treaty itself is very short and simple, and is perfectly clear. It requires no commentary. Its engagements are easily understood and no ingenuity in argument or hostile criticism can add to them or make them other or greater than its unequivocal language sets forth. There are no secret notes or understandings.

"In view of this, the question of authorship is unimportant. It was signed by four powers whose dele-

BODY WASHED UP BY LAKE BELIEVED SOCIAL WORKER

Kenosha, Wis., March 11. — A woman's body, washed ashore in Waukegan harbor this afternoon, is believed from the clothing to be that of Mrs. Marie A. Latey, prominent social worker, who disappeared Jan. 10 after kissing her son good-by and starting for the daily walk advised by her physician.

The action of the water had partly disrobed the body and battered the face and head beyond recognition. Identification is believed by the police established by the clothing, which tallies with that worn by Mrs. Latey.

Mr. Latey is not in the city. A nation wide search has been made for Mrs. Latey without a clew until today.

Dr. Norman Bridge Gives $300,000 More to Institute

Los Angeles, Cal., March 11. — A further donation of $300,000 by Dr. Norman Bridge, formerly of Chicago, to the California Institute of Technology, bringing his donations to that institution up to $550,000, was announced by the trustees of the school today. The new donation will be used in extensions to the recently completed Norman Bridge laboratory and in providing a technical library for the staff of the department of physics.

Stung by Broadway Bees, She Asks $25,000 Salve

New York, March 11.—[Special.]—Miss Beryl Collins, artist's model, has filed suit for $25,000 against the Vitagraph company, owners of the Central theater. Miss Collins says that she and a girl friend were standing in the lobby gazing at bees at work under a glass case. Some one upset the case and Miss Collins claims she was so badly stung that she was "unable to walk, lie down, talk, or see."

CITY ROUSED BY SCANLAN'S LABOR CHARGE

Attacks Rule of 'Ex-Convicts.'

Chicago's forces of law and order last night flung their full moral weight behind Justice Kickham Scanlan of the Criminal court in the performance of the huge task which he outlined yesterday in his charge to the special grand jury which is to investigate "miscarriages of justice" in the recent labor trials.

In his statement to the jury, characterized by those who heard and read it as the "most startling and fearless ever uttered in the Criminal Court building," Judge Scanlan reviewed the reign of labor despotism in the city, charging the unions with being in control of gunmen and ex-convicts and challenging the jurors that it remains to be seen whether this "species of yellow men" are able "to conquer the red blooded Americans of this community."

Community Behind Him.

Members of Chicago's bar and leaders in civic life characterized Justice Scanlan as a "man of undaunted character, marked ability, and fearlessness," and averred that the "community stands solidly behind him."

On the other hand, labor leaders, some of whom were named by the judge as "having attempted to destroy law and order," remained significantly silent.

Thomas Kearney, now under indictment for perjury, refused to talk.

Simon O'Donnell, Kearney's predecessor as president of the Chicago Building Trades council, suddenly discovered that he was a contractor and no longer in the labor game.

William Quesse, head of the janitors' union, was reported on his way to California. Others who had plenty to say at the time of the recent acquittals could not be found, and those who were found would not talk.

Friend to Real Unionism.

Judge Scanlan's remarks were considered the more significant because of the fact that before he went on the bench he was widely known as a lawyer for labor unions. He has been selected by several unions as their representative on arbitration commissions. He has always been considered, as he himself announced yesterday, a friend to real union labor.

Neither Attorney Benedict J. Short, of counsel for Thomas Walsh, nor Attorney Timothy J. Fell, a defense lawyer in the O'Donnell trial, would comment on that portion of Judge Scanlan's scathing arraignment which stated that "it is as certain as the sun is in the sky today that there are legal minds cognizant of that conspiracy and the workings of it."

Legal End of Conspiracies.

"Dig deep into the lawyer phase of this case," the judge charged the jurors. "Any lawyer that would take part in a conspiracy of that kind is not only a criminal in the ordinary sense of the term but he is a traitor to justice."

Judge Scanlan went back over the O'Donnell, Quesse, and Walsh cases, pointing out how justice had been flouted in the face of conclusive evidence and declaring that "'Skinny' Madden, the original prototype of that class of men, would turn in his grave were he to know the careers of the men that have followed him in those nefarious practices."

Warns Jurors of Work Ahead.

He warned the jurors, whom he termed "the advance guard in the fight to restore law and order to this great community," of the enormity of the task ahead of them and of the "almost superhuman efforts" required to convict "these men who have extorted money in every big building operation in Chicago in recent years."

He promised the jurors they would receive telephonic threats against their lives and those of members of their families, but cautioned them to disregard these because "the conspirators in this case are very brave men when they have an automatic revolver against the breast of some unarmed citizen," but show the "yellow in their makeup" when "justice takes them by the throat."

"A speech like that has never been heard in this building," was the decisive comment of State's Attorney Crowe. "Judge Scanlan's talk will do a world of good."

THE JUDGE TO THE JURY

Judge Scanlan's instructions were:

"Gentlemen of the grand jury, in the opinion of this court—and my experience in the Criminal court dates back thirty-six years—this is the most important grand jury that has ever been called together in the history of Cook county. You are the advance guard in the fight to restore law and order to this great community, and it may be that the question as to whether we will have law and order in this great community for years to come will depend upon the result of your work.

Relates Crowe's Charges.

"Several days ago the state's attorney of this county presented to me a petition in which he alleged that for some time past certain cases have been called for trial before various judges in the Criminal court, and that in the obtaining of jurors that attempts have been made to induce certain prospective jurors to qualify to serve; that efforts have been made to influence the mind and judgment of such prospective jurors; that at the time of the trial of the aforementioned cases, within the past three months, witnesses have presented themselves and have been sworn to tell the truth in their testimony; that it is alleged that they have knowingly and willfully sworn falsely to certain matters material to the issue; that such witnesses made statements to representatives of the state's attorney's office and to the police department and before the grand jury, and afterwards in court materially changed and altered their statements.

Effort to Influence Verdict.

"Mr. Crowe further shows that from the reports and statements now in his possession, he believes that there was an effort made to influence verdicts and cause witnesses to testify falsely in the trial of such cases.

"It may be necessary for me to refer to certain men who are commonly called labor agents and, therefore, I feel impelled to brush away at the outset the idea that labor or the rights of unionism are at issue in this matter.

"Unionism has, beyond the shadow of a doubt, been of great benefit to labor, and honest unionism is, in my judgment, absolutely essential to the welfare of labor.

"As the benefits of unionism became manifest, unionism became powerful and influential, and criminals saw the uses to which they could be put, and through terrorism seized hold of the important offices in a number of the unions.

"'Skinny' Madden, the original prototype of that class of men, would turn in his grave today were he to know the careers of the men that have followed him in those nefarious practices.

Mentions New President.

"I might demonstrate to you that many important unions in the city of Chicago are controlled by convicts and professional criminals. The man just elected the president of the Building Trades council of the city of Chicago, Mader, I sentenced to Joliet a few years ago for conspiracy to extort money from citizens of this community. He has but shortly become a member of this community again, and now he has seized hold, through a gang of men of violence, of the office of president of the Building Trades council.

"'Doc' Curran, whom I sent to the penitentiary for an offense of the same character as Mader, has, since his return from Joliet, been the business agent of his union; Mike Boyle, a convict, is the agent of his union; Tim Murphy, under conviction for robbery of the United States mails, is the business agent of his union, and a dominant factor today among the men of violence that are terrorizing the city of Chicago. In a robbery case before me the other day, it appeared that one of the defendants, William Marx, was the agent of his union; and so I might spend half an hour here showing you in detail how honest men in many of these unions have been terrorized, and how these gun men and these convicts have seized hold of the offices in these great unions.

Useless to Try Them.

"These crime conspirators have determined that they are going to demonstrate to this community that it is useless to even try them. That idea is the central idea in the events that have happened in this court in the last five weeks.

"These thugs have become drunk with power and they imagine they control the masses of this great community.

"Quesse and a number of other defendants were indicted for a conspiracy to extort by means of terrorism money from the people of Chicago. Let us stop for a moment to find out who this man Quesse is that has been an autocrat in a certain branch of this great conspiracy.

"In July, 1914, William Quesse was indicted for murder in the Criminal court of Cook county. He is able to have himself admitted to bond and then at liberty in the city of Chicago to pursue this criminal conspiracy that he was engaged in; and by some method he was able to postpone the trial of that case until December, 1916, when he was finally brought to trial, with the result that he was found not guilty, despite the fact that seventy-six witnesses testified to facts that proved as certain as day follows the night that Quesse and his co-conspirators were guilty, and yet, as a proof that there is conspiracy, the defendants offered no evidence at all.

"The jury, in the face of the mountain of evidence proving guilt, were only saved from returning a verdict of not guilty by the fact that there were three honest, red blooded Americans on that jury who refused to be terrorized or influenced, and who brought about a disagreement. How was that miscarriage of justice brought about? Dig down and find out how it was that nine men on that jury, in the face of the evidence and in the face of the record, voted not guilty. That is one of the matters that you are called upon to investigate.

"The next case that you are called upon to investigate is the case of the people versus Simon O'Donnell et al. In that case thirty or more witnesses, some of them prominent men in the city of Chicago, testified to facts that demonstrated beyond the shadow of any doubt that O'Donnell and his co-defendants, or at least most of them, were guilty, and again we see this conspiracy working out. In this case not one word of evidence was introduced in behalf of the major defendants, yet the jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

Bribery or Terrorism?

"Now it is for you men to inquire into the reasons that brought such a monstrous miscarriage of justice about in this community.

"Whether these things were brought about by a conspiracy to bribe the jurors, or whether it was brought about by a conspiracy to terrorize the jurors, the members of the conspiracy are guilty of an infraction of the criminal laws of this state, and if evidence is produced of that conspiracy they should be indicted and brought to trial for their crimes.

"The next matter for you to consider, and the case that brought matters to a head in this county, was the verdict in the case of the people against Thomas Walsh, charged with the murder of Adolph Georg Jr. and a waiter. The offense happened last December. In a public place in the loop, with over thirty persons present, in a small place, Adolph Georg Jr. and one of his waiters were wantonly and willfully shot down in cold blood. When that happened all of the persons in that saloon with the exception of two of the waiters and Adolph Georg Jr., dying on the floor, immediately fled from the place like thieves in the night.

Some Fled Through Terror.

"Some of the men fled in order that they might have the time to formulate a defense for Thomas Walsh, and you will find that some of the men fled from that place through terror at the thought that they might be called upon to testify as witnesses to the facts of this homicide.

"The officers of the law sought Walsh and the men that were with him, but were unable to find them; but the evidence will show you that on Sunday prominent lawyers of this city were hired by the defense, meanwhile justice and the police being helpless.

"The state's attorney charges that in that case witnesses had been terrorized to prevent them from testifying against the defendant, and that witnesses have been terrorized or improperly influenced to make them change the testimony, the sworn testimony that they gave before the grand jury, and statements that they made to the state's attorney; and the state's attorney charges that witnesses were produced on the part of the defendant whose testimony is perjury made out of whole cloth

Legal Minds Behind Conspiracy.

"This thing is as certain as the sun is in the sky there today: that there are legal minds cognizant of that conspiracy and the workings of it; that it is impossible to create a conspiracy of that kind that will take in three great cases of that character and that will carry on that conspiracy without their being some legal mind cognizant of the conspiracy and aiding in some measure in the consummation of the same.

"Dig deep into that phase of this case. Any lawyer that would take part in a conspiracy of that kind is not only a criminal in the ordinary sense of the term, but he is a traitor to justice because he is a sworn officer of the court and obliged under his oath of office to aid the court in the administration of justice.

"Now, let me caution you, members of this jury, not to be influenced or terrorized by any efforts to sway your judgment or your investigations in this case. Do not be alarmed if you get telephone messages telling you what will happen to you or to members of your family. That is an old game. Just be warned in time and do not regard it. No harm came to any members of the jury that tried 'Doc' Curran and others convicted here a few years ago.

"Yellow in Makeup."

"The criminals who compose the conspirators in this case are very brave when they have an automatic revolver against the breast of some unarmed citizen, but when justice takes them by the throat they show the yellow in their makeup. Cardinelli, the great murderer of this town, was the most arrant coward that was ever tried in the Criminal court of Cook county and he had to be carried to the gallows in a chair. And Eugene Geary, the great gunman, cried and bellowed like a baby the day before the date set for his hanging.

"These men have, by their reign of terror, created in our midst a species of yellow men, but it remains to be seen whether they are able to conquer the red blooded Americans of this community."

Among the comments were these:

Attorney Colin C. H. Fyffe—Every law abiding citizen and every lawyer is behind Judge Scanlan in this fight. They hope he goes to the bottom of any irregularities that may exist.

Attorney Clyde L. Day, assistant to State's Attorney General Brundage—Judge Scanlan's charges reflect a condition that has no doubt existed for some time. It is high time special attention is being paid to this situation. I don't know of a more effective way of getting the public to understand the danger in such evident corruption than to have Judge Scanlan launch this investigation.

Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director Chicago crime commission—Judge Scanlan's comments in the matter indicate the investigation will be thorough if he has his way. It is immensely encouraging to know we have on the bench a man of such undaunted character, marked ability, and fearlessness. A dozen jurists like him in the Criminal Court building would solve our problems very quickly.

Attorney Benjamin P. Epstein—Trials by jury should be strictly on the square, whether the defendants are labor leaders or millionaires. If there were irregularities about any of these cases under investigation, we should know it, for the protection of our courts. Judge Scanlan's inquiry is a good thing. His charges are remarkable, and I know some of the attorneys in these cases could not have been responsible for such irregularities. I hope the probe upturns the full truth and the guilty are punished.

Attorney Andrew R. Sheriff—It is extremely rare for a judge to exhibit the courage Judge Scanlan has shown. The community is solidly behind him. If his example is followed by other judges, we will soon get at the bottom of the cause of crime in Chicago. There has been too much of this compromising and dodging of issues in our courts for some time.

Attorney Charles E. Erbstein—If there was anything crooked about any of those cases, I am heartily in sympathy with the remarks of Judge Scanlan. As far as the O'Donnell case is concerned—it is the only case with which I was connected and the only one I know anything about—I am sure there was nothing wrong. I do not think Judge Scanlan's suggestion that some of the lawyers were to blame will be substantiated as far as the O'Donnell case is concerned. All of us welcome the most thorough investigation.

Attorneys Join Citizens in Praising Judge Scanlan

Members of the Chicago bar and leaders in public service organizations were loud in their praise last night of what they termed the "courage and daring" Chief Justice Kickham Scanlan of the Criminal court displayed in his instructions to the special grand jury impaneled to investigate alleged acts of conspiracy in connection with recent labor trials.

The "flatfootedness" of Judge Scanlan's attitude toward certain malign influences tending, it is claimed, to sway juries in their verdicts was the subject of much comment in legal circles. State's Attorney Crowe's declaration that "a speech like that has never before been heard in this building" was typical of scores of expressions heard.

MEMBERS OF GRAND JURY IMPANELED TO SIFT LABOR TRIALS

The personnel of the special grand jury impaneled by Judge Scanlan to investigate recent labor trials is as follows:

John J. Phelan, 1235 Glenlake avenue, foreman.

Le Roy Medarie, engineer, Chicago Heights.
Ralph Neufeld, real estate, 5015 Grand boulevard.
Otis H. Rockhold, life insurance, 933 Ainslie street.
Clarence S. Rouzer, clerk, Oak Park.
George Schoreck, foreman, 544 West Garfield boulevard.
Gustav Spletter, cashier, 6518 Bosworth avenue.
Albert Stern, insurance agent, 6318 Kenwood avenue.
Bertram R. Stillwell, clerk, 1241 Cornelia avenue.
Fred G. Suhling, agent, 4833 Monticello avenue.
Arthur Thompson, manufacturer, 821 East 49th street.
Earl Tunison, machinist, 7542 Blackstone avenue.
R. G. Walker, secretary, 7238 South Morgan street.
Walter M. Worthington, salesman, 4512 North Central Park avenue.

DEATH REVEALS DUAL LIFE OF MINING EXPERT

One Wife Here and One in California.

BY EDWARD DOHERTY.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 11.—[Special.]—When Edward J. Gilbert, mining expert, died in his home at 1236 Crown Hill avenue last night, his widow asked the doctor for his advice.

"I learned four months ago," she said, "that my husband has another wife and two children in Chicago. What shall I do? Shall I notify them?"

Gilbert disappeared from his home in Chicago nineteen years ago. He went Mexico and there in 1905 he married again. And for seventeen years he kept his secret from his second wife.

Chicago Wife Calls Up.

Four months ago Mrs. Claire Gilbert of 321 East 48th street, Chicago, called up the Pleasant apartments here, owned by Gilbert and his second wife, and asked for her husband. She had just learned his address.

This was the first intimation the Los Angeles wife had received of the existence of the Chicago one. She kept her secret at the time, but when her "husband" was on his deathbed she told her story to the doctor and asked him what she should do about the Chicago wife.

"Notify her," said the doctor. "Then you will have nothing to worry about."

Tonight Mrs. Belle Gilbert, the second wife, a middle aged woman, beautiful, gray haired, wept because she had sent the telegram.

"Now they'll slander my poor dear," she cried. "And he's dead and can make no answer.

"I took the doctor's advice, so that the children might come to see their father's body, if they wished. But I know that if he were here now and could speak he would tell me I did wrong.

"He told me about it only after the woman called up.

"'Why did you keep this to yourself all these years?' I asked him. And he said that it was dead and forgotten and there was no use digging it up again."

WIFE'S REQUEST BARES STORY.

Mrs. Claire Gilbert of 321 East 48th street could not be found at her home last night. She had previously called up THE TRIBUNE to tell of the receipt of the message that notified her of the death of her husband.

"I had heard nothing of him for nineteen years," she said.

She requested THE TRIBUNE to wire Los Angeles for further information. It was in compliance with her request that the story of Gilbert's matrimonial tangle was learned.

HARDING SAILS AND GOLFS WAY ALONG FLORIDA

New Smyrna, Fla., March 11.—[By the Associated Press.]—President and Mrs. Harding, with their vacation guests, left tonight on the houseboat of E. B. McLean, Washington publisher, on their cruise down the Florida east coast. Just how far the cruise will extend was uncertain, apparently depending upon the weather and the demands of official business.

During the day the party stopped at Ormond for a round of golf and then came here by automobile, where nine more holes were played. Those playing with the President have been Speaker Gillett, Undersecretary of State Fletcher, Mr. McLean, and Secretary George B. Christian Jr.

It is now three days since the President left Washington and the beneficial effects of the open air and the reduced pressure of official duties are already evident in his tanned skin and physical vigor.

West Madison Street Gets All Illaminated

West Madison street from Canal to Morgan appeared last night at 5 o'clock for the first time in its new dress of overhead lighting. Edwin Strauss, business manager of the Mid-City Commercial association, spoke and a band concert was given at the opening.

FIUME USED BY EUROPE TO STIR ANTI-U. S. TALK

Bankers Strive to Balk American Trade.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, March 11.—Rome fears no clash between Serbia and Italy over the latest Fiume incident. The Quirinal continues its policy of deploring the Italian nationalist violence which overthrew President Zanella and changed the autonomous city into an area vociferously demanding an Italian protectorate or annexation to Italy, but popularly there can be no mistaking the widespread joy throughout Italy over the turn of events.

The responsibility for maintaining order in Fiume rests on Italy under the Rapallo treaty, which created Fiume a free state, and upon this interpretation the Italians base their explanation of the presence of Italian police and soldiers in the disputed territory.

Move by Serbs Might Cause War.

It is under the same provision that the Italians declare any move on the part of Jugo-Slavia to move armed forces in or near Fiume would be considered immediately as a casus belli. The Italians also deprecate the possibility of interference by the other powers on the ground that the Rapallo treaty is not international, affecting only the sole signatories, Serbia and Italy.

Italy considered the presence of American warships in the Adriatic during the Versailles conference as a menace, and Americans in Italy never were able to ascertain the reason for them. Mr. Wilson's participation in the Fiume muddle, together with the prolonged stationing of American warships in the Adriatic, is greatly responsible for the widespread Italian feeling that the United States was interested in seeing Fiume go to Jugoslavia. It is difficult to make the Italians understand that the American people are not interested in the ultimate disposition of Fiume other than the human desire for smoothing out a difference threatening the world's peace.

Press Anti-American Campaign

But the germ of the other idea remains and the expert propagandist of the big European interests competing with American business abroad are ever ready to use it as an excuse for further anti-American propaganda. A recent instance of this was last week's triple blast against the activities of the Standard Oil company in stories introduced by dispatches from Holland proclaiming the wide success of the press campaign in Czecho-Slovakia by which the Standard Oil company was prevented from operating its oil propertits in that country.

This was followed two days later by dispatches appearing in all the Italian papers to the effect that American capitalists had hogged tremendous concessions in Anatolia which was supposed to constitute the Italian sphere of influence. The third move in the anti-American campaign found ready support in one so called American newspaper in Paris which attributed the Fiume overthrow to the nefarious machinations of the Standard Oil company.

Welcomed in Central Europe.

No matter who governs Fiume, the Standard Oil company will be welcome at that port. The American oil company has been operating only small leases in Fiume.

The American oil company is being courted by numerous central European countries who desire a change from the past concession grabbing with political strings attached and who prefer plain American business dealing without political jokers.

The opposition to the American Standard Oil company does not exist so much in European oil fields and shipping areas as it does in financial circles in London and Rotterdam, where the manipulators of the Royal Dutch and Shell companies are considerably alarmed over the progress being made by its American competitor.

All Blame American Capital.

The European competitors of American capital lose no opportunity through their agents to place the blame for all the European troubles upon the shoulders of American capital. The pitiful aspect of the situation is that some American newspapers who employ English and Dutch ocrrespondents ignorantly lend themselves to the dissemination of misinformation which at its source and in its inception is calculated to drive American capital out of Europe and leave the field to European exploiters.

There is no complaint in all Italy about the Standard Oil company. Italy wants the Standard Oil company. Italy wants the American International Harvester company, the National Cash Register company, the Singer Sewing Machine company, the Underwood Typewriter company, Armour's, Swift's, and Wilson's—it wants our great engineering and construction companies to make Italy a base for their operations.

The Standard Oil company's dealings with the defunct government of Fiume were in no way responsible for the Italian coup d'état, according to the best information obtainable in Rome. The fascisti took Fiume because a great mass of the 40,000,000 Italian people want Fiume to be an Italian port. The present indications are that the disputed city will remain under Italian domination, with the Italian government insisting that it has nothing to do with the matter.

COUNTY SCHOOLS TO PLANT "HERO" TREES ARBOR DAY

Plans for the observance of Arbor day, early in April, by pupils in the Cook county schools were announced yesterday by Supt. Edward J. Tobin. Exercises will be held at every school and a tree donated by the Illinois State Nurserymen's association and dedicated to the soldier heroes of the school district, will be planted under the supervision of the teachers and the Achievement club, composed of the pupils in the school.

Cards listing twenty-six varieties of shade trees and six of fruit trees have been prepared and will be handed to each pupil in the county. The children will take the cards to their homes and make a report of the number of each kind of tree listed growing on their respective farms.

The result, according to Supt. Tobin, should show approximately the number of trees growing in the county.

84 NEXT OF KIN WILL SHARE THIS SOLDIER'S POLICY

Washington, D. C., March 11.—In investigating the record of B. F. Taylor of Crystal Springs, Miss., a soldier who died at Camp Beauregard in 1918, the veterans' bureau believes it has come across something unique.

Taylor named as the beneficiary of his insurance policy his father, who later died, leaving the insurance to next of kin. The veterans' bureau requested from the family the names of those relatives falling in the "permitted class" and in reply received a list five feet long, containing the names and addresses of nine brothers, six sisters, six uncles, six aunts, twenty-three nephews, nineteen nieces, six brothers-in-law, eight sisters-in-law and a stepmother.

From Taylor's $5,000 policy the stepmother and fifteen brothers and sisters will receive monthly installments.

This Seems Too Good to Be True, but It May Be So

Quebec, March 11.—Asserting that agents of the United States are in Canada studying the Quebec system of liquor distribution under police supervision, L. A. Taschereau, prime minister of the province, today predicted in a house debate that "the example of Quebec will be followed, not only throughout Canada, but also in the United States." Under the Quebec system, whisky and other spirituous liquors are sold directly to the individual from bonded warehouses. The liquor must not be drunk on the premises or in public. Beer of moderate alcoholic content is sold over the public bars, in licensed saloons and hotels.

REFUSES SCHOOL BOARD PLEA FOR VICE CLUBS TIP

St. Louis, Mo., March 11.—Victor J. Miller, president of the board of police commissioners today refused to submit to the board of education any information he had on which he based his charge that vice clubs existed among boys and girls of Soldan High school, according to announcement of J. C. Tobin, president of the school board. Mr. Miller, however, announced that he would submit all data he had to a "representative body of parents."

A mass meeting was called for tomorrow afternoon at which the parents of the students of the high school will discuss action to compel Mr. Miller to divulge his information.

Gov. A. M. Hyde and Mr. Miller were invited to the mass meeting, but Mr. Miller declined to appear.

ITALIANS PELT PRINCESS MARY WITH FLOWERS

FLORENCE, Italy, March 11.—Princess Mary and Viscount Lascelles, continuing their honeymoon tour, arrived in Florence late this afternoon from Paris.

All the way from the station, where they were met by the British and American consuls and large crowds, their automobile was pelted with flowers. Cheering villagers welcomed them at the Villa Medici, where the couple will stay while in Florence.

Their entrance here was over a veritable carpet of flowers, while above them were arched masses of almond blossoms. There were flowers in every room of the villa.

FORD RUNS 57 MILES ON GALLON OF GASOLINE.

A new automatic Vaporizer and Decarbonizer, which in actual test has increased the power and mileage of Fords from 25 to 50 per cent and at the same time removed every particle of carbon from the cylinders, is the proud achievement of John A. Stransky, 286 South Main street, Pukwana, South Dakota. A remarkable feature of this simple and inexpensive device is that its action is governed entirely by the motor. It is slipped between the carburetor and intake manifold and can be installed by any one in five minutes without drilling or tapping. With it attached, Ford cars have made from 40 to 57 miles on one gallon of gasoline. Mr. Stransky wants to place a few of these devices on cars in this territory and has a very liberal offer to make to any one who is able to handle the business which is sure to be created wherever this marvelous little device is demonstrated. If you want to try one entirely at his risk send him your name and address today.—Adv.

ATOMIC THEORY IS BLASTED BY CHEMISTS HERE

Metal Transmutation Is Accomplished.

Transmutation of metals sought throughout the ages, has finally been accomplished, it was announced in a paper read yesterday at a meeting of the middle western sections of the American Chemical society at Northwestern university.

Tungsten, which is used in the filaments of electric light bulbs, has been definitely and permanently changed into another element, helium, through treatment in temperatures of between 50,000 and 60,000 degrees, it was declared in a report on experiments conducted by Dr. Gerald L. Wendt and C. E. Iron, working at the University of Chicago.

Blasts Atomic Theory.

"It means that the alchemists, who tried to turn the baser metals into gold, were right on one point—that the nature of metals could be changed," said Dr. Paul N. Leach of the Chicago section of the Chemical society, in commenting upon the paper. "But, of course, it has nothing to do with the asserting of scalawags that the baser metals can be transmuted into synthetic gold.

"It does, however, actually blast the theory that the atoms of elements, supposed to be absolutely indestructable, cannot be broken up by men. It opens a vast new field to science and may result in many far-reaching and important scientific developments."

First Result by Man.

Up until 1895 it was believed that no decomposition of elements was possible. At that time, however, it was discovered that radium, which is one of the about ninety known elements, naturally decomposes into lead. Nature, however, performs that change, and until Dr. Wendt and Mr. Irion completed their experiments man had never been able to produce a similar result.

The heat developed to break down the tungsten atoms and change them into helium is the greatest ever known—hotter than the sun or than the hottest star known to astronomers. The heat of molten steel is about 2,000 degrees. The temperature of the sun is about 9,000 degrees, and of some of the hottest stars is about 30,000 degrees.

But these scientists have, by means of "artificial lightning," such as Dr. Charles P. Steinmetz recently produced, have developed the hottest known spot in the universe.

Astronomers have long known that while, in general, the materials which compose the sun and stars are the same as those known on earth, the list of substances and chemical elements becomes shorter and shorter when the hotter stars are examined.

On the brilliant white or blueish stars, which are masses of gas at about 30,000 degrees, only the simplest elements are present. They seem to consist entirely of the gases hydrogen and helium. The heavier metals, such as iron, are not present.

Reproduce Star Conditions.

To determine whether this was due to decomposition by the great heat, Wendt and Irion reproduced conditions such as are on the stars and actually succeeded in reaching a temperature twice as high as that of the hottest star, and found that ordinary metals are decomposed into the simple gases, particularly helium.

The method used was the same as that used in producing artificial lightning, recently announced by Dr. Steinmetz of Schenectady, and was originated by Dr. J. A. Anderson of the Mount Wilson solar observatory at Pasadena, Cal.

It consists in charging a large electrical condenser to 100,000 volts and discharging this large quantity of electricity at high speed through an extremely fine metallic wire. The wire explodes with a deafening report, as if struck by lightning, which, in a minor way, it is.

The flash is about 200 times as bright as direct sunlight, but it lasts less than a hundred thousandth of a second. The pressure developed is about 1,000 pounds per square inch and the temperature is momentarily over 50,000 degrees Fahrenheit. Under such conditions the atoms which compose the wire decompose into simpler ones and the result is the change of metallic tungsten into gaseous helium.

One of the first laws of chemistry has been that the so-called elements are permanent and unchangeable.

GOELET BACK IN U. S. ALONE; CUTS OFF WAR HONORS

New York, March 11.—[Special.]—Robert W. Goelet, New York millionaire real estate operator, banker, and sportsman, who at the time of his marriage in January, 1921, to Mlle. Marie Guestier, daughter of a famous wine merchant, was considered one of the wealthiest bachelors in the United States, returned to this country today on the liner France. He came all alone, and when he was asked why Mrs. Goelet was not with him, replied, "She preferred to remain in Paris."

After a few moments' chat Mr. Goelet borrowed a penknife from some one in the staterooom and proceeded to cut out from his lapel the ribbons of the Legion of Honor and the Croix de Guerre, decorations he won while serving in France as a captain in the United States army during the world war. When he was asked why he did this he answered: "O, they're all right over there," waving his hand in the general direction of France, "but what's the use of advertising this kind of thing over here? No, I'd rather take them off."

DARING BRITON PRIES SECRETS OF RED RUSSIA

Agents of Infamous Cheka Are Outwitted.

SIR PAUL DUKES DISGUISED AS A RUSSIAN RED AND AS HIMSELF

Famous Secret Service Agent Reveals Methods by Which He Worked in Sovietland

to grave danger by asking them to shelter me.

A double task faced me as intelligence officer—first, to procure information, and, second, to communicate that information abroad. In three days I formed a connection through an English business man with the remnants of Capt. Crombie's shattered organization. Crombie's task had been to unearth and combat German machinations, and I hoped to use any of his assistants I could find for Russian intelligence.

Before I could devote much attention to this, however, I had to secure my own position by finding habitations that would be more or less immune from searches by the ubiquitous agents of the infamous cheka (extraordinary commission for suppressing counter-revolution), the secret police organization of the soviet government. It was with the servants of some Russian friends of mine who had left the country that I first put up. I welcomed the hospitality of simple folk of this kind more than that of any others.

On the whole, I found them absolutely reliable, even in times of danger. Their hostility to the supposedly proletarian Red rulers was intense, and I found many friends among this class of people. The bolsheviki know this, though they, of course, only learned of it too late, and it has been one of the causes of greatest annoyance to them.

An Englishman's Plight.

The Englishman to whom I have referred was hiding from the bolsheviki, who were searching all Petrograd for him. It was quite impossible for him to remain in the country, and after three or four days of exciting adventure, during which we contrived to meet in secluded places, he fled across the frontier into Finland disguised in the clothing of his country coachman.

These few days, however, sufficed to get me on my feet, and the individuals he put me in touch with, who were all Russians, served to form an organization which eventually had its ramifications in the general military and naval staffs and at the Smolny institute, the political headquarters of the Communist party. Personally I was known only to three individuals in this organization, while these, upon my approval, enlisted the services of others whom they judged reliable. As a rule, however, big organizations were a mistake; it was safer and more efficient to work with groups of not more than ten or a dozen persons.

The same English gentleman also put me in touch with an agent of the czar's personal secret detective service who had had connections with the English during the previous summer. This individual was a pompous and self-opinionated little man, of uncleanly habits and partially Hebrew origin, whom we nicknamed the "policeman." He had an extraordinarily wide circle of acquaintances—in fact, he appeared to know every one. Moreover, his experience of czarist police methods gave him peculiar understanding of the police system of the bolsheviki, who were imitating czarism in this as in many other branches of their administration. Uncongenial though he was as a companion, the "policeman" was very useful for the purpose of procuring me a night shelter now and again at the houses of his acquaintances.

"Policeman" Is Useful.

I never paid attention to his political views, nor believed his reports, but for practical purposes—liaison with the cheka, procuring of couriers, and effecting connections which extended even to the factories—he was of service to me. From the outset I took especial care that these two quite distinct organizations should be totally unaware of each other's existence. This was not difficult to arrange, for they consisted of entirely different types of people and their work never overlapped.

When in Finland I had met an agent of the American secret service who had recently had to leave Russia and who begged me, if I should find it possible, to take over the charge of the organization that had been working for him. Eventually I succeeded in finding the chief of this group, which was small but efficient, with connections in some of the regiments in or near Petrograd and two of the biggest factories. This group also was distinct from the former two and none of them had any knowledge of the others' existence.

It was no light matter so to camouflage my movements as to conceal them not only from the bolshevist authorities but also from the inquisitive among my own agents. In moving about the city I had always to take precautions to assure myself I was not being tracked. I soon contracted the habit of frequently looking round in the street and occasionally of turning back a hundred yards and noting if any one stopped to look into a shop window or at a notice on the wall in order to let me pass before following me again.

On Lookout for Spies.

Also, upon emerging from a house I always walked first in the opposite direction from the one I wished to take, while I would invariably approach a house from the opposite side of the street in order to see if it were being watched. In this way I strove to avoid being followed either by cheka spies or any of my own people who might be curious to know my haunts—for in Red Russia it is unwise to trust even one's closest friends too implicitly. I was not often followed, for my appearance was my best security, but there were occasions when I knew distinctly that my movements were being observed. This was a common occurrence in Russia, where all intellectuals are suspects.

Oddly enough the individuals I discovered tracking me were mostly women, sometimes gaudily dressed, for the bolsheviki have copied the czarist trick of employing prostitutes for this purpose. I evaded them either by the simple expedient of entering some public building, for instance a church or a railway station, concealing myself near the door till I saw them enter, and then slipping out, or by boarding a street car, pushing through the crowded passengers, dismounting at the next stop to board a car in another direction, and repeating this process several times, or else by doing similarly with any available cabs.

Seven Sources of Information.

I have described above how I came to have three distinct organizations working under me, independent of each other and even unaware of each other's existence. In course of time, when I was working in Moscow and other cities as well, this number increased. At one period I had no fewer than seven independent organized sources of information working simultaneously, each with ramifications in the army and navy, in every soviet department, and even in high government circles. The difficulties of keeping them entirely separate were sometimes considerable, but the advantages were very great.

Under this system, if one group were discovered it would not affect the other which would continue to function; but the chief advantages lay in the fact that by having independent organizations one could check the information received. Thus, I never communicated any important item of information abroad until I had checked it through more than one channel. In each organization only one or two individuals knew me personally: the others merely knew that there did exist somewhere in the capital a "somebody" who was very important and who controlled the intelligence service of the allies.

Sending Out Communications.

But what about communications with the outside world? It was one thing to get the information, but it was quite another thing to get it out of the country. This was the most difficult task that faced me. For the first few weeks I seized any chance opportunity that offered itself to get a ciphered note or a letter written in invisible ink carried secretly across the frontier by some fleeing allied or Russian citizen, or perchance a Finnish smuggler.

The London office had taught me the secrets of various invisible inks and instructed me in certain codes. Using these, I wrote up my reports in minute figures and handwriting on tracing paper and became so expert that a report of five or six thousand words (or twice the length of this article) could be wrapped up and carried without discomfort under the sole in one's boot.

In course of time, however, this method of communication became inadequate. By it I could only send and not receive communications. Besides, the amount of material that I gathered became so voluminous that it could no longer be concealed inside one's boots. Transcription was impossible, as my entire time was taken up with obtaining for myself the necessities of life, with meeting my agents at various secret rendezvous, with studying the decrees and literature published by the Communists, with attending their public meetings, and so on.

Joins Lenin's Army.

I was soon driven, moreover, to find some actual occupation which would put me on a perfectly legal status, instead of living the life of a fugitive on false passports, as I did at first, and after one or two minor jobs I ended up by becoming a soldier in the Red army.

Many of the documents I procured, purchased or stolen from the general staff, admiralty, or the Kremlin, were of such import that they had to be sent abroad in the original, and thus I was compelled to find some way of conveying them across the frontier as soon as possible after they fell into my possession. For this purpose I built up a special secret courier service, operated by a few daring and devoted men, who risked their lives repeatedly, dashing through the fronts to Finland or Esthonia. There they delivered my communications to the British authorities and received from them the instructions and questions that were cabled to me from London.

These couriers frequently had to fight their way through the lines, if they did not succeed in bribing their way through. One of them, a Russian sublieutenant and one of the finest fellows I have ever known—a giant of over 6 feet, prize boxer, expert marksman, and sportsman in every sense—made this dangerous trip no less than seventeen times, often encountering extraordinary adventures. He also accompanied me when I ultimately escaped from soviet Russia by deserting from the Red army. Of the others, one or two arrived on the other side, but never returned, while two never arrived, and I presume were caught and shot.

Takes Every Precaution.

Of course, before making up a package of communications for dispatch, I took precautions to see that nothing was left in the documents which, in the event of their discovery, could possibly lead to the detection of any of my assistants.

As searches were frequently made by bolshevist police agents in the private houses in the capitals, it would have been suicidal to keep my voluminous reports about me as a regular habit.

But I discovered an effective hiding place for them which I think I may now safely disclose. Having barely escaped capture on one occasion during a sudden search in a friend's house, I was obliged for four nights to take refuge in an old, neglected cemetery some distance out of the city. Here I hid in an old stone tomb, and it struck me so forcibly by its seclusion and suitability as a place of concealment that from that time onward I always kept my papers there until the day a courier was dispatched. My summaries of the political and general situation I wrote at night as usual on tracing paper, always in readiness to destroy or effectively conceal them at a moment's notice should a sudden raid on the house be made.

How Work Was Financed.

I financed my work with money I took with me from Finland, with loans raised from individuals in Russia who shall be nameless, and with funds brought in from outside by my couriers. The chief expenses went to procuring food for the families of my assistants. The regular cost of the service was not great, for several of my agents worked for me without any remuneration. The courier service, however, was costly, for heavy bribes had often to be given to Red officials, who were always open to this kind of persuasion.

When the bolsheviki learned that I had successfully escaped from Red Russia they were enraged beyond measure. There is said to be a price on my head to this day. They have charged me now with being a monarchist, now a member of the Social-Revolutionary party (equal crimes in their sight, for the Social-Revolutionaries are their erstwhile rivals). The fact is, however, that I belong to no party and the success of my mission and the fact that I passed undiscovered I attribute simply to my living the life of the ordinary common citizen, whose condition I was chiefly interested to observe.

"BUNK" SAID TO DESCRIBE ROAD ALIBI OF SMALL

Dodge at Waukegan Trial Exposed at Capital.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Springfield, Ill., March 11.—[Special.]—Last Monday at Waukegan State's Attorney C. F. Mortimer used the word "bunk" in discussing Gov. Len Small's affidavit that the state's road program requires all his time for the next few weeks.

The expression was not published in THE TRIBUNE in its account of the court proceedings. It was thought the word might have been used in the heat of argument without consideration.

But four days of the closest inquiry the state administration will permit into its present activities and its future plans, indicates that the shot did no go wide of the mark. Every man here in touch with the situation and willing to discuss it with any neutrality, says the governor's affidavit was properly described in that one bit of plain, unmistakable slang.

Violates Its Sacred Principles.

This opinion is based on two equally important facts. The first is that the state administration cannot carry out the program the affidavit outlined without deserting the "principles" it has been proclaiming so loudly for more than a year.

The second is that there is no intention of hurrying up the road building program; that politics is deliberately delaying it for its own purposes, and that the governor is giving more time to the legislative campaign than to the highway problem.

In the twenty-nine page affidavit presented to Judge Edwards as a basis for his plea for a postponement of his trial, Gov. Small swore that in addition to the 572 miles of road to be built under 1921 contracts, it was his intention to make contracts for 735 miles of road under the new contracts and that "he will construct and build during 1922, 1,000 miles of hard surfaced roads in Illinois."

Voters Threatened.

Taking up first the second reason given above for their position, those who describe this statement as "bunk" recite that as recently as March 2, in his speech at Pana, opening his campaign for control of the legislature, Gov. Small in effect announced there will be no important letting of road contracts until after the primaries of April 11. In that speech he said:

"I promise you that on the night of election, when the returns are flashed over the wires and from the counties in your districts I shall look at the votes cast and I will know if you have voted for men who will stand with your governor, that you approve my program, and that you want roads and honest, economical government.

"If, having thus expressed yourselves in favor of these things, you have sent to the legislature men who stand up for these principles and stand with the governor, I will see to it that roads are built in your county and your district."

Copies of this address were scattered broadcast by the governor's publicity bureau. Everywhere it has been taken as a warning that no district or county will get roads unless it elects legislators who have taken a blanket pledge to oppose any attempt to impeach Small.

The impression that this was equivalent to an announcement that no big letting would occur until after the primaries has been verified in more ways than one. In the first place, this has been admitted sub rosa by Director Cornelius R. Miller, director of public works and buildings, and by several employés of his department, particularly those in the highways division.

They Believed Him—at First.

As soon as the newspapers published Gov. Small's Waukegan declaration that he intended to let contracts for 735 miles of road—with the implication that it was to be done in the next few weeks—there was a rush of representatives of builders and material men to the state house. For two or three days they made things hum in order to "get in early." But now they have subsided.

Director Miller told one of them point blank there was no letting under consideration for paving work and that the highways division would give out no new contracts except for heavy grading. Some of his subordinates made similar statements.

When the discussion has reached this point it usually swings to the other important phase of the situation—that Gov. Small is blocked from going ahead with new construction by the predicament into which he has worked himself.

While there has been no official announcement of it, arrangements have been made for the purchase of 300,000 barrels of cement in addition to the 600,000 for which a contract was awarded the Marquette company last week. This is to come from the Continental company, which was one of the bidders on Feb. 28, in spite of the fact that in his Waukegan affidavit Gov. Small swore that all bids except that of the Marquette company had been rejected. It is now explained that all were rejected except the bid of the Continental, with which negotiations were continued in an effort to bring it down to $1.30 a barrel.

But this gives a total supply of only 900,000 barrels in addition to whatever amount may be in storage from last year. And, even if the state had 1,000,000 left over, the total of 1,900,000 barrels would not be sufficient to complete the work called for by the existing contracts of 1921. It requires 3,305 barrels of cement for a mile of pavement "slab" alone without any allowance for culverts or similar work.

May Have to Advertise.

And state employés, as well as contractors and material men, say that the governor has exhausted the supply of cement procurable on his own terms. It is reported that the highway division may once more try advertising for bids, but little belief is expressed that they will succeed.

The price agreed to by the Marquette and the Continental, it is said, was low because of the winter surplus in their bins. The Marquette made a stipulation that 285,000 of its 600,000 barrels must be taken during March and April, and it is probable the Continental imposed a similar condition. During the later "open" months the cement companies can sell all their product without price cutting.

The element of the advance of the building season is of further great importance in the governor's problem. Within a few months the railroads will be suffering from the annual car shortage and it will be almost impossible to get cars for road material. The material men say that sand and gravel at least should have started rolling in Illinois last January, and it hasn't yet.

From the standpoint of the late start, also, it is said, that Gov. Small has allowed so much time to elapse that even if he were able to get cement for the work he would not be able to let new contracts for any substantial mileage and have it completed this year.

If the highway division were determined to go ahead as fast as possible probably a month would elapse before contracts could be let. Then, practical men of exerience say, it would require the average contractor sixty days to get his men, machinery, and tools "on the job" and get started. This, it is said, would be so expensive a delay that not much mileage could be expected this year.

And if there is no 1922 program to be adopted until after the primaries, when it is known what districts and counties are to be "rewarded," it is said that construction would not be well under way until some time in August, with only a fraction of the open season remaining.

Chance for an Even Bet.

If there were a "bookie" on deck here at Springfield he probably would be offering even money that Gov. Small will not build more than 600 miles of hard road this year, and that this mileage will consist almost entirely of road covered by 1921 contracts.

And this is in spite of the fact that the highways division has plans and specifications — everything ready for the taking of bids—for 400 miles of state bond issue road and has had them ready for several months.

SIKHS' REVOLT SPREADS AS ALL INDIA SIZZLES

British Prepare to Use Stern Measures.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DELHI, March 10, via London, March 11.—Disturbances among the Sikhs of the Punjab, which until recently were confined to the towns, are spreading throughout the countryside according to reports brought by Sikh troopers returning from leave. The movement is causing the government, already beset by many other rebellious elements, no little anxiety and it is believed that the situation must be met soon with firmness.

The disturbances center on four organizations; the Sikh league, which is purely political; the Siromani Parbhandak Gurdwara, which seeks to regain the Sikh shrines, which are in the hands of the Hindus and whose president is Kharak Singh, a member of Mahatma Gandhi's revolutionary committee; the Akali Dahl, or shield of God, which is a volunteer organization taking orders from a religious group, and the Akali Fauj, "army of God," whose aspiration is to reestablish the Punjab, which was annexed by the British in 1849.

Armed with Odd Weapons.

Recently the members of Dahl, which until now has been utilized in forcibly taking shrines from the Hindus, have been compelled to enroll in the Fauj or political fighting force. The present membership of the Fauj is somewhat less than 10,000, but more will be recruited. They are armed with the mirpat, a hammer which attains the dignity of a sword; the lahti, or bamboo cudgel, and some sporting rifles, shotguns and revolvers.

They have been recently making villagers contribute to the Sikh war chest.

Regret Resignation of Montagu.

The resignation of E. S. Montagu, secretary of state for India, has been received with general regret by the Indians, who considered him as India's best friend. The extremists believe that if a reactionary Indian secretary is appointed they may further their aims for general disturbances and revolt.

British garrisons throughout India were on the alert today for any disturbances caused by the arrest of Gandhi for sedition.

The followers of the noncoöperationist leader seemed, however, to be respecting his orders to remain peaceful.

Flays Lloyd George.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, March 11.—E. S. Montagu, former secretary of state for India, spoke before his constituents at Cambridge this afternoon to justify his alleged violation of the principle of collective cabinet responsibility in publishing India's demands in behalf of Turkey without the advice or consent of his colleagues. He declared the publication of the dispatch was not the real cause of his resignation, but that Prime Minister Lloyd George, in order to appease the "die hards" who have been demanding the elimination of the Liberal members from the cabinet, "offered up my head on the charger."

Mr. Montagu blamed Foreign Minister Curzon, who, he said, was studiously silent when he told him of his publication of the note, and who, when it was too late, wrote Mr. Montagu "one of those plaintive, hectoring, bullying, and complaining letters so familiar to his colleagues and friends."

Mr. Mantagu asserted he does not think his resignation will result in any important change in the British government's Indian policy. He concluded by pointing out how near to collapse the coalition government is and how Mr. Lloyd George is resorting to extremist measures to save it.

FEARS TERROR REIGN.

"Mahatma Gandhi's arrest means the moderating influence in the Indian revolutionary movement is removed from the field of action," Taraknath Das, international secretary of the Friends of Freedom for India, who has established Chicago headquarters, said yesterday.

"The immediate result of this will be the arrest of a larger number of leading men and women of India by the British military authorities. This will lead to more vigorous boycott of everything British in India, will bring on chaos, and the British authorities will start a reign of terror."

MADELYNN WILL FACE RENEWED QUIZ TOMORROW

Los Angeles, Cal., March 11.—[Special.]—Mrs. Madelynn Obenchain rested in her cell today from the ordeal she underwent for two days in her trial for the murder of J. Belton Kennedy. Monday morning she will again take the stand to face a resumption of relentless cross-examination by Assistant District Attorney Keyes.

The interrogation, which is expected to be over by the noon recess, will include questions concerning statements Mrs. Obenchain made to the district attorney on the day following the murder, statements which the prosecution insists indicate she was protecting Arthur Burch while he was "trying to get out of California to return to Evanston."

Arguments to the jury, it is believed, will commence Monday afternoon, following Mr. Keyes' concluding questions, which, it was forecast tonight,

LONDON, March 11.—According to a message received by Reuter's from a Greek semi-official source, the cabinet of Premier Gounaris will resign as a result of the adverse vote yesterday in the chamber of deputies.

It Has Raised the Value of the Dollar

Every dollar you invest in a Packard Twin-Six today buys a new measure of quality and value.

Less than eight months ago the price of the standard Twin-Six touring car was $6000; until a few days ago it was $4850; now it is $3850, f. o. b. Detroit.

Other Twin-Six models show proportionate reductions, representing a total decrease since last July of more than 35 per cent.

No other motor car in the world affords so remarkable a combination of ability and value as the Twin-Six embodies today.

In addition to the reductions made in the price of Twin-Six, Packard Truck models E C (2—2½-ton, solid tires) and E X (2—2½-ton, pneumatic tires) are reduced from $3500 to $3100 and from $4000 to $3500, respectively. The price of the Packard Single-Six, already twice reduced, remains unchanged, with the probability of an advance later

CROWE, BRUNDAGE CAMPS UNITE TO FIGHT CITY HALL

Agree to Work as a Unit Through Primary.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Complete agreement between the Brundage and the Crowe Republicans was reached yesterday, and the combined elements will work as a political unit, it was announced.

The primary campaign policy, as state by State's Attorney Crowe in the Thirteenth ward Thursday night and by Attorney General Brundage Friday night at the Hotel Morrison, is to effect a strictly anti-city hall machine Republican organization.

Plan of the Coalition.

Formal statements to be issued later, it was said, will announce a plan the first objective of which will be the nomination of a Republican county ticket. Directly involved in this will be control of the state and county Republican organizations in opposition to the combined present state and city administrations.

For the present, the separate headquarters of the Brundage and Crowe elements are to be maintained.

At the Hotel Sherman the Brundage organization has a part of the third floor, taken over yesterday, with Former Ald. Willis O. Nance in executive charge. State's Attorney Crowe will be in personal command of his own forces at the earlier headquarters established at the Briggs house.

One Wrinkle to Be Ironed Out.

It was stated there is to be no dispute between the two camps over the county ticket. No Brundage candidate, except for president of the county board, has a Crowe opponent. Charles S. Peterson of the Twenty-first ward now appears to have the support of the Brundage and Deneen Republican factions, and the city hall has no candidate. The Crowe candidate is William Busse, from the country towns.

This is a situation that will get careful attention, it was indicated, during the present week. The Brundage and the Crowe factions have indorsed the seven sitting Municipal court judges and there is no overlapping as to the rest of the seventeen places.

Important statements from the Deneen camp, in view of yesterday's developments, are anticipated by Republican political leaders today or tomorrow.

Seeks Divorce from "Trouble, Unhappiness"

Ten days of married life meant nothing to Mrs. Marie A. Farrell except "misery, trouble and unhappiness," according to her bill for divorce from Harry J. Farrell, a lieutenant of the Illinois state constabulary, filed in the Circuit court yesterday. Mrs. Farrell avers that her husband's only source of income, so far as she knows, is from the constabulary, from which he receives $4 for each new recruit he enlists.

Here's Faction Melange Offered G. O. P. Voters

THE only petition filed for an avowed city hall candidate for major county office in the coming primaries was that of County Judge Frank S. Righeimer for renomination, and there is no candidate against him. The city hall organization has announced that it centers its primary contest on control of the next legislature. City hall leaders have intimated they will choose an "eclectic" county ticket, picked from the list of filed candidates, but always with the main idea of holding at least one-third of the state senate and a majority of the Republican house caucus at Springfield in January, 1923, when the threatened Small impeachment proceedings and the Thompson-Lundin Chicago legislative program will be the real issues as a curtain raiser for the mayoralty campaign in April, 1923.

Following are the different organization slates from which voters may choose on primary day:

	BRUNDAGE.	CROWE.	DENEEN.	THOMPSON.
Sheriff		P. M. Hoffman	H. C. W. Laubenheimer
County Treasurer	Charles Ringer		Wallace G. Clark

START PETITIONS TO PUT WINE AND BEER ON BALLOT

Demi-Wets Strive for Vote in November.

The state of Illinois will go to a vote in November upon the beer and light wines proposal as a modification of the existing Volstead act if sufficient names are secured to place the "public policy" question on the official ballot.

Petitions were placed in circulation yesterday under direction of the "Illinois division of the National Association Opposed to Prohibition."

Here Is Proposal.

The proposal the petitions seek to have submitted to popular state-wide vote is this:

"Shall the existing state and federal prohibitory laws be modified so as to permit the manufacture, sale, and transportation of beer (containing less than 4 per cent by volume of alcohol) and light wines for home consumption?"

The petition is addressed to Secretary of State Emmerson. Barring court attack, the question will be submitted at the regular state fall election under the law that permits an advisory vote upon questions of general policy.

Committee in Charge.

The committee for circulation of the petition, as stated in the slip that accompanies the blank petitions that went to workers yesterday from headquarters at 1608 Monroe building, is headed by A. D. Plamondon, as chairman, and with the following membership: Anton J. Cermak, Dr. Edward W. White, F. J. Streyckmans, Charles Wurster, Joseph J. Elias, Charles Archer White, J. E. Hitt, Thomas J. Houston, Frank West, Bernard P. Barasa, Perley M. Goodwillie, George Landau, John P. McGoorty, Nicholas L. Piotrowski, Harry S. Goodman and Joseph B. Inderrieden.

DRINKS MOONSHINE; HIT BY AUTO.

Hammond, Ind., March 11.—A friend offered Paul Karpark of East Chicago a drink of moonshine. He went out in the street and in crossing it stepped in front of an auto driven by Paul Aldrin and sustained a fractured skull.

WARY GHOST OF NOVA SCOTIA HAS REFUSED ENCORE

Halifax, N. S., March 11.—The elusive Caledonia Mills ghost was still numbered among the missing tonight. Dr. Walter Franklin Prince, New York scientist trying to solve the mystery of strange noises, unexplained fires, and other manifestations in Alex MacDonald's isolated home, admitted that thus far he had made no important discovery.

He played another card in his game with the unknown tonight. He had thought the presence in their home again last night of the MacDonald family, particularly the adopted daughter, Mary Ellen, might lure the ghost back, but this didn't work. So he sent them away today and summoned two newspaper men to spend the night with him in the house.

Tomorrow night Dr. Prince will be alone in the house, unless the ghost should come to keep him company.

POLITICAL NOTES

Circuit Court Judge Philip Sullivan, late of the 86th division, issued a statement at the service men's "dugout" along the political midway at Hotel Sherman, urging all unregistered ex-service men to get their names on the registry books in their proper precincts for the April primaries. "Let them use their rights as citizens and vote their just demands," Judge Sullivan said. Registration day is March 21.

James M. Dailey, Democratic candidate for sheriff, told a delegation of women yesterday he favors immediate construction of a jail. "I will ask churches, women's organizations, and all civic bodies of Cook county to aid me in arousing public sentiment to compel the building of a new jail," he said.

Nearly all of three floors of Hotel Sherman are now working as political primary headquarters. On the mezzanine the Regular Democratic organization holds forth. Personal headquarters of James M. Dailey for sheriff and of Anton J. Cermak for president of the county board are also on that floor.

On the second floor the Deneen Republicans have twenty rooms. Each candidate has his personal room. Mr. Deneen presides over a conference of the executive committee each day at noon.

The Brundage organization has most of the third floor, under command of Dr. W. O. Nance, sanitary district trustee.

At 154 West Randolph street, the independent Democrats, who are fighting the regular slate, have headquarters under command of City Clerk James T. Igoe.

At the Briggs House the Crowe Republicans have the entire parlor floor.

Scattered around the loop are individual candidates. Oscar Nelson, now the only Republican candidate for state treasurer, is at Hotel La Salle.

Joseph Burke started to sell newspapers in the loop when he was 8 years old. Now he is one of the regular organization candidates for judge of the Municipal court. During the war he was a lieutenant in the 344th infantry in the 86th division.

The Legislative Voters' league indicated there is to be an independent candidate for the Illinois house of representatives in the Nineteenth district, where the Republican senatorial committee provided for nomination of but one Republican, although the district is strongly Republican. Thursday was the last day for senatorial committees to determine the number of respresentatives in the respective districts.

James T. Igoe, head of the campaign organization of the Citizens' Democratic organization opposed to the regulars, issued a call last night for a meeting of the women's branches of the organization in room 464 at headquarters, 154 West Randolph street. "The women who are in this battle are well known," Mr. Igoe said, "and it is plenty of time after the meeting on Tuesday to make public the personnel of this auxiliary."

REO

What Is The Life of a Reo?

We'd like to know—but it looks as if we will have to wait several years more to find out.

First Reo left the then modest, but now immense, Lansing factory in 1904.

Output was small then, but quality from the first, as now, was "The Gold Standard of Values," and so we know of several Reos of that early vintage that are still running.

That's because quality is built into the very fibre of this product.

Beside the latest magnificent Six Cylinder Reos—that New Light Seven for example—that early Reo presents an almost ludicrous appearance—externally. But—

That same "quality in unseen places" now shows, and commands your respect. For after all improvement in Reos has been mainly in outward appearance—in beauty of outline and finish.

Price is f. o. b. Lansing, plus special Federal Tax

ALLIES SPLIT UP BILLION MARKS; LET YANKS WAIT

Refer U. S. Army Claim to Governments.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, March 11.—Recognizing in principle the United States' rights to collection of the cost of its army of occupation, the allied finance ministers in session here tonight signed an agreement dividing up among themselves 1,000,000,000 gold marks ($250,000,000), which Germany thus far has paid. They referred America's claim of $241,000,000 to their respective governments.

"This conference is not competent to deal with the Washington demand," said Sir Robert Horne, the chancellor of the British exchequer, on leaving the meeting, "but the prime ministers doubtless will find a way of reaching an amicable agreement."

It is believed that today's agreement giving the British 500,000,000 gold marks ($125,000,000), France 140,000,000 gold marks ($35,000,000), Belgium 350,000,000 gold marks ($87,500,000), and Italy 10,000,000 gold marks ($2,500,000) will be revised so as to give America 100,000,000 gold marks ($25,000,000) as an act of good faith.

While America's right to claim compensation for the cost of the army of occupation is not questioned, the United States government was bitterly criticized for waiting until the allies had reached an accord before sending in its bill.

ANOTHER DEBT SCHEME

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1922.]

PARIS, March 11.—Sir Robert Horne, chancellor of the British exchequer, has presented to the conference of allied finance ministers for transmission to their governments and for the reparations commission a proposal for amortization of the German reparation debt, based on the eventuality of America's cancellation of allied debts.

Under the British plan the German debt to the allies, amounting to 135,000,000,000 gold marks, would be divided into two parts. One part would be equal to what the allies owe America, some $11,000,000,000. The other part would be the total debt of Germany to the allies minus the first part.

The first part would not be reclaimed from Germany if America did not reclaim payment of allied indebtedness. Conversely, if America does claim payment it will stand against Germany.

The second part would form the basis of a system of international loans, 10 per cent of the proceeds of which would go to the German treasury and the rest would be divided among the allies.

Workers for Palestine Fund to Meet Today

Workers in the campaign to raise $200,000 in Chicago in the next two weeks for the Palestine foundation fund will meet at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Hotel La Salle for final instructions before the formal opening of the campaign Tuesday morning. Reports will show that about half the amount sought is already in sight.

BRITAIN CAN'T PAY CASH FOR GOODS, GEDDES ASSERTS

U. S. Must Adopt New Policy, He Says.

"If America expects to continue her exports to England she will have to accept other methods of payment than have been in vogue in the past. America can no longer expect payment in cash for her exports to England."

This was the outstanding statement of Sir Auckland Geddes, British ambassador to the United States, who spoke yesterday noon at a luncheon in his honor given by the Chicago Association of Credit Men at Hotel La Salle. He asserted United States exports to Britain are "dwindling because there is no money in England to pay for them."

Sir Auckland and Lady Geddes were met at the station at 9 o'clock by a committee of the credit men and Horace Nugent, British consul in Chicago.

Offers No Solution.

After receiving in their rooms at the Blackstone hotel they went to the luncheon. In opening his speech Sir. Auckland said he wished merely to point out the economic conditions of the United States and Great Britain.

Previous to the war, he declared, British capital had a large amount of securities held in the United States. These were bought up by the British government during the war, he said, and held to pay for the vast amount of food, clothing, and war equipment England required. In addition, he asserted, large quantities of gold were shipped to the United States.

"This arrangement can no longer be used," he said. "America can no longer expect cash for her exports to England. Other methods of payment now will have to be worked out."

He suggested several methods by which the "conditions now strangling trade" might be relieved. One of these was reciprocal trading—payment for goods shipped to England by English goods returned from England to the United States. Another was British services, such as insurance and the use of English ships by American traders.

Turns to the Future.

Regarding the future course of England, he suggested the consideration of flour as a concrete instance of what the British empire must do if the question of credits is not adjusted.

"If we have no money to pay for flour at your price, we shall naturally have to turn to Canada, Argentina, Australia or India for our supply and this trade will not be directed away from America by anything except impersonal, inevitable economic forces."

In closing Sir Auckland paid high compliment to Chicago's grand opera company. He stated Miss Garden's organization was a "distinct artistic achievement." He also complimented Chicago generally for its artistic atmosphere, which, he stated, was plainly evidenced in our architecture.

ALBANIA REBELS MARCH ON TIRANA; MINISTERS QUIT

ROME, March 11.—A Durazzo dispatch says that Ameri Pasha Kirioni and Antonio Pistulli, members of the Albanian government, have resigned.

Rebel forces, it is added, are marching on Tirana, the Albanian capital. Nelek Frasheri, commander of government troops, was killed in the fighting.

A London dispatch late in January described the Albanian situation as rapidly developing toward anarchy. The dispatch quoting advices received from Janina, said a group of nationalist leaders had formed a government at Elbassan, issuing a proclamation refusing to recognize the authorities at Tirana or the regency council.

FINED $100 AND COSTS.

Eugene Berent, garage owner, who lives at 1934 Armitage avenue, was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to seven days in the house of correction by Judge Lee W. Carrier in the Automobile court yesterday. Berent was charged with driving an automobile while intoxicated.

G. O. P. HOLD ON CONGRESS SAFE; NORMALCY NEAR

Democrats Not Expected to Capture Lower House.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—After surveying the political situation in fifteen states in the last six weeks I have formed the conclusion that the Republicans probably will retain control of congress in the election next fall.

With only one-third of the senators to be elected, the Republicans are in no danger of losing the senate, in which they now hold a majority of 22.

When I set out on my tour I thought, from the reports of popular discontent which had been reaching Washington, that the loss of the house by the Republicans was not unlikely. I came back with a decidedly different impression.

Discontent Is Dying Out.

I found wiiespread dissatisfaction among the farmers because of low prices for their products, among laboring men because of unemployment, and among business men because of the stagnation of business. I found evidence of the customary tendency to hold the party in power to blame for existing evils.

I also found, however, that the popular discontent was beginning to be dissipated. This change was conspicuous in the great agricultural states, where the prices of all farm products except cattle are rapidly getting back to pre-war levels.

Evidence also was not wanting that the popular discontent at its peak was not of the character or volume calculated to work a party overturn in the house. In not a state I visited did I find the Democratic leaders encouraged to believe it would be possible for their party to do more than regain the seats in normally Democratic districts they lost in the Harding landslide.

Some G. O. P. Losses Certain.

In the house now there are 307 Republicans and 127 Democrats, a Republican majority of 180. In the last congress the Republicans had a house majority of 46. The Harding landslide netted them a gain of seventy seats. They can lose eighty-nine seats in the coming election and have a majority.

Republican leaders concede the probability of the loss of nearly all the seats they gained in 1920. Democratic leaders here profess confidence they can regain 100 or more seats, thereby wresting control from rthe Republicans, but this confidence is not supported by the local Democratic leaders in the fifteen states I visited.

In this connection it is interesting to note that while the party in power frequently has lost control of the house in an "off" year election, it never has suffered such loss following a landslide like that which swept the Republicans into power in 1920.

That is the situation as I see it today. Whether it will be the situation next summer or fall no one can say. If the improvement of economic conditions continues unabated, Republican stock will go higher.

BOTH ARMIES QUIT LIMERICK ON BATTLE EVE

BY PAUL WILLIAMS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LIMERICK, March 11.—An agreement was reached this morning between the republicans and Free Staters and by noon nearly 1,500 men, members of both factions, had departed. Tonight all that remained were two squads taking orders from the provisional government who were left in charge of Warden and Castle military barracks.

The police barracks were closed and each side bound itself not to send any more troops here. Both factions agreed to abide by the will of the people in the vote on the Free State treaty in June.

It is now known that the republicans intended to attack at 11 o'clock this morning. A number of machine guns were posted on the roof of Cruise's hotel occupied by republicans. The roof overlooks Castle barracks some 800 yards away.

Three More Killed in Belfast.

BELFAST, March 11.—There has been no improvement in the situation in Belfast, three murders being reported today. One man was killed when a funeral procession was fired on. Unionists rushed a nationalist hall and killed the caretaker. The authorities are boarding the ends of streets with twelve feet high obstructions to prevent cross firing between the rival factions.

MR. BRYAN'S SCIENCE BY STATUTE.

H. G. Wells' "Outline of History" was a best seller in the United States for a long period and is selling still. It also is one of the best circulators in the libraries. It was followed, in publication although not in preparation, by Hendrick Van Loon's "Story of Mankind," which also met a demand. The latter is written for the comprehension of children and is not outside the enjoyment of adults.

These two books undoubtedly have spread out the popular appreciation of modern biological and geological conclusions. W. J. Bryan may have read one of them and it may have dramatized for him something which had been indefinite in his mind as "Darwinism."

He may have thought that modern scientific conclusions thus presented by men who could make them as interesting as novels would permeate and penetrate where the works of the nonpopular writer of science never could make a dent.

Mr. Van Loon was corrupting the nurseries and Mr. Wells the graybeards and Mr. Bryan saw the general collapse of character resulting from contact with scientific explorations into the past of man. Dogma satisfies Mr. Bryan for the most part, and he denies the validity of biological facts and conclusions. He does not like the idea of evolution from the protoplasm through development in water, sludge, and on land. Mr. Bryan has been up a tree in his day but his ancestors never lived in one.

There is an offense against instinctive and protective egotism in evolution. The years demanded by biology and, even more, the years required by geology startle the importance of man and he feels as if he were being obliterated with all his works. If he is left to his own imagining he will create a much cozier world for himself, with a fireplace in it, and he will not be caught out at night all alone somewhere between Vega and Pole star.

That is a terrifyingly lonesome experience, and the way to avoid it, Mr. Bryan thinks, is to deny that the scientists have many facts or justified conclusions which are proper substitutes for the ideas which were sufficient unto Mr. Bryan's great-grandfather.

Educators have rebuked Mr. Bryan for heading back into medievalism and they try to remind him of Galileo, Copernicus, and others who disturbed a comfortable conception of the world. It is useless to rebuke Mr. Bryan. He does not care what he may be heading into. He knows what he is heading away from.

Mr. Bryan is a politician and he believes in political action. When he has an idea he puts that idea through the processes of the democracy and tries to make it stick by political action. That is his course of economics, morals, and everything else. He had and still has an idea that the single standard of morality could be obtained by constitutional amendment. Anything, from sixteen-to-one to the price of corn, can be determined by legislation.

To protect the peace of the United States Mr. Bryan would abolish the American army and navy. To protect the American mind from the dangers of evolution he would abolish books of modern science. The process is to legislate out the thing which disturbs.

The influence of this great politician, thoroughly aroused by the dangers of modern science just as he was aroused by the dangers of drink, is being felt in legislatures, particularly in the south. The Kentucky house of representatives defeated his bill by one vote, but it was a close call for science.

"A bill for an act to amend an act entitled an act" is Mr. Bryan's sovereign cure, and he will get the scientists in this fashion before they know it. Then any person desiring to inform himself as to the origin of man may find the information in the revised statutes of any state in the Union. It will be the legal account of the world and it will be the work of inspired legislators.

GIVE US A CHANCE IN THE AIR.

"The subcommittee of the house military appropriations committee is considering, as part of the frenzied efforts for economy at Washington, the reduction of the appropriation for aviation research work from $4,200,000 to $2,000,000. Such a reduction would not be economy but waste of the most flagrant and foolhardy sort.

Orville Wright, inventor of the airplane, says: "When we entered the world war we did not have in America a single real fighting airplane. It was due to a lack of experience. Individuals could not afford to develop military airplanes, and the United States government before the war was spending comparatively nothing for that purpose. We were fortunate in having allies to help us in getting designs for our first planes. Another war and we may not have an ally."

Mr. Wright might have added that we never did get a fighting squadron of American airplanes into service. He might also have added that in another war we may not only not have an ally but may be pitted against nations which are today developing aviation to the highest possible point of efficiency. For instance, Japan is spending $30,000,000 a year on military aviation research and development—fifteen times the proposed expenditure of the United States—and has arranged to spend that amount every year for the next seven years. In such circumstances is it economy for us to junk half the equipment and organization of experts in aviation research which has been built up in this country to keep us from such frightful financial waste and costly delay as marked our aviation activities in the world war? Plainly it is not economy but foolhardy waste.

An appropriation of $4,200,000 for this work has been included in the Dawes budget. That is little enough—one-tenth the cost of a modern battleship, of which we are junking many. There can be no acceptable reason for making the amount smaller. Little Japan believes the amount should be more than seven times as great, and poor as she is compared to the United States, is acting on that belief in preparing for her own defense.

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON'S HOT WATER PIPES.

The Duke of Wellington in 1834 was in a position to enjoy the fruits of a crowded career as a successful soldier and statesman. He had wealth, prestige, and leisure, and probably was a little bored. Among other things he had a house. Probably it was huge and damp, and the duke was feeling twinges of rheumatism as he mended the fire from the old coal scuttle. Seeking comfort, his idle imagination was stimulated. He determined on improving his condition. The result was a hot water pipe heating system which was such a novelty as to warrant the inspection and admiration of friends.

Probably the pipes leaked, the pressure was irregular, and the duke shivered at one hour and sweated at another, but out of his wealth and leisure he had started something. Without leisure to visualize the experiment and wealth to pay for it he would have gone along with an open fire or a stove. As it was, he gave the necessary stimulus to a system which now makes probably more than half the homes, apartment houses, factories, and office buildings in the world habitable. What was a luxury to be enjoyed by but one is now a commonplace in every home.

The same thing applies in numberless accessories of modern life. The bathtub, for instance, originally was a pure luxury, evolved from the imagination of some pampered and wealthy and idle man or woman of the European leisure class. Their demands started it and their money paid for it. Today it is a necessity in every home. The same might be said of gaslight, electric light, gas stoves, telephones, automobiles, and most of the other comforts and conveniences of life.

A wealthy leisure class has time for the play of imagination and money with which to make its dreams come true. And, coming true, they become commonplace and go into the homes of the poor. It confers important benefits upon society and civilization. It is by no means all bad. Without it, and without the rewards which the catering to its whims offers to private enterprise, there would be little progress.

RUSSIA'S LATEST HOPE.

The latest concession, or recession, of the Russian soviet government reported from Moscow is a plan for a world union of labor. This plan, reached by the executive committee of the third international, would mean abandonment of the world revolution scheme. It will be received with little fear by the rest of the world, inasmuch as it is an admission of failure of sovietism. The world outside Russia will not be disturbed by the new movement under the same leadership which has proved itself so futile in more than four years of experiment with sovietism.

The original plan of the soviet leaders was to put their theories into practice throughout the world through revolutions by force. If sovietism had prospered in Russia there is little doubt but that they would have been able to promote such revolutions effectively in all parts of the world. The fact that they have failed abroad is minor evidence that they have failed at home.

For many months now they have been making concessions to the rest of the world, inviting the foreign capital, which they hate, to help develop their resources and pull them out of the hole, making trade agreements which at first they scorned, promising their own workers a share of products in proportion to the amount of their individual production, and even promising to pay the Russian national debts. They admit their plans of a soviet Utopia have failed, though "hope springs eternal." They admit their leadership has not brought what it promised. Now, therefore, they plan to attack the hated system of capitalism through a world union of labor. They will fail in that also.

The original theory was that labor produces all wealth, and therefore should possess all wealth. The socialistic belief, raised to Red heights by the bolsheviki, was that equal distribution of such wealth would make all producers, and therefore all labor, affluent. That in turn could cut down the necessary hours of labor to perhaps four a day, allowing the rest of the waking hours to be devoted to listening to good music, wandering in art galleries, and other elevating recreations. But they failed to take into consideration that such reduction in hours of labor would reduce production of wealth accordingly, and so reduce the portion received by each worker.

But they are finding that out in Russia. Intelligent, practical workers and others throughout the world have already appreciated the fact. We know that improvements in the social system come slowly but steadily, not through such bloody experiments as that before us. Soviet Russia proves it. The world labor union, if actually attempted, will confirm it.

Editorial of the Day

ON LOVING ALL NATURE.

[Rock Island Argus.]

Carl T. Robertson, a writer of some note among other lovers of the outdoor world, dwells on the importance of having one's own woodland retreat, to which, week by week, you return and where you may learn to love all the little things. Roam at large, of course, in unfamiliar or well loved places, but keep one little spot of known and loved beauty which may become a sort of spiritual home. You need not own the land—you probably will not, in the commercial sense. But the true lover of nature owns the world and his use of it takes nothing from the ownership or use of any other person. The best time to get acquainted with your spot is the winter. There are fewer things to see then, but they are more essential things. You can see better what the trees are like. You can give some attention to the earth itself. You see the birds' nests which you might pass a dozen times in the summer without noticing their location. You see holes in trees. And cocoons, and the stouter weeds.

But if you truly love your stamping ground you will go to it in all kinds of weather—November rains, January blizzards, February, before the spring comes. Take a friend if you will, but only one at a time. A child may be the best of forest comrades. Preserve the mystery of this little place. Learn all about the place itself, but keep it hedged about with things unknown and unknowable. It is delightful to feel that just beyond the boundary fence is a land of wonders. The woods can never be dull. But their romance can be sponged away.

PREPAREDNESS.

SAINT STEPHEN.

On Mars Hill he quoted a Stoic poet
Against his school,
Mixed metaphysics and stately pagan verse,
Dwarfed Epicurean doubt,
And won a convert from the Attic court;
At Ephesus he silenced the Philonic school,
And the Artemis cult,
Until the image-makers rioted in the streets,
Invoking aid from Diana,
The goddess of the chase.
And so he journeyed an Empire o'er,
Confounding all the Alexandrian schools,
Until the logos of the Greeks
Became the Christ upon the cross,
And God Himself then tabernacled in the flesh.
But when he came to Rome in chains
Late in his life,
And weary of contending cults,
New values came into his soul,
And metaphysics at last gave way to love;
So, when he wrote his sweet farewells,
There trooped from Stephen's pen
A host of simple words of simple virtues lived—
Faith, hope, and love—
The trinity that even men in prison understood.

ABORIGINE.

LIMBERLOST (MORNING).

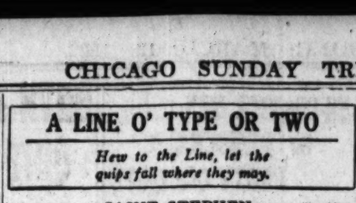
A cooling zephyr and a paling sky,
And in the east a hint of dawning day,
The towering trees, their branches borne on high,
An ebon arabesque on clouds of gray.

The leaves and grass adrip with diamond dew,
The fresh sweet scent of earth awakening,
The sleepy chirps of songbirds blend anew
With murmured music of an unseen spring.

A shimmering of opalescent light,
A glint of gold—and then the glorious sun,
Before whose rays the hovering shades of night
Fast disappear—a new day is begun.

LASSIE.

AN HAIR AT LARGE.



CHAPTER CCCXV.

Harrison L. Hasher roamed the streets of Washington. He had decided that the only way to win happiness was to make Jawn come home and finish up the story.

"Here I am," mused Mr. Hasher, bitterly, "engaged to two or three girls, and I don't seem to get anywhere with any of 'em. I knock out Mr. Slab and Jawn sets 'em up in the other alley. The trouble is, I am not fighting Slab; no, I'm fighting Jawn. He's going to keep this story going until I regard a symphony concert at Orchestra hall as the greatest of indoor sports and a Burton Holmes' lecture a debauch. Jawn must come back from Pirate Island and finish what he started. The only way to get him back is to have a law passed. I will see the congressman."

In the old days Mr. Hasher would have known just where to find the congressman, but now the bars were all closed. He walked slowly down Pennsylvania avenue.

Suddenly, just before him he saw the congressman. Stepping up behind him he said quietly, "Good morning, Mr. Congressman."

"Good morning," said the congressman, coldly and suspiciously. "Mr. Congressman," said Harrison L. Hasher, "this thing has been going on much too long. Now, as I am the principal figure in the affair, it seems to me that the onus——"

The congressman turned deadly white and, spinning around, dashed down Pennsylvania avenue with the speed of a deer. He turned at every corner, and Mr. Hasher realized that he was making for the Patent building.

"If he once gets inside the Patent building I shall never find him," thought Mr. Hasher. He remembered how thirty years before his father had come to Washington to get a patent. For a long time he had written regularly home of his progress from desk to desk, and then all trace of him was lost forever. Mr. Hasher increased his speed and headed the congressman off in front of a little park. Seizing the statesman by the lapel of his coat he hissed: "Listen to me: Jawn must be brought home, the story must end. I am a hero; the obligation, the onus——"

"Oh!" shouted the congressman in tones of joy, "Onus! Great Gawd! Onus! I thought you said bonus!"

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, of matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit, or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations, and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make dianosis or prescribe for individual disease. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

WORK FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

STEWART says that the only physician who knows how to treat consumption is the one who knows when to make the consumptive rest, and when to make him work, and how long, and at what work.

In 1912 three New York Jewish organizations investigated the after life of a large number of cases of arrested consumption.

They found that within a year and a half after discharge from sanitaria as arrested one-half the cases were dead or had relapsed.

It seemed a good deal of waste to these clear headed people. They began a system of medical care, nursing care, social service, and in certain cases financial relief for this group of people.

Somehow this failed to get at the root of the trouble.

It was decided that for a term of years the ex-consumptive must be given a chance to work at a trade which satisfied him, under medical supervision and for wages that would sustain him and those dependent on him. Medical supervision meant that he must work when it was good for him, stop before he became unduly fatigued, and have his physical ailments nipped in the bud.

They have been working this experiment now for several years, and in consequence the relapse rate has fallen from 50 per cent to 10 per cent. Those who have been content to stay on indefinitely, contented and happy in living the hygienic life, are in abundant good health.

Their problem was comparatively easy, since most of the people in whom they had an interest were garment workers.

A factory to do needle trade work was located in the Bronx territory, partly because the air was relatively good there and a fairly sanitary environment was possible, but principally because the working people could ride to work in the morning and away from work in the afternoon in cars that were not packed tight with people and in which every passenger could get a seat, or two if he needed them.

Needlework in a factory is not the abstract ideal, but it is a trade these particular people know; their muscles and nerves are attuned to it and at it they can make a living.

It is not easy for a semi-invalid to learn a new trade and to master it well enough to get a comfortable living out of it.

The sanitation of the factory is good. Each workman is advised how to live and a limit is put on his hours of labor and his output per hour.

He is encouraged to come to the medical officer for his numerous ills and symptoms.

Each workman is given a wage on which he can live, a fund having been provided for those not able to earn living wages. Those in good condition make wages that reach $45 a week in a few instances.

The garments made are sold to the trade in regular business channels, or contracts for piece work are made.

HERE'S THE SULPHUR SHAMPOO.

Itch writes: "My husband, who was bothered with an awful itch on the scalp for four years, tried every shampoo and consulted two doctors, but nothing seemed to help to relieve the itching until we tried a sulphur ointment made as follows:

"To one tablespoon of sulphur add one teaspoonful of unsalted lard and mix well together until it forms a paste.

"Rub well into scalp and leave on for a day or two, then wash the hair well in several waters to remove sulphur.

"This will cure the itch entirely and do no harm to the hair.

"One application of this will cure any kind of itch."

VARNISHING THE FISSURES.

J. N. writes: "For the benefit of H. E. S. and H. B., would like to say that for deep cracks in the skin, the best possible remedy is liquid court plaster. As water does not affect it, there is no difficulty about its coming off, and it fills up the dreadfully sore cracks and heals them completely in a few days.

"Never found anything that would do that until I tried this remedy."

LEMONS FOR SPLIT SKIN.

E. M. C. writes: "In Tuesday's paper you wrote about grease for skin splitting.

"Will you please tell H. E. S. that a better thing than grease is lemon juice. Get the skin thoroughly soft with hot water, dry slightly, then rub the fingers well into a cut lemon.

"This is a rather painful procedure, but I have found it very effective. Lemon juice is a good thing to use all the time to keep the skin soft and smooth.

"A finger stall over the crack (after applying the lemon juice) is good for keeping out the air and helping the crack to heal. You will have to soak your hands thoroughly in hot water first if you want the soap to lather next time you wash."

ADVICE FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

REPLY TO MRS. C. J. B.

1. Send stamped addressed envelope for our little booklet, "Personal Hygiene for Women."

2. Write to the American Social Hygiene society, 370 7th avenue, New York City, for their list of books for young girls. These are excellent and several sell for about 10 cents.

'ELP! CRY THE BUGS AND DIE.

A Reader writes: "Kindly state in your column whether sulphur ointment is good for the itch."

REPLY:

It is. Sulphur is a great insect killer.

The reputation of sulphur springs, sulphur baths and sulphur medicines in skin diseases came from the ability of sulphur to kill the bugs that bite us.

ACCOMMODATION.

Chicago, March 4.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Last May I rented a flat and during a controversy between landlord and tenant had to put up with the owner's household goods in my flat. When I moved into the flat the owner asked if it would be O. K. to leave his furniture for a few days, which was granted. However, the furniture was kept in my flat for one and one-half months. I could not place my goods—had twelve rooms of furniture in six rooms. I would like to know if I can make him reimburse me for the trouble I was put to. I have a lease and during this period paid rent as per contract.

W. H. M.

If the understanding when the goods were placed in your flat was that you were to store them as a favor and you gave no notice later that you were intending to charge, we would advise that you are not in a position to collect now. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

GETTING UP STEAM.

Chicago, March 6.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is there a law compelling the landlord to keep heat throughout the night? What is the accurate time for getting up steam in the morning and banking at night? S. B.

There is no such law except the general rule that reasonable heat must be maintained. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

GRAPE JUICE AND CIDER.

Loda, Ill., March 4.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Am I liable to prosecution if I make wine in my home for my own consumption? I would make this wine from grapes which I raise on my own premises. Please answer at once and settle a dispute. A. C.

Section 29 of the national prohibition law provides that the penalties of the law "shall not apply to a person for manufacturing nonintoxicating cider and fruit juices exclusively for use in his home." The federal prohibition commissioner has ruled that, provided such liquors are used exclusively in the home, "the phrase 'nonintoxicating' means nonintoxicating in fact, and not necessarily less than one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol." You will observe that beers and liquors other than fruit juices remain subject to the one-half of 1 per cent rule.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

LEASE OBLIGATIONS.

Chicago, March 5.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Can a landlord give a notice to move seventy-five days before the lease expires? My lease calls for a sixty day notice. The only objection I can see that he has to our tenancy is our children. 2. Isn't there some law that gives a person six months to move after such notice? 3. If I should find a flat now could I vacate before the lease expired? G. C. S.

1. We see no objection.

The landlord is under no legal duty to assign a reason for his notice.

2. If he sues for possession, a court would have discretionary power to grant you a six months' stay of execution.

3. No, unless you want to pay two rents. You must pay rent for this flat until the lease expires.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

GUARANTEE DESIGNATED.

Chicago, March 4.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Please advise me if a guarantee becomes null and void if the word guarantee is written under the signature; in other words, is it not a guarantee unless the word guarantee is used above the signature? C. C.

Depends on whether, considering all the facts, the meaning is clear.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

A WRONG IMPRESSION.

Chicago, March 7.—In THE TRIBUNE for Saturday, Feb. 25, there appeared an editorial under the heading, "Prussianized Parks," which criticizes strongly the administration of the national parks. As a personal friend of the director of national park service, Mr. Stephen T. Mather of Chicago, I hope to correct the wrong impression created by this editorial.

I am handing you herewith a photostat copy of the Denver Commercial for Nov. 10, 1921, and a typewritten copy of a portion of the annual report of the superintendent of the Grand Cañon National park for the year 1921.

You will note that the article in the Denver Commercial repudiates the charges made by Mr. Enos Mills against the management of the Rocky Mountain National park and condemns his action in unmistakable terms and says further that the methods used by Mr. Enos Mills "lend color to the oft repeated assertions that his activities are not based on high moral and purely public spirited ground, but are prompted by the hope of promoting his own selfish business interests."

You will note also from the typewritten copy of the report of the superintendent of Grand Cañon National park that Senator Ralph H. Cameron of Arizona has filed some alleged mining claims within the limits of Grand Cañon National park and that the department of the interior (presumably the bureau of mines) had decided against Senator Cameron in these claims. From this it would appear that Senator Cameron's action, like that of Mr. Enos Mills, was prompted by purely selfish, personal motives.

D. W. ROPER.

OF PRUSSIANIZED PARKS.

Clinton, Miss., March 3.—There has just come to hand a copy of your editorial of Feb. 25 on "Prussianized Parks," and I want to congratulate you on discovering the real conditions that some of us have learned from experience.

My own service, which was put in under the permit system, proved so satisfactory to patrons that it appeared to have a future, though throughout the past season I was fought by the Park Hotel company in every way possible, from misrepresentation to being denied reprcsentation at the information service, also owned and controlled by same hotel company.

In August I was informed by employés of the hotel company that I would be forced out, as "Mr. Noble, the general manager of the Park Hotel company, would not stand for me in this park." Since my permit was for two years, ending October, 1922, I thought nothing of this. However, in November I had word from national park service that my permit had expired. I wrote that expiration date was October, 1922, and had a reply from Mr. Vipond, acting director, acknowledging this date as correct. A number of patrons who had written in to protest the termination of my permit had similar acknowledgments both from the Washington office and the superintendent at Belton, Mont.

In mid-January I had a letter from Director Mather stating that he intended establishing a free nature guide service in Glacier park and would not allow me to operate this season. He also stated that my permit should have expired October, 1921, and that the date 1922 was a "typographical error." Since permit was made out in five copies, all of same date, and since the numerous letters to myself and patrons fully acknowledging October, 1922, as correct, this "error" looks peculiar. But the clever idea thus killed both my services, the natures guides and walking guides, which were specifically named in the permit. I and a host of patrons have protested without avail.

The national park service is very indignant at my charge that I am being forced out to satisfy Mr. Noble, general manager of Park Hotel company. This they deny, but when I recall the openly expressed statements of Mr. Noble's employés last summer, together with his open antagonism, I remain convinced. Glacier National park is and always has been controlled and dominated by this Great Northern combine, which includes the hotel company, the Saddle Horse company (supposedly an independent concessionaire, but owned and operated by Mr. Noffsinger, who is and has been for many years attorney for Great Northern), and the Park Transportation company, an auto line owned by the White Auto company.

Why do we have a director of national parks who is not responsible in any way to the people, to politics, or even to the senate and house? M. P. SOMES.

Formerly Nature Guide Service, Glacier National Park.

THE SECOND POST.

Clinton, Miss., March 5.—Referring back to my letter of a few days ago regarding abuses in national parks and particularly to the killing off of my permit for nature guide and walking guide service in Glacier National park, will say that I have just received a letter from Director Mather in which he states that he has decided to "extend" the date of my permit to Oct. 1, 1922; the date for which it was originally issued.

I still believe the concession system as now operated in national parks a bad thing, tending to monopolize the various services. By the fact of monopoly they usually deteriorate in service and increase in price. M. P. SOMES.

WINNETKA POST FOR THE BONUS.

Winnetka, Ill., March 8.—Recent letters in your columns have mentioned the name and referred to certain actions of this post of the American Legion.

In justice to the post and that all interested may draw their own conclusions as to the stand of the post in regard to the bonus question, I refer you to the accompanying resolution passed by the post on that question prior to the controversy.

The following are extracts:

"Above and before any consideration of a bonus or reward to ex-service men, congress should promptly, generously, and permanently provide for those who were wounded and disabled in the great war, and also establish a commission and a fund to assist special cases of service men who are temporarily in financial difficulties.

"That one of the greatest needs of the country today is to assure, through compulsory military training, the preparation of others who will be ready to serve in any possible future war, . . . and this post strongly urges upon congress the adoption of universal military training, and this post is willing, if the finances of the country require it, to have congress give precedence at this time to the establishment of universal military training and if necessary postpone for the time being the matter of a bonus.

"That, although it would be entirely fair and just if the country, through congress, should see fit to reward those who have been in the service by a bonus, it is not consistent with the dignity of the American Legion to demand any such reward.

"That if congress shall decide to give a bonus of money, property, or other benefit to those who served in the late war, and desires recommendation from the American Legion as to what form such reward should take, the following alternatives are suggested as being of a more permanent value to those who are to receive the reward than a money bonus and at the same time not involving the immediate strain upon the finances of the country:

"1. Land settlement in all states.

"2. Home aid to assist purchase of homes by ex-service men.

"3. An increased exemption from income tax.

"4. A certain amount of paid up life insurance.

"5. Continuation of the present government converted life insurance plan but at a much lower rate, etc."

Subsequent to the letters appearing in your columns and at its meeting of March 7, the following motion was passed and adopted by the post:

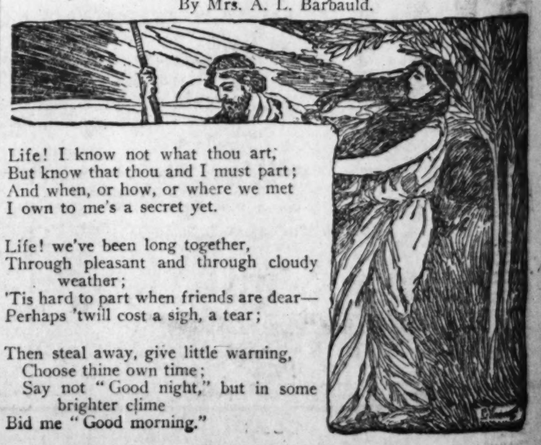
"That the Winnetka post of the American Legion go on record as favoring the bonus legislation advocated by the legislative committee of the American Legion, said legislation to contain in addition to the so-called option of land settlement, home building aid, paid up insurance, and vocational education, a cash bonus or its equivalent, the so-called certificate plan." H. W. SWELL,

Post Commander.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

LIFE.

By Mrs. A. L. Barbauld.



Life! I know not what thou art;
But know that thou and I must part;
And when, or how, or where we met
I own to me's a secret yet.

Life! we've been long together,
Through pleasant and through cloudy weather;
'Tis hard to part when friends are dear—
Perhaps 'twill cost a sigh, a tear;

Then steal away, give little warning,
Choose thine own time;
Say not "Good night," but in some brighter clime
Bid me "Good morning."

U. S. COURT URGED TO FIX CAR FARE UNDER 8 CENTS

48 Page Plea Calls Present Rate Extortionate.

The 8 cent carfare on the surface lines was declared repeatedly to be "excessive and extortionate" yesterday in a printed argument presented to Federal Judge Carpenter by Corporation Counsel Ettelson and his special assistants, Chester E. Cleveland and Daniel A. Roberts.

The court has granted a temporary injunction against the 5 cent fare order of the Illinois commerce commission, dated Nov. 24 last. The companies ask that it be made permanent. The city's lawyers ask that it be referred to a master in chancery.

The paramount point of their argument is that they desire the court to fix a fare, below 8 cents, above which the companies shall not charge, if the nickel fare is decided to be confiscatory. This suggestion is in printed form. The object of the forty-eight pages of argument is to get Judge Carpenter to adopt that suggestion.

Ask "Square Deal."

The city's lawyers ask that the companies be required to do equity, if they ask it. The brief recites that 106 days have elapsed since the companies have had the protection of the injunction of the court. Then the document continues with a summarizing paragraph, as follows:

"Each cent of fare they (the companies) collect brings them, they allege, about $20,000 a day. Hence if the 5 cent fare is ultimately found to be nonconfiscatory, they have already reaped a profit out of the injunction of $6,-000,000; if a 6 cent fare is non-confiscatory, they have already reaped a profit of $4,240,000; if a 7 cent fare is nonconfiscatory, they have already reaped a profit out of the injunction of $2,120,-000, and the profit still goes on at the rate of $20,000 or $40,000 or $60,000, depending upon whether the 5 cent fare, or 6 cent fare, or 7 cent fare will stand the test in this court of being nonconfiscatory.

Taken from People's Pockets.

"These enormous sums of money are being daily taken out of the pockets of the people and put into the pockets of the companies; and the companies are asking this court of equity to hold that it is powerless to protect the interests of the people by requiring the companies to charge the people no more than rates which, in the opinion of the court, are nonconfiscatory."

A large number of court decisions are submitted to prove that the city's contention is good law. The companies in the oral arguments asserted that the courts have not adopted the city's plan where there was a public regulatory body to fix reasonable rates.

The companies have raised a number of questions regarding the sufficiency of the city's answer. Probably the city's lawyer will make a reply to that soon.

The hearing of surface lines fares is expected to be resumed before the Illinois commerce commission next Tuesday morning.

Subway Plan Up Tomorrow.

Whether the city administration will throw a monkey wrench in the subway plans, outlined in THE TRIBUNE yesterday, probably will be ascertained tomorrow morning when a special meeting of the aldermanic subcommittee on traction matters will be held.

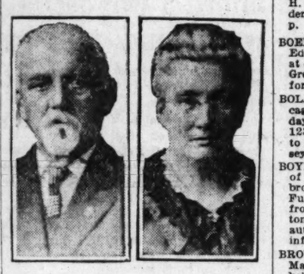
"Before the lawyers can go further in drafting their part of the subway plan, we must know whether Mayor Thompson will permit the surface lines to pay $5,000,000 toward the initial cost of a subway, as provided in the 1907 traction ordinances," Ald. U. S. Schwartz, chairman of the local transportation committee, said.

WED 50 YEARS

IN the midst of seven children, eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Frazier, 7030 Chappel avenue, will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary today by receiving informally at their home.

They were married in Dallas, Ia., and have lived in Chicago twenty years. When they came here Mr. Frazier and his sons established a commission business at the stock yards and are now nationally known as stock men. Mr. Frazier is 73 and his wife 71 years old.

Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Kirchhoffer celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Friday with a family reunion and reception at their home, 211 South Irving avenue. The couple have spent their entire married life in the home they now occupy. He is 73 years old and his wife is 70. Mr. Kirchhoffer has been a cabinet maker for C. M. Hoof & Co. for fifty-six years and is still on the job.



Mr. and Mrs. Friedrich Engel, 4105 Palmer street, held an informal reception Friday at their home in celebration of their golden wedding anniversary. Mr. Engle is 74 years old and his wife is 70. Both came to Chicago from Germany before the fire. Mr. Engel is employed by the West park board at Humboldt park.

Elihu Root Violetlike Visitor Here for a Day

Elihu Root, his arrival recorded only on the private register of the Blackstone hotel, arrived in Chicago yesterday and was "not at home" to callers. Telephone inquiries to his room met with the response he had "checked out."

FRIENDS GREET HEVENER, BACK TO FACE ACCUSER

Denies All Knowledge of Alleged Shortage.

Returning from Kansas City voluntarily to clear up an alleged discrepancy of $22,000 in the accounts of the International Cotton Protecting company of which he was until recently general manager, Paul Hevener, assistant chairman of the house committee of the Illinois Athletic club, was greeted by a reception committee of club members at the Polk street station last night as he stepped through the iron gates.

"Hello, Paul. How are you, old fellow? Put it there," and a hundred other greetings were shouted at him. Arms thrown around his shoulders showed Hevener that the shadow of embezzlement which was cast on him by the action of Attorney Henry Hagan in having his automobile trip to the coast stopped by the Kansas City police had no effect on his friends here.

Amazed at Detention.

In speaking of his detention, Hevener said to a reporter for THE TRIBUNE:

"I have absolutely no knowledge of what is wrong. I am just as much at sea as you are. I was the most astonished man in the world when the police got me in Kansas City. I was driving through in my automobile when they stopped me.

"The policeman asked me to go to headquarters. I went. The lieutenant told me there was a man waiting to see me. It was Hagan. We left the police headquarters together. I believe Hagan must have asked for my arrest as that was the only way he could think of to stop me."

Attorney Hagan did not arrive with Hevener. He left the train at the Halsted street station. Hevener said Hagan explained his departure by saying he did not wish to talk to reporters.

Denied Charging Embezzlement.

"Why did Hagan tell the Kansas City police you were $22,000 short in your accounts?" THE TRIBUNE reporter asked.

"Hagan denies making any such statement," Hevener replied. "I knew nothing of any shortage, and came back, at Hagan's request, until an accounting can be made."

When Hevener started to explain he had talked around the club for weeks of his contemplated trip by automobile to the coast he was interrupted by several men saying:

"Of course you did. Everybody knew it."

Among those to welcome Hevener were T. W. Proctor, vice president of the club; George Hull Porter, a former president; Frank G. Nicholson, and Dr. A. F. La Forge, members of the board of directors; George McCammon and D. M. Goodwillie.

ADMITS BENEDETTI MURDER

LEO GALLIGANI ADMITS SLAYING; GIVES SELF UP

Leo Galligani, 27 years old, 5018 North Sawyer avenue, admitted slayer last Monday night of Ancetti Benedetti, cousin of State's Attorney Crowe's wife, yesterday surrendered to the police of the state's attorney's office.

Galligani avers that he killed Benedetti in self-defense after he had attacked him at the climax of a long campaign of intimidation.

The slayer was taken into custody at De Kalb, Ill., by Sergt. Julius Bernacchi of the state's attorney's office. The officer was accompanied to De Kalb by Attorney Francis Borelli, Galligani's counsel.

The night of the slaying, Galligani told Assistant State's Attorney Robert McMillan, he met Benedetti on the street while on the way to a lodge meeting. Benedetti accused him of writing a letter derogatory to Benedetti's character and then struck him. He drew his revolver and fired three times, he said, and then ran. As soon as he could get an attorney he surrendered.

Nicala Maggio, a county employé, was shot and killed yesterday in what the police term a "bitter Black Hand feud."

Maggio was attempting to board a street car opposite his home, 2246 Wentworth avenue, when two men approached him. They pulled revolvers and opened fire at Maggio. He staggered across the street and fell in front of his house.

Albert Robbins ran from his cigar store at 2260 Wentworth avenue. As he approached Maggio, he said:

"Who shot you?"

A shrug of the Italian's shoulders was the only answer. Maggio died later in the Wesley Memorial hospital.

BANDITS HOLD UP INTERURBAN CAR; OBTAIN $2,000

Crew and Passengers Are Beaten, Terrorized.

Automobile bandits plagarized the plot of a movie thriller yesterday when they pulled abreast of an interurban car bound for Hammond, Ind., brandished revolvers that forced a stop, and escaped with a $2,000 pay roll being carried by a passenger, after beating three men. Several women in the car fainted.

A. C. EDINGER. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The robber victim was A. C. Edinger, superintendent of the barns of the Hammond, Whiting, and East Chicago railway. He had boarded the car at Burnside and was bound for the offices of the company. He makes the pay roll trip every Saturday and police believe the bandits trailed him.

Seven men staged the holdup. It occurred at 10:30 in the morning at 95th street and Ewing avenue. Edinger was knocked senseless with a blow of a revolver as the bandits seized the package and Conductor Alex Williamson and Motorman James Larson, who started to his aid, also were beaten on the head with revolver butts.

Four bandits tried to hold up three policemen in plain clothes and landed in jail.

Sergts. George Costigan, John P. Foley, and Joseph O'Brien of the Maxwell street station were walking in Peoria street, between 15th and 16th streets.

Isadore Lubin, 1355 South Peoria street; David Shyne, 2131 Washington boulevard; Sol Robinson, 1007 Frank street, and Jacob Yonkowski, 1330 South Peoria street, were sitting in a stolen car waiting for victims. They saw the three officers.

"Let's get 'em!" whispered Rubin. The four, with drawn revolvers, leaped from the car. The policemen, likewise drawing guns, closed with them. A few moments later the quartet, handcuff edand fingering various bruises on their bodies, were in their stolen car headed for the station. They have confessed to numerous holdups.

Last week Charles Walter, rent collector for Draper & Kramer, real estate agents, was robbed of $653.50 in cash and $90 in checks in the Harkins apartment, 36th street and Michigan avenue. Yesterday, returning there, he saw a man he identified as the robber, and called a policeman. Hugh L. Van Sickle, 1411 East 55th street, is in jail.

Several guests in the lobby of the Reliance hotel, 1700 West Madison street, were threatened by four armed robbers last night who robbed the clerk, Leo Leveff, of a watch, then rifled the cash register of $150.

Loot Evanston Home.

Burglars last night invaded the home of E. A. Parker, wealthy broker living at 729 Judson avenue, Evanston, and plundered the house of everything of value. Mr. Parker and his family are now in California, so no estimate of the loss could be obtained.

Holdup Slayers Draw 25 and 20 Years in Prison

Twenty-five and twenty years in the penitentiary were the verdicts imposed respectively on Edward Lonien, 26, and Jacob Struile, 21, yesterday by a jury in the court of Judge Joseph H. Fitch.

The two men were charged with the murder of Stefan Jaskula, 4109 South Throop street, on Aug. 27, 1921. The evidence showed that Jaskula was on the way home from a party with Julia Solinsky, 2904 West 40th street, a witness for the state, and was held up by the two men at Cicero and Archer avenues. Refusing to hold up his hands, he was shot and killed.

Charming Blue Fox Furs

Again in Modish Favor

THE aristocracy of fine furs is widely accepted as including these four—Russian Sable, Hudson Bay Sable, Silver Fox and Natural Blue Fox.

Almost unobtainable for the past few years, the House of Bishop fortunately has secured some of the most beautiful skins ever trapped.

The Natural Blue Fox is extremely beautiful, soft and silky. In addition, last year's cold winter made these skins very "full" in fur.

We have prepared a most wonderful showing at prices ranging—per skin—from

$135 to $300

Special Exhibits of STUNNING SILVER FOX CHOKERS .....$160 and up

LUXURIOUS RUSSIAN SABLE CHOKERS.....$400 and up

UNUSUAL HUDSON BAY SABLE CHOKERS.....$100 and up

Obviously, these very fine furs are not exposed in public display windows, but you are cordially invited to see our private exhibition.

Italian Design—American Walnut Finish

We could dwell at length on the construction and finish of this suite, and also the burl walnut panels which add greatly to its attractiveness, but will ask you to come in and see for yourself. It is finished in the latest shade of Italian Walnut, which means a dull finish, and will not mar easily. The china cabinet is shown with wood panel doors, but may be had with glass doors if preferred. This suite was bought to sell en suite of 10 pieces, but we believe we have enough to sell singly if desired.

CONFERENCE ON SOCIAL DISEASE OPENS TOMORROW

Public Health Expert to Be in Charge.

Social diseases, their diagnosis, treatment, and prevention, is the threefold object of the Chicago health conference to be held this week under the auspices of the United States public health service and under the direction of Dr. I. D. Rawlings, state director of public health, which opens tomorrow morning at the Congress hotel.

War Enthusiasm Gone.

The purpose of the conference, according to Dr. Rawlings, is to "revive the enthusiasm in controlling and preventing social diseases that swept the country during the war and that has lost much of its vitality and momentum since the coming of peace."

In discussing the importance of the conference which will draw an attendance of over 1,000 physicians and social workers Dr. Rawlings pointed out that the havoc wrought by social diseases today costs the people of the United States more money than any national project.

Three courses will be presented: "Prostitution and Delinquency," of interest to social workers and officers of the law; "Diagnosis and Treatment of Venereal Diseases," of interest to physicians; "Clinics and Their Management," of interest to clinic directors and workers.

Those on Program.

Among the speakers in charge of the thirty-six lectures and eleven demonstrations are Gov. Len Small, Dr. John Dill Robertson, Dr. W. A. Evans, Judge Harry Olson, Judge Arnold Heap, Dr. I. A. Abt, Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Walter Dill Scott, Miss Jessie Binford, Julius Rosenwald, S. P. Thrasher, and the Rev. M. P. Boynton.

Business Men Blamed for Poor Mail Service

William H. Canavan, publicity manager of the Chicago postoffice, speaking in lieu of Postmaster Lueder at the monthly dinner of the Irish Fellowship club in the Morrison hotel, yesterday said Chicago business men are largely responsible for the nondelivery or the late arrival of mail when they allow it to accrue until the last hour in the business day.

"We receive an avalanche of mail from the business houses after 5 o'clock in the evening," said Mr. Canavan. "This leaves all the expensive machinery and the force of clerks idle for the day. In fact, we have but 15 per cent of the postoffice force on duty up to 5 o'clock."

INJURED BY RUNAWAY HORSE.

Mrs. Julia Sheehan, 56 years old, 1644 West Huron street, was injured yesterday when a runaway horse struck her as she was crossing the street at West Ohio and North Paulina streets.

REGISTRATION OF BIRTHS INCREASES TEN A DAY IN 1921

The stork is growing more fond of Illinois. In 1921 he paid on an average of ten visits more per day than he did in 1920, the report of the state department of public health indicates.

Births registered in Illinois jumped from 120,360 in 1920 to 131,289 in 1921, according to advance provisional figures just released by Dr. I. D. Rawlings, director of the department. This represents an increase of more than 9 per cent over the preceding year and corresponds to a birth rate of 19.8 per 1,000 of population as compared with 18.4 for 1920.

"The favorable showing for 1921," Dr. Rawlings said, "resulted not so much from an actual increase in the number of births as from more complete registration, due in a large measure to a birth registration campaign launched six months ago by the state department of public health.

"Public opinion favorable to a birth registration has been generally aroused. Legal pressure has been brought to bear on physicians who are delinquent in registering births.

Catholic Women to Hold Tea for St. Viator College

The Rev. John Maguire, C. S. V., of St. Viator college at Bourbonnais, Ill., addressed a meeting of women in the Congress hotel yesterday at noon in the interest of the campaign which is in progress for a $500,000 extension fund for the college. The Rev. Joseph J. Girard, C. S. V., of Chicago, also spoke. The women voted to give a silver tea in the gold room of the Congress hotel on March 25 for the benefit of the fund.

Bill dated Sept. 28, 1868, for clothing sent out by firm of which the father of the present Foreman was senior partner.
EVIDENCE that we were born into the clothing business.

Buy your clothes in this store where only clothes —and good clothes only—are sold.

Quality

All We Know Is Clothing

We don't know a thing about hardware—furniture—groceries—coal—lumber—shoes—hats—shirts.

We do know clothing—men's clothing—because we were born into the clothing business and have been in the clothing business ever since we were born.

You can't buy nails—molasses—crockery—boxing gloves—derbies—neckties or socks in our store—but you can buy clothing—good clothing—we sell nothing else.

We know everything that goes into men's clothes—design—tailoring—woolens—everything to the last button.

And we sell our clothing on the sound principle of dollar for dollar. We can't give you two dollars in clothing for one dollar any more than the First National Bank would give you two dollars in cash for your one.

But for $35, $40, $45 or $50 we will sell you a good Spring suit (with two pairs of pants if you wish) and when you wear it you will be fully satisfied you got your money's worth in absolute quality.

WOMEN TO KEEP U. S. CITIZENSHIP IF ALIENS' WIVES

"America First" Bill Is Given to Congress.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—A new naturalization and registration bill giving independent citizenship to women and redeeming Republican pledges for better economic guidance of alien residents was introduced in the house today by Representative Albert Johnson of Washington, chairman of the immigration committee.

It reorganizes the naturalization bureau of the department of labor, changes its title to "bureau of citizenship," extends its scope and places it on an efficient and economical basis.

Nation's Enemies Barred.

Enemies of the government are drastically excluded from citizenship, and the measure requires each resident alien to register annually at some time between August and November, expenses of registration to be paid from an annual fee of $5.

Moneys collected are to be set aside as a "citizenship instruction fund" under control of the secretary of labor for proportionate allocation to public schools, to pay salaries of public school teachers in citizenship classes organized for the purpose of teaching loyalty, citizenship responsibilities, and the English language.

The bill would eliminate all appearance of witnesses at naturalization hearings, thereby saving annually the useless and unnecessary cash outlay of $7,250,000 by applicants and the economic costs of more than $5,750,000 which now is imposed annually on more than 350,000 citizens, employers, and employés.

Citizenship for Women.

The measure provides independent naturalization of married women and retention of American citizenship by resident American women who marry foreigners. It gives uniform exemption to veterans of all wars in American forces and recognizes those serving in the forces of America's allies during the world war.

Senate Passes Deficiency Measure of $136,895,000

Washington, D. C., March 11.—The senate late today passed the deficiency appropriation bill, carrying a total of $136,895,000, or $28,358,000 more than was appropriated by the measure as passed by the house. The principal amendment added by the senate was an appropriation of $27,468,000 for use in repayment of illegally collected taxes.

RESCUED

Agnes Anderson holding kitten firemen saved from the flames.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

AMID the cheers of hundreds attracted by the blaze, firemen last evening made a thrilling rescue of three women who had been overcome by smoke on the top floor of the four story brick building at 20 West Chicago avenue. The women, barely conscious, were carried down a fire escape. The firemen also risked injury to save a kitten.

The fire, which caused damage estimated at $12,000, started in the ground floor bakeshop of Perry Marcus. Smoke permeated every part of the building.

Mrs. Melton Helin and Mrs. George Brown live on the fourth floor. Mrs. Mary De Casro was visiting them. Firemen bursting into the smoke filled rooms found all three helpless. The rescuers were John Markwart, James Leader, and Charles Olson of truck company No. 3.

DEMAND RELEASE OF COUPLE.

Attorney George E. Neff filed two petitions in the Superior court yesterday for writs of habeas corpus, demanding the appearing of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Gordon. They were arrested last night in the Palmer house.

MISS MARY ABBE IS NEW TEACHERS' FEDERATION HEAD

Miss Mary M. Abbe, a teacher in the Marshall elementary school, yesterday was elected president of the Chicago Teachers' federation. She succeeds Mrs. Ida M. L. Fursman, who resigned after holding the office ten years.

The following, as well as Miss Abbe, were elected without opposition: Miss Mary F. Dwyer, recording secretary; Miss Frances E. Harden, corresponding secretary; Miss Ida Schiffiin, financial secretary, and Miss Margaret A. Haley, and Miss Nora M. O'Connor, organizers.

"Stay-in-School" Report.

Peter A. Mortenson, superintendent of schools, issued a statement showing the "stay-in-school" campaign has brought results. Of 10,048 grade school graduates, 9,244 entered high school in February, the beginning of the semester.

Figures showing the increased number of teachers and pupils in the high schools also were issued. In February there were 1,775 teachers, as compared to 1,292 in September, 1919. There are 49,581 students enrolled now; there were 36,745 in the fall of 1919. The average number of pupils to a teacher, a fraction more than 31, is about as it was three years ago.

Schurz School Leads.

The greatest attendance is at Schurz school, with 149 teachers and 3,800 pupils, and Lane Technical High school, 125 teachers and 3,749 students.

FRACTURES SKULL IN FALL.

Bernardo Lamoo, 57, 1009 Cambridge avenue, fell downstairs yesterday morning. His skull was fractured. He died.

WOMEN ARE TOLD TO PUT BABIES AHEAD OF VOTES

Mrs. Hale Says Home Is Center of Activity.

Babies first; votes second. That is the political platform advocated by Mrs. Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale, English actress, author, and lecturer, who adressed the Illinois League of Women Voters yesterday at the Casino club on "Women in Politics."

"The home life is the center of every woman's activities," said Mrs. Hale, who is a niece of the English actor, Sir Johnstone Forbes-Robertson. "but there can be many arcs to the outside of the circle."

Urges Nonpartisanism.

Mrs. Hale's insistence on the nonpartisan attitude in politics found considerable opposition among the women, many of whom admitted it was a fine theory but a difficult practice. "All partisan" rather than nonpartisan has been the principle of the league, which seeks to include members of all political beliefs.

"My advice to you women," said Mrs. Hale, "is to tell the leaders of your respective parties: 'Yes, gentlemen, I am a Republican, or a Democrat, as the case may be, only so long as that party behaves nicely. When it does not act prettily I might split my ticket; I might even go so far as to forget my party allegiance.'"

Against Woman's Party.

The league indorsed the speaker's warning not to support women candidates simply because they were women and her denunciation of a separately organized woman's party.

"There are plenty of efficient women, so that it is not necessary to push a woman candidate who is not fitted for the job," said Mrs. Hale.

FR. D. J. DUNNE NEW ASSISTANT OF CHANCELLOR

At the request of Capt. Michael Gallery the inquest into the death of John Ulargbalian, 2535 Marmora avenue, was yesterday continued until March 21. Ulargbalian was shot and killed by Bagdar Krikorin, 2533 Marmora avenue, last Sunday.

The slayer, when captured, confessed he killed Ulargbalian and said he did it because he believed the latter had stolen his wife. She is missing and Capt. Gallery said he may order the yard at the rear of the Krikorin home be dug up in the belief she also may have been killed.

The appointment of Rev. D. J. Dunne assistant chancellor of the archdiocese, to succeed the Rt. Rev. H. F. Hoban, elevated to auxiliary bishop.

A dispensation for Catholics in this archdiocese to eat meat at one meal next Friday, St. Patrick's day, was also issued from the chancery office, under direction of Bishop Hoban.

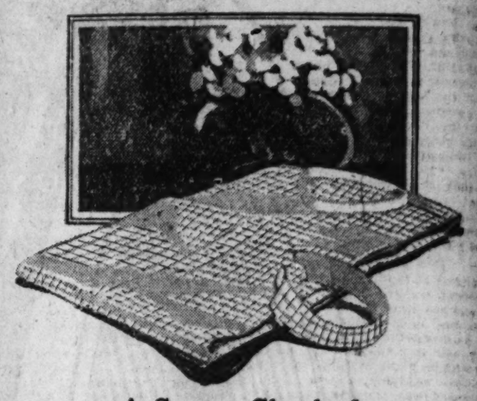
What's What in Things Men Wear

A Weekly Bulletin of New and Correct ideas in Dress



A Smart Checked Madras Shirt at $2.50

A man may add a touch of novelty to his Shirts this season in perfect safety. Checked fabrics especially will be good. Here is one as smart in style as it is low in price. In a number of very desirable colorings.

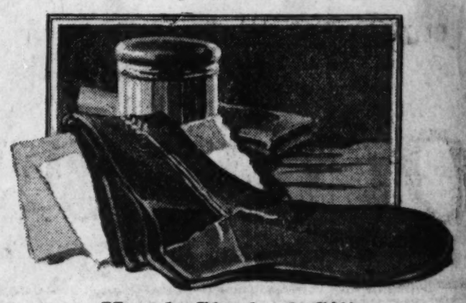
College Striped Silk Neckwear, $1

More color is the cry in Neckwear as well as in Shirts. Diagonal college stripes particularly are in demand. In the greatest variety of color combinations that it is possible to imagine. Of a sturdy repp weave, they will prove durable as well as tasteful. Other fine qualities in subdued three-tone combinations, $2.50.

Spring Means a New Pair of Chamois

And these are just $2. We're glad we were able to get them down to such a low figure again, because men have always liked them—liked their style and liked their comfort. They will be worn a lot. This quality is the finest and the price the lowest in many years.

The finest English and French made Gloves of kid and chevrettes are $3, $3.50 and $4.



Hand-Clocked Silk Hose, $1.65 Pair

Nothing quite so smart with low Shoes as clocked Silk Hose, and the clocking on these Hose is all hand work. They are full fashioned, too; in black, white, navy, green and cordovan —a very attractive value at $1.65.

DEATH THREATS, BEATINGS TOLD BY MRS. HOPKINS

Cruel treatment of his wife by Albert Jarvis Hopkins Jr., son of former United States Senator Hopkins, that caused them to be ejected from several hotels, was described by Mrs. Helene A. Hopkins yesterday during the hearing of her suit for divorce before Judge Joseph Sabath.

Mrs. Hopkins said she was married to Hopkins, an insurance broker, May 31, 1920, and was forced to leave him Jan. 25, 1922, after he had beaten her into unconsciousness in their apartment in the Eastwood hotel, 811 Eastwood avenue.

"On the evening of Jan. 25 Mr. Hopkins came home intoxicated, carrying two bottles of liquor," said Mrs. Hopkins. "He retired in a stupor and some time later I came home and attempted to go to bed without waking him. However, he awoke, and without provocation became enraged and pushed me from the bed.

Tells of Stabbing.

"I attempted to leave the room, but he followed me, and with the words, 'The end has come for you,' he began to beat me. After kicking me several times he dragged me into the kitchen by my hair and knocked me unconscious with his blows. When I regained my senses I was lying on the floor and my husband was standing over me, brandishing two butcher knives. 'I am going to kill you now,' he shouted, and attempted to stab me. I received cuts on the scalp, back, and shoulders."

Father Corroborates Story.

Otis P. Maillard, 1825 Humboldt boulevard, corroborated his daughter's testimony and asserted that in answer to Mrs. Hopkins' appeal for help he went to the Eastwood hotel and found his daughter covered with bruises and cuts and several pools of blood on the floors of the apartment.

Judge Sabath indicated he would grant Mrs. Hopkins a decree and allow her $50 monthly alimony. Details of a property settlement, effected out of court, were not made public at the hearing.

ARCHITECTURAL EXHIBIT OPENS THIS MORNING

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

The thirty-fifth annual Chicago architectural exhibition opens this morning in the galleries of the east wing of the Art institute. The newest feature of the exhibit is the showing of finished interiors in miniature. There are tiny living rooms, dining rooms, and bedrooms and halls, complete to the last delicate chintz curtain at the window or painted mural over the broad mantel. It is one of the most attractive innovations ever staged in this yearly exhibit.

An Interesting Contrast.

The mural paintings shown by the National Society of Mural Painters afford an interesting contrast in the broad manner of their treatment to these miniature reproductions of every day life. They give, too, a much needed touch of color to the more elaborated part of the exhibit, dealing, in photographic form, with many of the best achievements in residential and business architecture that the last few years have yielded.

There are many interesting sculptural pieces to be seen. One, the model for a memorial to be erected in Shiloh National park, sculptured by Frederick C. Hibbard, is particularly imposing.

Paintings by Grace Ravlin bring a change in the tone of the exhibit and lend that touch of color without which the predominance of black and white in any show of this kind would be fatal.

Among the architects represented are Howard Shaw, David Adler and Robert Work, Lewis Colt Albro, Donn Barber, Clark Walcott, Delano and Aldrich, Tallmadge and Watson, George W. Maher & Son, Holabird & Roche, and Bertram G. Goodhue.

Plans for Back Yard Gardens.

The Woman's National Farm and Garden association opens its exhibit also this morning in the last of the galleries of the east wing of the institute. The $50 prize offered by the association was awarded the "Sun Dial," by Ida Stout. Many plans for back yard gardens show the possibilities possessed by even the smallest plots of land. Numerous garden pieces are attractively arranged in the two rooms, setting off by their charm of line the more conventional sketches.

The exhibitions will remain open until April 9.

REVOLT AGAINST ITALY BREAKS OUT IN TRIPOLI

ROME, March 11.—[By the Associated Press.]—A revolution on a large scale has broken out in Tripoli. The rebels have cut the railway in many places and attacked the Italian garrison.

At Azizia two companies of Italian soldiers surrounded by rebels are receiving food dropped from airplanes.

The Italians have evacuated Ghater and Zavia. The latter is on the coast about 125 miles east of the city of Tripoli.

ACTRESS WHO WANTED A NUDE SUES HER ARTIST

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, March 11.—Mme. Spinelly, Parisian actress, asked Gabriel Domergue, an artist, to picture her as "Beauty Unadorned," but the painter hesitated, fearing that the nude figure of a popular woman actress would not be criticized favorably.

M. Domergue finally agreed to paint her picture on condition that his model refrain from inspecting the canvas until it was completed.

But Mlle. Spinelly broke her word and looked at the unfinished portrait. Instead of finding herself represented as a beautiful figure reclining in the fascinating pose she had chosen, she discovered herself sitting up rigid atop a huge globe.

M. Domergue preferred to have his picture showing Mlle. Spinelly "sitting on the world's conventions," but the actress says she wanted a picture of herself, not of the world, and she intends to sue for the time she lost in posing.

YOU want a bedroom suite like this in your home; you may not be sure you want it just by looking at these illustrations, but you'll be sure of it when you see the furniture itself. We'd take pleasure in showing it to you; it's very beautiful merchandise.

It is a simplified type of the artistic Louis XVI. period, a time of great artistic splendor. Everything was ornate, decorative; and to many persons of taste today the work of that period was very beautiful.

You may be very sure of one thing; the furniture offered here is all Scholle quality, which means that there's none better to be had. If you keep that idea clearly in your mind, and know that you can absolutely depend on it, you are then free to exercise your taste to whatever limits you feel inclined.

Our emphasis on Scholle quality is merely a background for our guaranty of satisfaction. We know that inferior quality cannot and does not satisfy anybody. We simply can't afford, if we are to guarantee satisfaction, to offer or sell any unworthy goods.

We promise you that you will be and will continue to be satisfied with our wares; or you may have your money back.

DEMOCRATS HEAR TREATY DEFENSE BY UNDERWOOD

Bitter Debate as Partisans Heckle Alabaman.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—Senator Underwood, leader of the senate Democrats, had a lively time of it today trying to round up his recalcitrant followers for ratification of the four power Pacific treaty.

For three hours he stood in the senate before the Democrats he has led in so many partisan battles and pleaded with them to forget their party lines and join with the administration forces in support of the work of the armament conference.

Some of them responded with heckling. Only the never failing good nature of the Alabaman kept the situation from developing into a stormy session.

Underwood Under Fire.

In a hundred different ways the anti-treaty Democrats cross-examined Mr. Underwood, trying to trap him into an admission that the four power treaty in effect constituted an alliance. Unruffled and unperturbed, he maintained to the end that the pact was not an alliance.

Today's debate was exclusively a Democratic "show," so far as the actors were concerned. The Republicans sat on the sidelines and watched the astute Democratic chieftain fight it out with his unruly flock.

What the effect of Senator Underwood's plea will be remains to be seen. He has assured Republican leaders that he will deliver at least eight Democratic votes in favor of ratification. All of these will be needed to make ratification sure.

New Angles to Beat It.

Meanwhile, new complications appear to menace ratification. Senator Kellogg [Minn.], Republican, is busily engaged in reviving that memorable "bloc" known as the "mild reservationists" in an effort to kill off the Brandegee reservation, sponsored by the "irreconcilables" and described by President Harding as "not unacceptable."

The reservation has been approved by the foreign relations committee. It declares that the four power pact is not an alliance and does not bind the United States to the use of force.

Senator Kellogg and his colleagues contend that the reservation is an imposition on the administration. They have held several conferences and have rallied eight or ten Republican senators to their standard. They propose to align themselves with the anti-treaty Democrats to gain a majority against the reservation.

Such a prospect is viewed with considerable anxiety by Republican irreconcilables, who say it is exactly what the anti-treaty Democrats have been planning to accomplish for some time.

INSTRUCTION FOR BRIDES

"Homemaking" was the topic of the Evanston Woman's club yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Helen M. Ruggles told the women that she considered the prime factor of home served meals to be quality rather than variety and quantity. Several tables were presented as models set by the butler of Mrs. Edward H. Hines. The meeting was under the direction of Mrs. Leslie M. Parker of the young woman's auxiliary of the club and Mrs. Howard D. Rummely of the home department. Mrs. John R. Nicholson and Mrs. James Baker are shown at one of the model tables.

PRESS MEN GIVE HUGHES A PAIR OF GOLD SHEARS

Washington, D. C., March 11.—Washington newspaper correspondents today presented to Secretary Hughes a pair of gold desk shears in token of their appreciation for his "kindly assistance to them in their work" since assuming office.

The gift was presented by Matthew F. Tighe, who has been "covering" the state department for more than forty years. Mr. Tighe expressed the hope that the secretary would make the use of the gift "in cutting the Gordian knots of international diplomacy."

"Nothing is more difficult," Mr. Hughes said, "than to maintain the proper contact between a public officer and public opinion. It is essential that nothing should be done which would impair administrative work by improper or premature disclosures. On the other hand, it is just as important that suspicion should not be allowed to get under way because of an undue reticence.

"'A public officer should say every morning as he approaches his task; 'I am a servant and it is my business to see what I can do for the American people. I am not a boss, and the little authority or great authority that I happen to have for a day is not a personal perquisite.'

"There must be mutual confidence between those who represent public opinion, and the officer trying to administer the department, or else there will be a failure on both sides. There will be a failure of the public to understand and a failure of the public officer properly to discharge his duty."

KEEP WORKING TO KEEP ALIVE, DOCTORS ADVISE

It is all right to look forward to the mirage of a rest across a desert of work, but according to a consensus of opinion among prominent physicians yesterday the active man who retires at the age of 70 to rest for the remaining years of his life practically signs his death warrant.

The physicians say a man goes to pieces shortly after his withdrawal from work and death soon follows. Luther Burbank and Thomas Edison are examples of men who keep young by continuing in their chosen lines of work after passing the 70 mark.

Dr. Arthur Isaac Kendall, dean of the Northwestern university school of medicine; Prof. Robert H. Gault, neurologist of Northwestern university; Dr. H. H. Waterman, Dr. Gilbert Fitzpatrick, Dr. Frank Billings, dean of Rush Medical college, and Dr. William S. Thayer, clinical professor of Johns Hopkins university, agreed it was dangerous for a business man to quit work and try to loaf.

Weinberg Acquitted as Sommerfeld Slayer

Leo Weinberg, on trial before Judge Caverly in the Criminal court, charged with the murder of Edward F. Sommerfeld, a garage owner, two years ago, was found not guilty yesterday. The jury took only one ballot, it was said.

TAKEN IN REVOLVER CHASE.

Andrew Banks, colored, 3157 Calumet avenue, was captured yesterday by policemen after a running revolver battle. The police said the man had been robbing a building.

gates, respectively, adopted it, all having made various suggestions.

"I may say, however, with respect to the main course of negotiations, that after assent had been given by Great Britain and Japan that France should be a party to the agreement, I prepared a draft of the treaty based upon the various sugestions which had been exchanged between the delegates.

Process of the Treaty.

"This draft was first submitted to Senator Lodge and Mr. Root, as you were then absent on account of the death of your mother. After the approval of the American delegates who were here the draft was submitted to the representatives of other powers and became the subject of discussions between the heads of the delegations concerned, and, with a few changes, which were approved by the American delegates and which did not affect the spirit or substance of the proposed treaty, an agreement was reached.

"Immediately upon your return I went over the whole matter with you, and the proposed agreement received your aprpoval. I should add that in order to avoid any misunderstanding I prepared a memorandum to accompany the treaty with respect to its effect in relation to the mandated islands and reserving domestic questions.

"At this stage, while it was not strictly a conference matter, in order to insure publicity at the earliest possible moment, the treaty as thus agreed upon and before it had been signed was presented by Senator Lodge to the conference in plenary session and its import and limitation stated. His statement met with the acquiescence of all.

"The treaty as thus drawn and notified was deemed to embrace the main islands of Japan. Later, in view of the sentiment both in this country and Japan, it was deemed to be preferable to exclude these main islands and a supplementary treaty was prepared to this effect which designated the islands of Japan which it was to include.

"There is not the slightest mystery about the treaty or basis for suspicion regarding it. It is a straightforward document, which attains one of the most important objects the American government has had in view and is of the highest importance to the maintenance of friendly relations in the far east upon a sound basis.

"As the President recently said in his communication to the senate, it is an essential part of the plan to create conditions in the far east at once favorable to the maintenance of the policies we have long advocated and to an enduring peace.

"In view of this, and in view of the relation of the treaty to the results of the conference, its failure would be nothing short of a national calamity."

Give the Kids a Chance

Can the children play on the floor in your flat without freezing the Spanking Spot? If not, then the heating boiler in that building is a loafer. It isn't making enough heat to kill the drafts. Ergo, it can't be a Kewanee.

Of course, Pop, you don't care to play on the floor, but it is the inherited right of every American kid. And all the new Series "B" of American restrictive laws can't stop him. Nor will what the doctor says stop him. So it's up to you, Pop, to make it easy for the boy.

How? Why by LOOKING IN THE BASEMENT FIRST—before you rent your flat. Find the Kewanee Boiler and thus prepare in advance for your heat happiness in the Winter time. Think of your wives and children first. Of course it's unusual, but it's a grand thing to be original.

Builders of flats and other buildings are advised that Kewanee Boilers establish the renting and selling value. They are all-steel boilers not subject to the fluctuations of the weather market.

Write to The Old Man Behind the Boiler and he will take you deeply into his confidence—and furnish proof that it is "as wide as a church door and as deep as a well."

What does a Piano mean to you?

IF a piano meant nothing more than a piece of furniture capable of producing musical sounds, any one of several hundred makes on the market would suffice, and you would be justified in making your selection on price.

THERE are very few pianos that qualify as great instruments. Of these, the stands out as a masterpiece among masterpieces. It is built to meet an ideal—not a price. Yet the price, considering what you receive for it, is of little consequence.

EVERYONE realizes that the make of a piano in the home establishes the musical status of its possessor, regardless of the richness of its surroundings, and no matter what the surroundings may be, a Kranich & Bach piano carries with it the highest possible compliment to one's musical taste.

EXAMINE, for instance, the justly celebrated

Grandette

the small Grand with the marvelous tone and touch. Let it speak for all of the Five sizes and eleven styles of Kranich & Bach Grands

Nothing that can be said of a piano by master or critic could be so eloquently expressive of the all-satisfying quality of these wonderful instruments.

IF you have an old upright or grand let us tell you its highest possible valuation in exchange. Terms to suit.

H. P. CRANE'S SON WINNER IN LEGAL WAR OF PARENTS

$25,000 Trust Fund to Be Set Aside for Him.

Rafael Anthony Piza Crane, 3 year old son of Herbert P. Crane and his former wife, Mrs. Elida Piza, was the real beneficiary in a triple barreled decision handed down by Judge Adam C. Cliffe in Geneva yesterday in the legal battle between Crane and the Porto Rican beauty over alimony and the custody of the child.

Judge Cliffe ordered Mrs. Piza to set aside for the boy a trust fund of $25,000. He appointed the Northern Trust company, Chicago, trustee of this, with power to invest it and add to it for the child's benefit.

Ask Crane Regarding Offer.

Crane at one time during the court fight offered to set aside such a fund for the boy if Mrs. Piza would agree to do the same. Mrs. Piza at that time refused to do so. When the court yesterday ordered her to do it, Crane was asked whether his former offer still held good. He refused to state that it did.

The decision of Judge Cliffe yesterday was in a way a victory for both Crane and Mrs. Piza. For Mrs. Piza he ordered that Crane must immediately pay her $10,000, and place in trust for her $60,000 more—in lieu of a total payment of $70,000 alimony, which she contends Crane owes her.

For Crane the judge ruled that Mrs. Piza must return the boy to the jurisdiction of the court within thirty days. The boy is now in New York City with relatives of his mother. The $25,000 trust fund created for him is to come out of Mrs. Piza's alimony settlement.

Still in Hospital.

Crane was in court yesterday, but Mrs. Piza was still under the care of her physician, Dr. R. N. Scott. Dr. Scott said she will be unable to leave the hospital for at least three months. He asserted she is suffering from an acute organic lesion of the heart. He declares this was superinduced by her troubles with Crane.

Crane is 62 years old; Mrs. Piza 24. When he married her a few years ago she was considered the most beautiful girl in the Porto Rican capital.

Attorney Andrew Sheriff of Chicago yesterday withdrew from the case as counsel for Mrs. Crane. He was succeeded by Attorney John K. Newhall of Elgin.

Attorney Sheriff and Attorney De-Goy Ellis of Elgin, who had represented Mrs. Piza for some time, had contended during the last few hearings for fees. The court allowed all the lawyers who have represented Mrs. Piza, including former Senator James Hamilton Lewis, a lump sum of $1,000.

Only Temporary Decision.

The decision of the court that the child must be brought to Illinois is a temporary one. Through her physician, Mrs. Piza said yesterday she hopes it will not become permanent.

WINS DIVORCE

MRS. VIDA BERTRAND.

EVIDENCE of her husband's misconduct, offered by a mutual friend and accepted by Mrs. Vida Bertrand of the Parkway hotel, won her a decree of divorce and monthly alimony of $200 from Maurice Bertrand, 1319 South Michigan avenue, when the story was told to Circuit Judge Hugo Friend.

In the hearing Mrs. Bertrand asserted that she was married in Milwaukee on April 11, 1913, and that Bertrand, a traveling salesman, has an income of over $10,000 yearly.

PROTEST GIVING POOLE OFFICE TO MR. WILLIAMSON

The council committee on living costs struck two blows yesterday—one in defense of itself and the other in defense of the public.

Blow No. 1 consisted of a resolution directing Commissioner of Public Works Francis not to carry out his orders that the committee's secretary, R. J. Poole, be ousted from his private office to make space for the Rev. John H. Williamson, the $10,000 a year city hall law enforcement commissioner. The aldermen told Mr. Francis to find space elsewhere for the minister.

Blow No. 2 was in the form of an order on Secretary Poole to prepare evidence against profiteering restaurant proprietors, grocers, and butchers with a view to recommending that their city licenses be revoked.

COUPLE FOUND ASPHYXIATED; ORDER INQUIRY

Coroner Hoffman announced last night that he will make a thorough investigation into the deaths of Patrick Peterson and his wife, Blanche, who were found dead in bed yesterday morning at their home, 4904 West 18th place, Cicero. Investigation by the Cicero police indicated that the deaths may have been caused by a leak in the gas main under the home.

Neighbors smelling gas in the vicinity of the Peterson home broke down the doors and discovered the bodies. The bodies were taken to Szymanski's morgue, 2947 South 49th street Cicero.

They found both bodies in bed. Tracing the odor of gas, the police went into the basement. The gas main had been broken off close to the ground and gas was pouring from it.

VETERAN COPPER SAVES DROWNING MAN IN RIVER

A splash. Screams of onlookers. "A man jumped off the bridge!"

JOSEPH McGUIRK.

Policeman Joseph McGuirk, a 65 year old veteran of the South Clark street station, was talking to Bridgetender Charles Hillock late Friday night at the end of the Roosevelt road bridge.

"There he is!" some one pointed out at the struggling figure in the dark water.

McGuirk without hesitation lived in after him. He seized the drowning man, going under for the second time, and swam with him to shore. After being worked over for several minutes, the man, who gave his name as Nathan Shapiro, 1654 South Avers avenue, was taken to the station in a police ambulance.

Shapiro denied any attempted suicide. He said he had "just fallen in; that's all there was to it." Witnesses, to the contrary, stated that he had jumped from the bridge.

The veteran "copper's" record shows he has distinguished himself on many occasions during his long service in the police department.

Kiddies' new capes, 12.75

—of homespun basket cloth, tweeds

The winsome style has yoke or plain back and is button trimmed—see the illustration—available in rose, orchid or brown, and in sizes 2 to 6.

Small children's spring hats at $5

Smart, becoming styles in taffeta and in straw and cloth combinations—one model is pictured. Third floor.

Bloomer dresses of plain or checked gingham; 2 to 4; 2.95.

New La Vida corsets, 13.50

—of flesh silk brocade; with rubber band at top in front, slightly higher back with elastic gusset at top; three pairs garters.

New style in La Vida corsets at 8.50

Another late La Vida model for spring. It is made of flesh broche with medium low bust and real long skirt. Note the style in the picture. Fifth floor.

Women's Kayser vests, 2.25

Pure silk vests in ribbed weave, and in bodice style, with Italian band top; choose pink or orchid; available in sizes 34 to 44. Third floor.

Extra: Women's vests well fashioned of lisle at 45c

They have bodice top or built up shoulders—both styles much in favor.

All the vests fine ribbed

Choice of pink and white, and sizes 4 to 9. The price is decidedly special for the "quality." Third floor.

Untrimmed hats for spring at 5.50 to 10.75

—felt hats and wanted straws. Ostrich, biots, quills, pompons, arrows, French flowers at trimming counter. Fifth floor.

Women's thread silk hose

3,600 pairs of "seconds" 1.45 All full-fashioned

Pure dye hose—all the mill had; the small flaws will not impair the wear; in black, cordovan; all sizes. First floor.

Mignonette tuxedo sweaters

Only because we bought these sweaters in an exceptionally large lot are we enabled to mark them so closely. Knitwear shop, third floor.

A well tailored model at 6.95

The quality is of that better sort commonly associated with sweaters far higher priced.

Black, navy and sports shades

Note the model sketched—particular attention is directed to the snug-fitting sleeves.

Stylish Stout petticoats

They are made of excellent tub silk in white and flesh with self tone satin stripes, and have artistic embroidery and embroidered scalloping.

Values of rare merit at $5

The fashioning is flawless—the embroidery and scalloping are wrought with painstaking care.

Double panel front and back

The style is illustrated. Such value counsels early selection. Stylish Stoutwear shop, third floor.

Crepe satin petticoats with hip hem at 6.95

A plain tailored style in fine quality fabric and with hem double to the hip. Special.

Pajamas of pongette and dimity at 1.95

—with touches of contrast, frog trimming, dainty pockets, and with novel necklines.

Satinay bloomers, special at 1.25

The bloomers are in flesh tint, with self-tone stripe. Lingerie shop, third floor.

New bungalow dresses of gingham at 6.75

—of dainty check'd gingham, with wide sash and self panels extending from pockets;

eyelet emb'd collar, cuffs, vestee, pocket

The attractive style is sketched; the value is exceptional. House dress section, third floor.

STRANDED UNION WORKERS CARED FOR BY COUNCIL

Tradesmen Will Receive Free Lodging.

Labor leaders and unemployed crowded the city council chamber galleries yesterday as the aldermen by unanimous vote decided to pay for lodging and food for building tradesmen stranded in Chicago as the alleged result of the building trades controversy.

Though there are now sixty-two members of the council, it took thirty-five minutes to drum up a quorum of 36 votes. Ald. Byrne, chairman of the special committee on labor, made the motion that the tradesmen be fed and lodged until the special committee has its conference with the citizens' committee to enforce the Landis wage award tomorrow morning.

Lack Food and Lodging.

"These men are not bums," Ald. Byrne said. "They were brought in by the citizens' committee and have been cut off from food and lodging."

Ald. A. O. Anderson declared that there are plenty of Chicagoans who are worse off than the stranded tradesmen, but Ald. Byrne replied that every unemployed Chicagoan "has at least one friend."

In the belief that there were only twenty-three of the visitors, Ald. Powers offered to feed and lodge them until tomorrow night at his own expense. Estimates of their numbers then ran as high as 250.

Ald. Richert estimated the cost of feeding and housing the men as "not over $1,500." The order was then passed.

Explains Painters' Situation.

L. P. Lindolf, secretary of the painters' district council, appeared before the committee of aldermen in behalf of the painters.

"In Chicago there are twenty-four locals of painters, having a membership of 11,000,'" asserted Mr. Lindolf.

"These locals are affiliated with the district council, which for years has signed wage and working agreements with the Master Painters and Decorators' club.

"The painters' district council was not a party to the arbitration proceeding before Judge Landis, as our contract with the employers didn't expire until April 1 of this year. However, the judge recommended a 95 cents an hour wage rate for us when our contract expired.

15 Per Cent Reduction.

"Officials of the citizens' committee to enforce the Landis award instructed the employing painters that after the expiration of our wage and working agreement the Landis recommendation was to become effective regardless of the fact that they were not in the arbitration proceedings and were willing to pay us $1.10 an hour, a reduction of 15 per cent of our last year's contract.

"This action of the citizens' committee is holding up painting jobs and has thrown 5,000 union painters out of employment. William Curran of the plumbers related that a similar situation confronted the plumbers."

Fred Mader, president of the Building Trades council, said that the union officials would not demand admittance to the citizens' committee tomorrow.

MEAL TICKETS WANTED

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

As the result of council action providing for the temporary care of unemployed union laborers, Mrs. Louise Osborne Rowe, commissioner of public welfare, was besieged yesterday for meal tickets. The photo shows a group of unemployed men and Mrs. Rowe.

REVENGE SEEN IN SLAYING OF CIRCUS OWNER

Riverside, N. J., March 11.—[Special.]—County detectives are working on the theory tonight that revenge was the motive for the murder of "Honest John" Brunen, circus owner, in his home here last night. In the quarter century he traveled around the country with road shows, Brunen is said to have made many enemies and to have lived for several years with the fear of death hanging over him.

Brunen was a friend of William Desmond Taylor, the motion picture director who was murdered in Hollywood recently under mysterious circumstances. Like Taylor, and also like Joseph B. Elwell, the bridge expert, killed in his New York home, the circus proprietor was sitting down when he was shot, and was caught off his guard by the murderer. The case also falls into the category of the Taylor and Elwell mysteries because of the probable motive, which is expected to be found perhaps in some hidden chamber of the circus man's past.

Shotgun Used in Slaying.

The weapon with which Brunen was killed was a shotgun. Standing on the ground outside the kitchen window of Brunen's two story cottage here last night, the murderer pushed the muzzle of the gun close to the window pane and aimed it carefully at the back of Brunen's head as he sat by the window reading a newspaper. He fired the double barreled shotgun once. Brunen was killed instantly. He had a pistol in his pocket, but had no chance to use it.

Pausing only a moment to see that his work had been carried to completion, the murderer and a companion ran across the yard back of Brunen's house and through a neighbor's property, as footprints showed later, and escaped in an automobile.

Chased by Autoists.

Although Brunen apparently was at peace with the world the moment before he died, he had returned home within the hour after a thrilling automobile race for twenty miles over New Jersey roads with men who evidently were bent on his destruction.

Mrs. Brunen observed that her husband was covered with mud and dirt from the road, and asked him why. Then he told her the story of the chase by the men in the other machine, explaining that his car escaped with such a burst of speed that it churned up a cloud of dust all the way home.

WINNIPEG MEN IN VOCAL CHOIR HERE TOMORROW

Canada's first bid for honors in the field of vocal culture in Chicago is scheduled to take place in Orchestra hall tomorrow at 8:15 p. m., with the appearance of the Winnipeg Male Voice choir, a community organization of business and professional men of the northern city.

For the last seven years the organization has toured Canada, gaining much praise for its work. Manitobans became so proud of the choir that this year they voluntarily collected a fund to guarantee the expenses of a debut in "the states."

Only one of the organization's personnel—its director—is a professional musician. The other fifty-nine voices represent the training of business and professional men for choral work. Press notices indicate that the director, H. C. M. Ross, a noted artillery officer in the war, has succeeded well beyond the expectation of the average audience.

As an exhibit of what can be done in the way of artistic community endeavor, the choir is said to be all that can be desired and is likely to receive a hearty welcome from Chicagoans.

A New Opportunity for Thousands at This Low New Price

f. o. b. Toledo

A new, delightful motoring experience awaits thousands who are now able to own and enjoy the brilliant flexibility and luxury which has long made the Willys-Knight car a favorite with people of greater means.

You now can own a car whose life is measured by scores and even hundreds of thousands of miles, with coach and chassis built extra strong and extra quiet to avoid even those minor noises which the quiet Willys-Knight motor would accentuate and make intolerable.

You can free yourself from the annoyance of motor repairs and adjustments; from valve grinding and from noise.

You can enjoy the surprising economy which only a Willys-Knight owner knows, for the Willys-Knight car combines its peculiarly low upkeep economies with the largest known gasoline mileage of any car of its power and weight.

Touring reduced $150; now $1375. Roadster reduced $125; now $1350. Coupe reduced $320; now $1875. Sedan reduced $300; now $2095. f. o. b. Toledo

WILLYS-KNIGHT

U. S. MAY RUN COAL MINES IF MEN WALK OUT

Member of Harding Party Discusses Situation.

Daytona, Fla., March 11.—By the Associated Press.]—Government intervention to insure sufficient fuel for the movement of trains and the running of essential industries may be recommended to the administration as a proper course of action in the event of a coal strike, it was declared here today by a member of the party accompanying President Harding on his Florida trip.

It was emphasized, however, that this view did not necessarily reflect the opinion of the President, who has made no comment on the situation.

Consideration might also be given if the emergency warranted, the official said, to a commission representing the operators, miners, and public to arbitrate. Failure of arbitration, it was added, might result in operation of the mines by the government.

Won't Talk with U. S.

Columbus, O., March 11.—Southern Ohio coal operators today declined the request of Secretary of Labor Davis to meet with the miners in joint conference to arrange a wage scale for the central competitive field.

"The operators of southern Ohio cannot participate in such a conference," a reply to Secretary Davis' letter requesting the meeting said, "but they will meet with the representatives of the mine workers of this district at any time to discuss a wage scale and working conditions that are fair to the miners and operators of southern Ohio."

The letter declares that the present demands of the miners have been rejected by every interstate conference in the last three years, and that the United Mine Workers of America "have violated every agreement made by them since 1916."

Strike Held Inevitable.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 11.—[United Press.]—Ballots on the coal miners' strike reaching headquarters here today continued to pile up the overwhelming majority in favor of a walkout April 1.

If the mine owners continue their refusal to negotiate a new wage scale before that time there will be a strike, officers of the union said.

FUN FOR KIDDIES!

"Poodles" Hanneford, the "riding clown" who is coming back with Sells-Floto circus.
[Apeda Photo.]

Get ready, you circus loving pas and mas, to take the kiddies to see the sawdust ring performances again. Sells Floto circus is coming to the Coliseum for its third annual visit to Chicago on April 8. The management claims it's bigger and better than ever. In addition to many old features retained numerous new European acts have been engaged. Especial emphasis is laid on the clowns, among whom "Poodles" Hanneford, the famous "riding clown," is chief.

Republic of Latvia Praised by Speaker

"The Republic of Latvia hasn't printed any money since last May," Charles L. Seye, official delegate of the Balkan Republic to the United States, pointed out yesterday at the Hotel La Salle to emphasize improvement in the economic and financial conditions of his country. "The Balkan states," he said, "have turned back a flood of anarchy and have performed a service to the world and particularly to western Europe."

DOCTOR RELIEVED PENDING QUIZ ON "SERUM DEATHS"

Waukesha, Wis., March 11.—A lengthy conference was held today between Dr. Lawrence Kolb, superintendent at Resthaven sanitarium, and State Commander E. J. Barrett of the American Legion concerning the death of three patients during the last ten days following the administration of a serum as part of the treatment for their ailments.

It was announced that Dr. H. U. Brann, who administered the serum injections, would be relieved from further duty pending a thorough investigation by the state physicians, who will conduct a postmortem examination of the bodies tomorrow.

Coroner L. F. Lee of Waukesha county began an investigation of the deaths of the three patients, Walter Schuman, Milwaukee; Leon Badace, Kenosha, and Capt. Roy. C. Baker, Augusta, Wis., at the request of Gov. Blaine.

According to Dr. Kolb, Dr. H. S. Cummings, surgeon general of the United States hospital service, will start a separate investigation in behalf of the federal government next week. The patients were ex-service men.

WORLD POPULATION

The population of the world is about 1,714,770,044, divided as follows:

Europe	477,990,711
Asia	825,200,430
North America	146,233,558
Africa	134,695,754
Oceania	65,573,991
South America	65,075,600
	1,714,770,044

The United States has about 105,600,000. Those who claim that we can live profitably, comfortably and contentedly without regard to the rest of the world are probably comparable to those who believe that the entire universe was made in order that the small planet called "THE EARTH" might exist.

Our country cannot prosper while the rest of the world is in trouble or want. For our own sake, therefore, let us look to the rest of the world, and do what we can to help them. Just as Chicago is dependent on the United States, the United States is dependent on the world at large.

SOVIET INSISTS ON MONOPOLY OF FOREIGN TRADE

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

RIGA, March 11.—In order to prevent economic intervention in Russia by the world's big business interests, the soviet will continue the foreign trade monopoly, according to Leonid Krassin, the soviet trade envoy, in commenting on the severe fight being waged by the merchants of the world against the monopoly.

M. Krassin reports, according to the Rosta, the official soviet news agency, that the abolishment of the monopoly would engender consequences similar to those in Germany and Austria, and would mean the sale of the small remaining portion of Russian goods for almost nothing.

"Under the present conditions of famine and shortage of goods in Russia unrestricted trade would mean the delivery of Russian industries and small traders into the hands of foreign groups, and such dependence would lead to new pretensions of capitalism," he said. "The absence of customs regulations and taxes would result in the soviet government losing profits which private capital would get.

Bars Raw Products Exports.

"The foreign trade commissariat will not permit private business to enter the foreign trade market because it is not desirable that trade agreements be subject to competition. Also no permits will be given to foreign concerns to export Russian raw products."

Foreign business only will be permitted to enter Russia through combining with some soviet institution or governmental trust which will insure the bolsheviki a portion of the profits, continues M. Krassin, who then proposes that the soviet foreign trade commissariat should have full control of such companies.

Puts Damper on Trade Hopes.

The report has created consternation among American and other foreign traders who have been in Baltic states two years awaiting the restoration of Russian business and who have anticipated early unrestricted trade. They point out that as usual the soviets do not offer guarantees, that their offers are not attractive to the business interests of the world and also that the soviet trade delegations at Riga and Reval possess unsavory reputations.

Runaway Children Found After an All Night Search

Tired, cold, and dirty after spending the night on the back porch of a hardware store at 63d and Laflin streets, Helen James, 12, and her brother, Cyril, 7, who left home Friday, were found yesterday after an all night search. The children live with their father, Robert J. James, 8052 Muskegon avenue, and their aunt, Mrs. Robert Hooss.

ROME DeLuxe QUALITY

"DeLuxe" The Bedspring LUXURIOUS

"Average Bed a Torture Rack"
—says Physician

"This is literally true" says a well known physician, "although many people do not realize that the bed—or really the bedspring—is the cause of their discomfort. For generations people have gradually become accustomed to this slow torture and so bear it. People attribute their backache—their cramped muscles—their general tired-out feeling to their general condition. As a matter of fact, instead of a Doctor's care, in most cases, all these people need is a new bedspring."

The ordinary coil, woven wire or national bedspring is not fit for human beings to sleep on. It sags into great hollows which twist the spine causing backache, neckache, cramped muscles, and nerve pressure Certain parts of the body are not supported at all. Consequently these parts tire, and the sleeper tosses about in an attempt to relieve the strain. Naturally a night of such discomfort gives no rest.

So that people may have complete rest, complete recuperation at night, a bedspring has been designed that is approved by physicians and hygienists everywhere. It is the Rome De Luxe Bedspring. It cannot sag, yet gently molds itself about every contour of the body, supporting every part easily without pressure. On a De Luxe the body lies comfortably without a sign of strain—completely relaxed for sound refreshing sleep. The De Luxe is so constructed that it cannot wear or tear mattresses.

See the Rome De Luxe Bedspring at your dealer's. It's a revelation in luxurious comfort—no bedspring at any price compares with it. Know it by the Rome Quality trade-mark on the side rail. It is the mark of identification and certification of quality on all Rome products. The Rome De Luxe is interchangeable—fits either wood or metal beds.

LLOYD GEORGE TO CHOP EUROPE TRADE BARRIERS

Seeks Tariff Board for Central States.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, March 11.—[By Tribune Wireless.]—I have just received from a source close to Prime Minister Lloyd George an outline of his plans for the Genoa conference.

He is much impressed with the necessity for removing the artificial customs barriers set up in central Europe as a result of the treaty of Versailles and he is determined to insist upon the creation of a zollverein (tariff commission) by Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, Hungary, Poland, as well as the new Baltic states. Until the freedom of trade communications is restored, he believes, there can be no prosperity.

Mr. Lloyd George is also impressed with the American idea of using America's position as a creditor to insist upon the return to sanity of its European debtors and he thinks the idea can be applied with equal success to the lesser states of Europe by their European creditors.

From the same source I learn that Mr. Lloyd George also has now definitely decided to remain in office, at least until after the Genoa conference. "But look out for a change after Genoa," was the parting advice.

HOLD FUNERAL SERVICES FOR MRS. F. J. HOWES

Funeral services for Mrs. Felicia Ennis Howes, wife of Frank J. Howes, department manager for the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company, were held yesterday at the Spiritualist church, 656 Barry avenue.

Mrs. Howes, who was the pastor of the Second Illinois Church of Fraternal Order of Spiritualists, was born in 1869, the daughter of the late James I. Ennis and sister of James I. Ennis Jr., attorney and handwriting expert; Calistus Ennis, former president of the Chicago real estate board; Stephen Ennis, head of the claim department of the Chicago surface lines, and Lullus Ennis, member of the Chicago board of trade.

He Denies Charges

H. H. Bigelow, St. Paul millionaire, who declares there is nothing of which he is ashamed in connection with his aiding Mme. Elizabeth Girenko, said to be a Russian noblewoman, now a manicurist in Chicago, to enter the United States.

[Underwood & Underwood Photo.]

Mrs. H. H. Bigelow, wife of rich St. Paul man, who has gained publicity by story of Chicago manicurist.

[Underwood & Underwood Photo.]

H. H. BIGELOW, St. Paul millionaire, yesterday issued a statement telling of his relations with Mme. Elizabeth Girenko, said to be a former member of the Russian court, now a manicurist here. Bigelow admits he helped Mme. Girenko to get to this country from Russia, but says there is nothing in the incident of which he is ashamed or which will not bear investigation.

Coincident with the publicity, Bigelow charges certain persons have been trying to extort money from him on inferences originating from his aid to the Russian widow.

Mme. Girenko's attorney, Andrew R. Sherriff, said yesterday his client never complained of the manner in which she was brought here by the St. Paul millionaire. Her complaints, the attorney said, were based on what had transpired since her arrival in this country.

OWNERS NOTIFIED TO VACATE FOR OGDEN WIDENING

Notices were mailed yesterday to 300 of the 500 property owners whose property will be taken during the first phase of the widening and extension of Ogden avenue. The notices inform owners that the city is ready to pay them for their property.

"We expect to start work on the improvement in two weeks," Michael J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements said. "All the property needed must be vacated by May 1."

The notices to vacate, issued by landlords to tenants, are having a serious effect on housing conditions in the Twenty-second ward, according to Ald. Arthur F. Albert, who said that twenty-four families have already come to him for advice concerning their notices.

Common Sense Never Lies

This restaurant is a place where people may come and buy pure food on the same common sense basis on which they purchase merchandise — where, by serving themselves, they secure the Most of the Best for the Least.

We want everyone who comes here to come here again and again and to keep on coming indefinitely. So, to that end we propose to make no mistakes—to allow no detail of excellence to fall off.

We know that people continue to come here because they have found it the best and most economical high-class eating place in Chicago (under the same ownership and management as the incomparable Rector's of earlier days). And we propose to always keep quality up, portions big (often ample for two) and prices down as low as careful merchandising and increasing volume will permit.

The prices following will confirm the above statements

Individual Apple, Raisin or Prune Pie—we make them and know they are good 10c

Bacon and Eggs (for breakfast)—2 fresh eggs (fried in butter to make them taste better) and 4 strips of delicious bacon 30c

Halibut and Peas 35c

Prime Roast Beef 40c

Fried Chicken—hot from the pan with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce, dark meat 55c
Breast of chicken, all white meat 65c

And don't hesitate to bring the "Kiddies." We like them and our food portions are so generous that the food they eat usually costs you nothing.

HARDING STILL FIRM FOR SALES TAX FOR BONUS

G. O. P. in House to Push Present Measure.

New Smyrna, Fla., March 11.—By the Associated Press.—Requests for President Harding's opinion on the latest proposal for a soldiers' bonus, as embodied in the bill introduced by Representative Fordney, and brought from officials close to Mr. Harding a reiteration of his position as outlined in his recent letter to Mr. Fordney suggesting a sales tax to raise the neccessary funds or else postponement of the legislation. No other statement administration officials said, had been authorized.

Plan Unchanged Bill.

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—Minor amendments will be made in the soldiers' bonus bill when the house ways and means committee meets on Monday, but the Republican leaders still intend to push the bill in substantially its present form, notwithstanding intimations from Florida that President Harding is displeased with the recent developments and may go so far as to veto the measure.

Representative Fordney, chairman of the committee, said today that two amendments of a minor nature are contemplated; one of them will provide that ex-service men have an indefinite time in which to choose between the different forms of compensation, instead of being allowed six months. The other relates to the administration of the section relating to land aid.

Much Depends on Speaker.

Mr. Fordney indicated that the program to call the bill up for action on the floor of the house on Monday, March 20, was dependent upon whether Speaker Gillett would recognize him for a motion to take it up on that day under a suspension of the rules. Speaker Gillett is with President Harding's party in Florida. If the speaker desired, he could block this program by refusing to grant recognition. A two-thirds vote would be necessary to take the bill up on "suspension" day, but Mr. Fordney is confident that there would be no difficulty on this score.

Court Blushes as Woman Takes Fine from Lisle Bank

Miss Bonnie Connors, 3602 South Halsted street, charged with disorderly conduct, caused embarrassment yesterday in Police Magistrate John F. Boyer's Evanston court when she took the money with which to pay her $25 fine from "The First National bank." William Lardner, in whose company Miss Connors was arrested, was fined $100 and costs last week for robbing telephone coin boxes. As he left the court yesterday he was arrested by federal agents, who say they found a quantity of morphine in his possession.

HENRY WILSON IS PUT IN CHARGE LICENSE BUREAU

HENRY WILSON.

Henry Wilson, for years supervising license inspector in the city health department, has been appointed by Ald. Anton J. Cermak to take charge of the city license bureau. He was ordered to make a survey of the system now in use with a view to rendering it impossible for employés in the collector's, clerk's, and health department offices to defraud the city of license fees. Three clerks are now under suspension.

Gen. Reyes Dies in Battle with Mexican Rebels

U. S. LAGS BEHIND ALLIES IN AIDING EX-SERVICE MEN

But American Gold Helps European Soldiers.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The United States is traveling far behind the procession in adjusting the compensation of ex-service men. Long ago, our allies in the war made provisions to cut down the economic handicap of their returned veterans. Some of the powers were helped in financing this relief by money that had been borrowed from the good old U. S. A.

Our debtor nations went about the economic rehabilitation of the ex-soldier and ex-sailor who had not been disabled quite naturally and as a matter of course as "an obligation of honor." But now that a similar settlement is urged in the United States, which came out of the war with the world owing it mountains of dough, opponents of the measure are yelling that it is a "raid on the treasury."

Canada as an Example.

Canada has a population only about as large as that of Illinois and Wisconsin combined. But it has already spent more than $260,000,000 in bonuses and land loans, outside of large sums for pensions, hospitalization, and other care of the disabled.

Spread over the entire population, Canada's bonus payments to its veterans have cost something over $31 per capita. Under America's bonus bill as it stood at Washington before the recent alterations, the cost to the public of the United States, if all veterans took the cash option, would amount to about $15 per capita. And this would be spread over three years.

At the maximum, if all the 4,565,700 veterans affected by the bill took the insurance plan option, the cost to the public would be about $50 per capital. This, however, would be scattered over twenty years.

If half the veterans took cash and half took the insurance plan, which is regarded as perhaps the best estimate, the cost to the public would be about $31 per capita, also spread over twenty years.

Australia paid its overseas fighting force the highest of all the combatants—$43.50 a month for privates, as compared with $33 a month for privates in the A. E. F. A few months ago Australia without any haggling or cheeseparing put forth another $50,000,000 loan for further measures in aid of ex-service men. It had already spent large sums in farm aid for veterans and in other compensation adjustments and had been carrying veterans unable to connect with jobs, paying them $10 to $15 a week until they hooked up with positions.

Australia Is Generous.

New Zealand has a population less than one-half that of Chicago. Recent figures show that New Zealand to date has spent $120,000,000 in reducing the economic handicap of its ex-service men. This includes $70,000,000 in loans to veterans for the purchase of land, buildings, agricultural stock, and equipment. New Zealand, too, has been paying 20,000 men a flat cash bonus on the basis of 35 cents a day for each day of service, many for periods of four years.

Long before the armistice Great Britain, France, Italy all took up the question of economic adjustment for the soldiers and sailors. England had home building propositions, employment insurance, colonization projects which gave transportation and a grubstake to soldiers who wanted to try their luck in the overseas dominions, and other features outside pensions, medical and rehabilitation aid for the disabled.

The United States, when the soldiers and sailors were discharged, paid every man $60 extra, amounting to the total sum of $256,239,000.

Italy, poverty stricken Italy, flat on its financial uppers, paid a cash gratuity to its private soldiers of from $54.75 to $63.69, according to length of service. France paid $74.31 to $187.21, depending on length of service; Great Britain paid $24.30 to $83.62; Canada paid $70 to $300 where there was no overseas duty. For overseas duty Canada paid from $280 for an unmarried man of one year's service up to $600 for a married man with three years' service. Great Britain, for overseas service, paid the soldier $24.30 to $140; Italy paid $34.74 to $63.89; Australia, $32.81 to $98.62.

Most of these countries in addition paid higher gratuities according to officers' rank, reaching in the case of Canada $2,928 to $4,758 for major generals.

The Greatest Automobile Value in America

Overland $550

Down to a New Fame-Making Price

History repeats! The same Overland that has won the enthusiasm of scores of thousands, today at its new low price is winning thousands of new owners.

Responsive, powerful, faithful, enduring—its freedom from trouble keeps down upkeep.

The perfection of its motor design, combined with its light weight, gives a gasoline mileage no other car can claim.

Its 130-inch spring suspension, unique to this car, gives it an easy comfort on any road which you look for only in heavy, higher priced cars.

Overland, Always a Good Investment, Now Is the Greatest Automobile Value in America

The all-steel body lasts years longer than other motor car bodies of equal weight. The baked enamel finish outlasts that of any other car near the price. The twenty-seven brake horsepower motor is equipped with Auto-Lite electric starter.

Its high quality equipment includes Timken roller bearings, New Departure ball bearings, Mather vanadium steel springs, Stewart-Warner speedometer, U. S. L. battery, three-speed and reverse transmission, electric horn and lights, real one-man top, demountable rims, tire carrier.

UNPAID TAXES ON PERSONALTY THIS YEAR $4,500,000

This Is Amount County Is Unable to Collect.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Probably the unpaid personal property taxes will reach the enormous sum of $4,500,000 in Cook county this year.

This amount refers in no way to the huge total of personal property which escapes taxation altogether. The $4,500,000 are taxes which have been assessed—now on the books—but will not be collected.

However, the little real estate owner must pay. The man with a cottage and lot will be forced to settle. Nor is there any escapable way from real estate taxes for the renter. The tenent will be compelled to pay his taxes in his rent.

The total personal property taxes of the county are estimated at $30,000,000. That is $10 for each man, woman, and child living in the county. Of the total taxes it is fair to predict that 15 per cent will not be collected.

Would Be Above Average.

That assumes that County Treasurer Carr will do better than the average for the last five years. If he does not, the unpaid personal property taxes will reach $5,000,000. If he does as badly as the worst year in the last five, 1916, the uncollected taxes will total $7,200,000.

In the last five years the personal property taxes assessed have totaled $100,840,407, and of this total $16,685,706 have not been collected. After the town and county collectors collected all they could they referred taxes totaling $16,685,706 to the state's attorney for collection. His accomplishments in this line have not been much to brag about.

The reasons for the failure to collect are several. But among the principal reasons are three as follows:

1. Refusal to pay, because the property owner believed that collection would not be forced, and because owner deemed the amount unfair and inequitable.
2. Inability to pay.
3. Slipshod assesments. Tax levied after owner had moved away or gone out of business.

Increase in Complaints.

The complaints received by the county treasure to date indicate that a larger number than ordinarily say they haven't the cash with which to pay their taxes this year. The protests against the 42 per cent tax increase this year arrive by the hundreds daily.

Altogether these letters indicate that three to five times as many people are interested in taxes this year as in previous years. There was a period when no serious attempt was made to assess household goods of less than $300 in value, on the theory that the cost of collection would be more than the tax. But that was in the day when the tax on $300 worth of property was only $2, when the assessed value was one-fifth of the full value and the tax rate was $3.50 per $100 assessed value.

Now it is different. The assessed value is one-half of the full value, and in certain sections the rate is $7.64. Now $300 worth of property means a tax of $11.46. Many thousands are assessed this year on much less than $300 full valuation.

An indication of the way the wind is blowing is the progress on collections. Up to March 10 last year approximately $9,000,000 was collected out of $24,306,983 personal property taxes. A smaller amount has been collected this year out of $30,000,000. One reason assigned by Assistant Treasurer Lindheimer for the light collections was the tardiness of the state tax commission in completing its task. But there is also the additional reason—property owners dislike the 42 per cent tax increase.

FOUND UNCONSCIOUS; REVIVED.

John Cameus, 83 years old, 3310 Auburn avenue, was found unconscious yesterday in the gas filled bathroom of his home. Police found a defect in a gas heater in the room. They revived Cameus.

This Family Makes Its Reading Count

The Man

Here is a typical active minded family. The father with his evening paper, the wife and son with their particular reading.

The man comes across an article on the financial situation. Although he is acquainted in general with finance, his knowledge is not specific on certain phases of this subject or economics.

He decides to put his newly purchased set of the Encyclopaedia Britannica to the test. There he finds not only a thorough survey on all subjects bearing on finance, economics, statistics, politics and government, but he is able to obtain definite information on any phase of these subjects.

Here he finds not a dry academic study, but an intensely interesting review written by men who know thoroughly the subjects they write about. He reads point after point which has never occurred to him before which bears directly on the vital financial and industrial questions of the day. Naturally the fresh, unhackneyed, intelligent viewpoints of these articles delight him. He gets in a few minutes the kind of facts which make his conversation on these subjects "different" and, what is more important, he has a real basis for arriving at an intelligent conclusion on these vital subjects of the day.

The Woman

An advertisement of a fur sale catches the wife's eye. She needs a new set of furs or a fur coat and is eager to save money by buying it now. But how can she tell whether the fur she will look at is genuine or not—or must she take a salesman's word for it? She turns to the Britannica for information, though she is very skeptical about an encyclopaedia acting as a shopping guide.

You can imagine her amazement to find there over seventy furs described in detail—their sources, sizes, colors, special markings, uses, values. She chooses the ones which specially interest her, learns their fine points, what imitations are on the market, and lastly, studies the tables comparing their durability and weight. After this she feels that, for the first time in her life, she can buy furs intelligently.

The Boy

The high school boy, with his eye always on the lookout for interesting articles on sports and animals, sees an article about a fish that he had never heard of. He has learned the usefulness of the Britannica from his father. He hardly thinks that an encyclopaedia will contain information interesting to him about this particular kind of fish, but he is willing to find out whether the Britannica can help him in unusual ways.

He is fascinated to learn that the Britannica gives him information about not only this fish but others he has been wanting to know about. Later in the evening he curiously looks to see whether football is covered in the Britannica and, to his great delight, he finds here an article written by Walter Camp, and he, too, gets a new vision of the usefulness of the Britannica.

This family is only one of thousands whose members are daily surprised and pleased at the great wealth of practical and pertinent information in

THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA

This extraordinary work was prepared with the purpose of giving to everybody, no matter what their position in life, business occupation or profession, information which will be valuable in their daily work and play. For the man the Britannica contains thousands of articles on such subjects as engineering, railways, flying machines, chemistry, physics, architecture; for the woman the Britannica tells about education, physiology, domestic science, hygiene, art, music, literature and numerous other subjects; for the child it answers thousands of questions that come to a boy's or girl's active mind and supplements school studies.

The Encyclopedia Britannica, both in the beautiful Cambridge Issue and the popular Handy Volume Issue, is sold for a small amount down and moderate monthly payments. Send for the large illustrated booklet describing the Britannica and giving complete prices and terms of payment on which this wonderful work may be purchased.

We have established at 736 So. Michigan Ave. a Reading Room and Exhibit, where complete sets in all bindings in both the Cambridge and Handy Volume Issues are on display. You are invited to come here and consult the Britannica on any subject, whether or not you are interested in purchasing a set. A courteous attendant will answer your questions and give you further information regarding the Britannica. Sets may also be seen and orders given at our store, 341 So. Dearborn St.

"Isn't there SOME place where a Man can call his Soul his Own?"

How often you've said at the end of a discouraging day: "I'm going some place where living and working conditions are better ---where I can prosper and my family can live in sunshine like regular human beings."

You Men Who Work With Brain and Brawn—Here Is Your Answer

Whether you work for wages or a salary—whether you wear overalls or a white collar—this message is the answer to your question.

Every man has a right to better working and living conditions, and he owes it not only to himself but to his wife and children. You haven't much chance in a city or town that has already grown to its limit. You can't make money any place unless money is there—unless things are going ahead, and prosperity is ahead and not behind you.

Come and Grow Prosperous in Richmond—"The Pay Roll City"

Richmond—located on San Francisco Bay with the finest land-locked harbor in the world, is the Wonder City of the West, considering its age. Twenty years ago, a group of four frame houses—today a prosperous manufacturing and residence city of over 25,000 people. Read the "You can't contradict these Facts" column on this page for some of the advantages of Richmond.

The climate of Richmond, the clear bracing salt air, the continuous sunshine, put "pep" and hustle and go into you. The pure, invigorating air makes it a joy to breathe. Your children don't play in the shadows—they get sun-tanned out in the open spaces.

Richmond is growing and expanding so rapidly that values are getting higher and higher all the time. So much so that within a very short time the average man will not be able to buy inside downtown property. But today you can buy it and pay for it easily out of your monthly pay checks.

A Few Hundred Dollars Invested Now—and a Bungalow Home Later

In dealing with us, you are not dealing with "promoters." We are the owners and you deal with us direct. The big estate we own, in one of the most attractive locations right in the city of Richmond, has now been sub-divided and is being offered for sale on terms well within the reach of the pocketbook of the man who works.

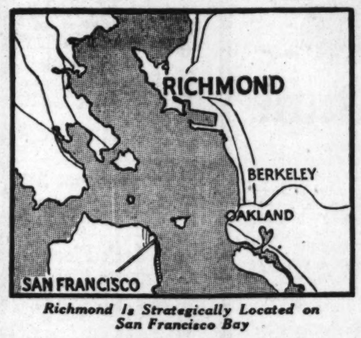
All of these home site lots are level, well drained and admirably situated, overlooking the Bay.

You can buy this valuable property now. It is within your reach. Either as an investment or for actual home building, these home sites are offered at exceptionally low prices, ranging from $500 and up according to location. Those who come first will be awarded the best locations in each price range.

Building costs as well as living costs are reasonable in Richmond.

When you are ready to build we will, if you wish, arrange the construction for you at a definite saving.

Richmond is ready to welcome you now—or you can select your homesite now and move whenever you are ready—this year, or five years from now.



Richmond Is Strategically Located on San Francisco Bay

Do You Love to Hunt, Fish and Motor?

You will be surprised and delighted to find mallard and teal duck hunting within a half hour's distance from Richmond on upper San Pablo Bay. A little further in the Sacramento Valley is a hunter's paradise.

San Francisco Bay always affords an opportunity for good fishing. Gamy trout, black bass and salmon are plentiful in the fresh mountain streams nearby.

From Richmond radiate wonderful scenic motor roads, leading you and your family to an enjoyable day's outing—along the beautiful shores of San Francisco Bay, into gemlike valleys, green hills and redwood forests and the pastoral mountains of the Coast Range.

We Want Two-Fisted Men in "The Pay Roll City"

We want men to come and prosper with Richmond—men who are too ambitious to stick in the rut. We want two-fisted men who know how to drive a nail or run a lathe as well as sign a check. You may be running a small store, or a street car, or a printing press. You may be walking a beat or tied to a desk. You may be in the factories, mills or shops. You may be wearing kid gloves and worrying about next month's rent. You may have loved ones who need the healthful climate of California. But whoever and wherever you are, if you want to be able to call your soul your own, you are the man who will succeed here. You are the man who will enjoy this wonderful opportunity to get ahead and KEEP AHEAD!

Money Back Guarantee 60 Day Investigation—Inspection

We have so much of our own money invested in Richmond that we cannot afford to have a single dissatisfied buyer. We protect you with a 60-day investigation or inspection clause. If you don't find everything to be exactly as represented, we will cheerfully refund your initial payment.

Further to protect you, we have taken out at our own expense a Title Insurance policy in the Oakland Title Insurance and Guaranty Co., covering the sale of each lot. This insures the delivery of a clear title.

You Are Not Too Late

Richmond is just going over the top—you are not too late. In a few years you will look back to 1922 in Richmond as days when you should have made your "big strike" in real estate. Right now you can become a Richmond real estate owner out of your monthly pay checks.

GRID RULES BODY KILLS GOAL KICK ON A TOUCHDOWN

Coaches Favor Change as Aid to Game.

NEW GOAL KICK RULE

NEW YORK, March 11.—Although not put in final form, the draft of the new rule governing the scoring of the extra point after a football touchdown, follows:

GOAL FROM TOUCHDOWN—When a touchdown has been made, the side scoring the touchdown has possession of the ball anywhere on or outside the five yard line for a scrimmage, from which by any legal play, as from an ordinary scrimmage, pass, kick, or run, they may score a field goal or touchdown, and the score of any character shall net them one point.

If the attacking side makes a foul or illegal or incompleted pass, or other play, they lose their chance for the one point following a touchdown.

If the defending side offends the rules the score of one point shall be awarded to the attacking team.

New York, March 11.—Abolition of the goal kick after touchdown and the substitution of a play from a line of scrimmage, on or back of the five yard line of a defending eleven, was announced today by the Intercollegiate football rules committee. In addition, clarifying changes in the rules concerning shift plans and the practice of clipping were made.

WALTER CAMP.

Abolishing the trial for goal after touchdown is the most radical step in changing the gridiron code since the introduction of the forward pass in 1906. The new legislation was recommended by the Association of American Football Coaches, following its meeting here last December.

W. K. Hall, Dartmouth, was reelected chairman of the rules committee and Walter Camp secretary and editor of the rules.

Change Kickoff Rule.

In regard to the change in the shift ruling, the opinion of some football men was that it would tend to put a damper on the playing style of some of the leading western college elevens, especially that of Notre Dame, whose puzzling shifts have rendered the defense of opposing teams weaker for several years. The new legislation on the shift play, in its rough draft, reads:

SHIFT PLAY—In all shift plays "both feet stationary on ground" is interpreted to mean that sufficient momentary pause occur as to admit of officials seeing that the play is legal and that the ball was not snapped while the men were in motion. It is the intention of the rule that when a man shifts to a new position he shall come to a full stop, so that all momentum is lost, and make a new start from a position of rest when the ball is put in play.

The initial kickoff regulation was altered, so that if the side winning the toss selects the goal, the other team has the choice of either kicking or receiving.

Numbering Rule Tabled.

No action was taken on the proposal to make the numbering of players mandatory.

Rules governing substitutions were changed so that a player cannot return to the field in the same half in which he is removed. It is not necessary that he should return at the beginning of a period.

The "one man in motion" regulation was rewritten so that any player leaving the scrimmage line before play begins, must be at least five yards behind the line when the ball is snapped.

Among the rulings approved by the committee was one that officials should whistle as soon as convinced that the ball had crossed the goal line.

Howard Jones Favors Rule.

Iowa City, Ia., March 11.—Director of Athletics Howard Jones and Assistant Football Coach Jimmy Ashmore of the University of Iowa said today:

"The old goal kick scoging method was too easy. It depended too much upon the individual efforts of a single player. Under the new rule it appears that it is going to be more difficult to score this one point. It will depend upon the efforts of the entire team."

"No Benefit to Game."—Yost.

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 11.—Coach Fielding H. Yost of Michigan today declared that the change in football rules eliminating the free trial for goal after a touchdown "would be of no benefit to the game."

Yost declared "It will have a tendency to make victories hang upon a single point and the element of chance will enter largely into close contests. Teams scoring touchdowns will have about one chance in three of scoring an additional point. It is probable most teams will resort to attempts at field goals."

"More Offensive Strategy."

Columbus, O., March 11.—Dr. John W. Wilce, football coach at Ohio State, declared today that the new football rules abolishing a try for goal after a touchdown should result in "more offensive strategy," which in turn should make a more spectacular game

PURPLE BASKET COACH TO BE NAMED TODAY; PAGE'S NAME DENIED

ATHLETIC Director Dana Evans of Northwestern university last night said he will announce the name of the new basketball coach and assistant football coach today. Evans declared the new coach will prove to be well known in college athletics, but denied that "Pat" Page, now coach at Butler college, is the man.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

What is your opinion of the plan under consideration by school board athletic authorities in this city, New York, Detroit, Cleveland, and Milwaukee for intercity meetings in baseball, football, swimming, and track, as well as skating?

Where Asked.

At North Michigan and Chicago avenues.

The Answers.

Fred Fletcher, 848 Sheridan road, chauffeur—There is no question at all about the proposed plan for intercity athletic contests being a good one. It is well known that active work in sports is one of the best means to develop the growing boy, and the interest due to intercity competition would encourage a larger number of boys to take up athletic work.

Lewis Layton, 2910 Logan boulevard, candy manufacturer—I think the idea of intercity meets is a good one for many reasons. I think such action as this would prove beneficial to the common spirit in athletics and would encourage the spirit of friendly rivalry and good sportsmanship between cities.

William Keller, 1106 North Wells street, mechanic—The proposed plan is a good one, and one can't help wondering why such a plan was not put into effect years ago. I remember that while in high school the boys wanted this sort of competition. If this is carried out, and it should be, it will not only show what the boys of the various cities can do, but it will show the differences in their training.

George Cullom, 611 Barry avenue, accountant—Seems to me the most important thing in a boy's life is physical activity. The accompanying development must be directed along right lines. The boy on the street or one who spends too much time in the poolroom is not gaining much of value. Intercity competition is just what we need. Let's have it.

Michael C. Doocy, 1210 N. State street, clerk—The proposed plan for intercity meets is fine. Our city boys need all the encouragement we can give them to take an active part in athletic sports. The chance to take a trip to another city to take part in a contest would mean a lot to any boy.

GRENDA-REGGIE WIN 6 DAY BIKE RACE IN GOTHAM

New York, March 11.—The American-Australian team of Alfred Grenda and Reggie McNamara won the spring six day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden, which ended tonight. The team traveled 2,407 miles and 9 laps and took 504 points in the sprint races.

The American team of Taylor and Kaiser was second, 2,407 miles, 9 laps and 374 points. Taylor and Kaiser gained a lap in the last twenty minutes of the race, which gave them second place on points. Brocco and De Ruyter finished third, Egg and Eaton, fourth, and Goulett and Madden, fifth.

WILLS' K. O. BLOW NOT "PHANTOM"

New York, March 11.—That the blow with which Harry Wills put away Kid Norfolk in their recent encounter was no phantom punch, was proved when X-ray pitcures made of Wills' hand were developed today. The New Orleans boxer's hand was considerably jarred by the impact with Norfolk's chin, but no bones are pictured broken.

Illini Beat Iowa on Mat and Win Big Ten Title

Urbana, Ill., March 11.—[Special.]—Illinois won a claim to the Big Ten wrestling championship tonight when it defeated Iowa in a dual meet, 34 to 8. Capt. Esslinger of Illinois won the only fall of the meet, pinning Hunter by a bar arm hold in 11:15. Two events were draws and the Illini won the other three on decisions. Illinois annexed the championship, finishing the season with a clean slate of six victories.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Remarkable pole vaulting by E. E. "Laddie" Meyers of the Chicago A. A. and Eddie Knourek of the I. A. C., who established a new world's record on boards of 12 feet 8¼ inches, featured the twenty-sixth annual indoor handicap track and field games of the 131st infantry, formerly 1st regiment, concluded late last night in the Michigan avenue armory.

EDDIE KNOUREK. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The evenly balanced team of the Chicago A. A. developed by S. H. ["Doc"] Darwent captured team honors with 62 points. The Illinois A. C. was second with 32 and the University of Chicago, third with 21. In rolling up their total, Cherry Circle performers scored in twelve of the fourteen events.

Barely Miss at 13 Feet.

In making their record, Meyers and Knourek gave a wonderful exhibition of vaulting. Their form on all vaults was almost perfect, and when the bar rested at 13 feet, each missed by the narrowest of margins. Their pull-ups and fling-aways were perfect, while their runs were hard and sure.

A few years back Knourek and Percy ["Red"] Graham of the C. A. A. established an indoor world's record of 12 feet 10¾ inches at Patten gymnasium. This mark, however, was made off the dirt. According to Frank Martin, official handicapper of the Central A. A. U., the best former record for vaulting off boards was held by Walter Dray, a former Yale athlete, who made his mark when competing under Cherry Circle colors.

Two World Marks in Meet.

During the two days' meet two world records were established. Last Friday night, when preliminaries and finals in four events were held, Tom Hoskins of the C. A. A. hung up a mark of 31 feet 1 inch in the standing hop, step, and jump. The old record of 30 feet 3 inches had stood since 1894.

Individual honors of the meet went to Dewey Alberts, former University of Illinois athlete, who competed for C. A. A. This Cherry Circle star scored 11 points by winning the standing broad jump, standing hop, step, and jump, and finishing fourth in the running high jump.

Raymond Hass, freshman at University of Chicago, who competed unattached, scored 10 points by winning the 40 yard dash and 40 yard low hurdles. Joie Ray of the I. A. C. also scored ten markers by winning both the one mile and two mile runs.

Home Regiment Is Victor.

Outside of the two record breaking performances, marks were not seriously threatened. The handicapping resulted in most of the handicapped contestants defeating the scratch performers after interesting competition.

Representatives of the 131st infantry romped away with honors in events held for the Illinois national guard. Athletes of this unit, formerly the 1st regiment, scored 60 points against 13 for the 202d artillery.

Oak Park took first place in the high school events with 13 points. In the relay race, Goodwillie, the last runner for University High, dropped the baton on the last relay, when his team was on even terms with Oak Park. This mishap spoiled what would have been an interesting race.

Credit to "Ollie" Steele.

It was an interesting meet, and Maj. Oliver D. Steele, athletic officer of the 131st infantry, is deserving of credit. Summaries:

THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT

SPEED AND PEP, KILLEFER'S CRY TO YOUNGSTERS

All Must Hustle to Win Place on Team.

Irving Vaughan, Tribune baseball writer, has started to "gallop" around the circuit of major league training camps to ascertain the condition of the teams and their prospects in the approaching pennant races. The first article of this series, which concerns the Cubs, is herewith presented.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Avalon, Catalina Island, Cal., March 11.—[Special.]—"Hustlers and youngsters." That was the burden of Manager Bill Killefer's song right from the day he assembled his Cub squad in camp. It will continue to be his song until the very moment the National league race gets under way April 12. In other words, the new blood will be given every chance to make the grade, and there will be no places for the old men who loaf on the job simply because they feel their job is secure. To date there have been no slackers.

BILL KILLEFER.

When Manager Bill started west with his men he was not given to any thoughts of winning a flag. Ball teams undergoing reconstruction do not accomplish such feats. All that Bill hopes for is a break in the luck and a berth in the first division. To accomplish the latter the Cubs will have to travel a treacherous trail successfully; but even if they fail they will be an interesting club simply because the development of youngsters always is an interesting process.

Pitchers Require Test.

As is always the case with ball teams, pitchers are the big item in Manager Bill's list of worries. There has been a flock of them out here trying to win fame, and some of the new ones have shown impressively; but one can never dope a hurler until he has been under big league fire. A mound toiler may have all the stuff in the world in practice, but only a real championship battle determines whether or not he possesses the noodle and the spunk.

At this stage of the training it is practically a certainty that five of last year's pitchers and one new one will comprise the regular staff. The hangovers are Alexander, Martin, Jones, Cheeves, and Freeman. The new man is Vic Aldridge of the Los Angeles club. He is being counted upon for a great deal, and in view of the skill he displayed as a Coast leaguer it is not far fetched to say he may prove Killefer's most consistent winner.

Jones Shows Class.

The Cub pilot is satisfied Jones, Freeman, and Cheeves have reached the stage where the best will come out. Toward the end of last season Jones, a left hander with a world of foolers, began to produce. He apparently profited by what he had experienced during the race. Cheeves and Freeman last season were somewhat erratic, but their faults have been worked on during the stay here. If they remember their lessons all will be well.

Killefer figures on carrying nine hurlers, so there is room for three youngsters. Two of the places are fairly certain to go to Tony Kaufman, the Chicago boy who pitched for Winnipeg last year, and the other to Ernest Osborne, the giant from Atlanta. So far they have made good impressions. The other vacancy probably will be a case of survival between George Stueland of Sioux Falls, S. D., and Vic Keen, from Maryland university. Both these lads have much to learn.

Weakness in Three Spots.

Getting away from the pitchers, the Cubs apparently are fairly well fixed in all but three spots. Not figuring on any phenoms turning up, there appears to be a weakness in the catching department, at first base, and at second. The possibilities of filling in satisfactorily at these posts are excellent, but Killefer will need more time in which to make his final selections.

With Killefer planning to work only when a youngster is pitching, the bulk of the catching will fall on Bob O'Farrell, not a sensational player and by no means a poor one. Beyond this pair the Cubs have nothing except three rookies—Charles Hartnett, from Worcester, Mass.; Elwood Wirts, from Rochester, N. Y., and Hugh McMullen, the Los Angeles semi-pro. Killefer thinks Wirts is a comer, and he probably will be retained, but it will take many days of work to finish him off.

Grimes Must Fight for Job.

At first base Ray Grimes will perform again, if neither Harvey Cotter or Walter Golvin can shove him away. Grimes, however, faces real competition. Both Cotter and Golvin are flashy left handed fielders and fast on their feet. One of the two will be kept as a utility first sacker, and the survivor is sure to be given a chance before the season is many days old. If he hits the big time hurling he will be a fixture. The defect in Grimes is his lack of speed, but he can wallop the ball.

The second base job involves a num-

The Wisconsin basketball team closed the Big Ten season last night with a 31 to 24 victory over Chicago in a closely contested game in Bartlett gym. Wisconsin had a 3 point margin at the half, 16 to 13, and the victory put the team in a tie with Michigan for second position. It left the Maroons in a triple tie for sixth.

The work of Caesar and Taylor won the game for the Badgers. These two carried the ball through the Chicago defense and shot the majority of baskets. Several times the Maroon guards were caught unready, and the star Badger forwards, getting the ball from long passes by Gibson or Tebell, made easy shots under the hoop.

McGuire's work at shooting free throws saved the Maroons from a worse defeat. With the exception of Dickson, no man on the Midway team made more than one basket. Lineup:

RECORD EXCELLED AS BADGERS BEAT IOWA ON TRACK

Madison, Wis., March 11.—[Special.]—Wisconsin defeated Iowa in a dual track meet, 52 1-3 to 33 2-3. The Hawkeyes were strong in the sprints and distance runs, but were outclassed in field events. Knollin, who was expected to lead in the dashes for Wisconsin, did not place in the 40, and stumbled in the hurdles.

Brookins was the best Iowan, taking two firsts. The feature of the meet was the high jump, in which Platten, Wisconsin, went over the bar at 6 feet 4⅝ inches, bettering the conference record.

LOWE-CAMPBELL FIVE WINS TITLE

Kansas City, Mo., March 11.—The Lowe-Campbell team of Kansas City won the 1922 National A. A. U. basketball championship here tonight by defeating Kansas City A. C., last year's champion, 42 to 28. Third place in the tournament was won by Southwestern college of Winfield, Kas., which defeated the Indianapolis Y. M. C. A., 35 to 22.

McAuliffe Has Beckett's Contract to Box Dempsey

SOUTHAMPTON, England, March 11.—[United Press.]—Jack McAuliffe, retired undefeated lightweight champion, sailed today for the United States, taking with him the contract of Joe Beckett, British heavyweight champion, who has signed to meet Jack Dempsey for the world's title. Beckett wants to go to America for the bout.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

CLUBS—AND COLLEGE ATHLETES.

DEAR WAKE: Don't you think Rule XIII. of the Western Conference code the most unjust of the eligibility rules? It states:

A student shall be ineligible to represent his college in athletic contests who engages in such contests as a representative of any athletic organization not connected with his college, whether in term time or vacation. The question of professionalism does not enter into consideration of this regulation.

Both the eastern and Pacific coast college bodies permit their track men to compete during summer vacation as members of athletic organizations. By doing this they receive coaching from outside coaches.

Does The Wake know the reason for this rule? Amateur Athlete.

The first part of this rule was proposed by Prof. Pattingill of Michigan when Ralph Rose was a student there. A Chicago club wished to use Rose, and possibly one or two more athletes, at games in New York during the winter season. Michigan objected. We're not positive, but we think Rose competed anyway. Soon afterward the rule was adopted.

The Wake can see no objections to college men representing athletic clubs during the collegiate year. In the summer it often has been a handicap to the Chicago A. A. and Illinois A. C. not to use Big Ten men in their efforts to win national honors against eastern and far western clubs able to draw from the college ranks.

Poker Series—The Eight Hand Game.

I loathe the nap who sends his regrets
When asked, and the first to arrive,
Along with a mate whose coming upsets
My plans for a quorum of five.

A session of six congenial friends
With a penchant for action is fine;
With seven, some pleasure the pastime extends;
But at eight we should draw the line.

We'll say, for example, four players stay,
With yourself the last on the list;
It's cracked for the limit, you're rarin' to play,
With two pretty kings in your fist.

The first calls for three, the next knave draws four,
Next three, and, finally, two;
You're sent to the discard, the deck is no more,
And you know, before drawing, you're through.

"Town Ball."

Sir: Town ball was in vogue when I went to school in Michigan, some forty-odd year ago. There could be any number of players on a side, from three to as many as could stand in the field without interfering with one another.

There were no basemen. The base runners were "crossed out" by having the ball thrown in front of them. If they were more than half way to the next base, they were out. Otherwise the ball had to be passed back of the runner to prevent his return to the base he had left. W. Seedy.

San Antonio, Tex., March 11.—[Special.]—The good folks started for home this afternoon, but were called back to see the White Sox and Giants run into a ten inning tie which was stopped by darkness. The score was five all.

The Sox were leading in the ninth with two Giants out when Boone dribbled the ball towards first. Shovel Hodge fielded it and the patrons swarmed on the field. Brick Owens called it foul, and all hands returned to their seats to see Boone triple, scoring Meusel with the tying run.

Hooper Swings for Circuit.

Hooper drove a homer over the left field fence in the third off V. Barnes' delivery. Shinners plunked Acosta for a homer to left in the fourth.

In the fifth Young singled and Frisch poled a liner that Hooper should have caught, but he stubbed his toe and the ball rolled for the circuit. This break ruined the Sox. Bubser scored for the Hose again in the sixth on being hit, a wild pitch, and an error. Hooper scored in the seventh on a force out, a steal, a wild pitch, and a double steal with Strunk.

Errors by Johnson and Schalk gave Young a run in the seventh.

Hodge Weakens in Ninth.

The Sox started out to win the game in the ninth when McClellan and Strunk doubled and Leifer and Bubser singled for a pair of runs, but Hodge weakened in the last half and the Giants knotted the tally.

Acosta, the Cuban midget, pitched well for five innings.

Word was received today that Pitcher Charles Robertson will join the Sox Monday. He has been coaching the A. and M. college team. Robertson was in Minneapolis last season. He is the player who caused the Sox to be fined $1,750 by Judge Landis for covering up.

The Sox and Giants meet here again tomorow, when Faber will try out his arm for Gleason's men.

CUBS' GAME OFF

ber of possibilities. Barney Friberg, after seasoning at Kansas City, is going to be tried there. He is a big, active fellow, who can perform well in either the outfield or infield. When with the Cubs before he was weak on curve balls, but it is said he has overcome this deficiency. If so it will be a tough matter to get the position away from him. He is sure to be retained, however, because of his value as a utility man.

Hollocher May Go to Second.

Another aspirant for second sack honors is Joe Klugman, from the Springfield, Mo., club. He is a big, ungainly athlete on the order of Hans Wagner, but doesn't appear to have much speed. There also is a chance of Charles Hollocher being moved into the place from short. This would be brought about should Carter Elliott, a good fielder, prove strong enough at bat to be worth placing in Hollocher's present berth. Elliott is inexperienced, but will be employed for utility work if he can eclipse Klugman and Bernie Viveiros, who played at Calgary, Can., last season.

Practically all the other positions are already fixed. John Kelleher, in whom Killefer has a great deal of faith, will be at third. The much advertised Arnold Statz will endeavor to live up to his advance notices as a center fielder, hitter, and base runner. Hack Miller is a certainty for left field, and while he isn't speedy he will be protected to a certain extent by having Statz play alongside of him. Miller's forte is his long hitting.

Flack to Play Right.

A flock of athletes are striving for right field, but when the gong rings it is reasonably certain Max Flack will be out there. For utility fly chasers Turner Barber and George Maisel probably will be retained. Martin Callaghan, last year at Worcester, Mass., also has a chance as an extra man, but he's a long shot at the best.

As for a batting order, Killefer intends to put Statz in the lead-off rôle. The $100,000 beauty is a hard man to pitch to and bats either right or left. Flack, who held the top place in many battles, will be dropped to fifth place, and Killefer thinks he will be a better batter in this notch. The cleanup job, fourth place, will be assigned to Miller, a right handed hitter.

Team to Be Well Drilled.

One thing is certain about the team, whether it finishes last or better—that is, that it will be well drilled. Killefer is seeing to that. He is working his men on plays and working them day after day on the same one. He also is trying to get all there is to have in the way of base running, and it is certain he will have a club that will be speedy. He also will have a good fielding aggregation, but the hitch appears in the batting and pitching strength, particularly the latter.

18 FIVES ASKED TO COMPETE IN PREP TOURNEY

Eighteen teams have been invited to compete in the fourth annual national interscholastic basketball tournament of University of Chicago, to be held at Bartlett gym April 5, 6, 7, and 8. The teams are:

Boone, Cedar Rapids, and Sioux City, Ia.; Austin and Stillwater, Minn.; Crosby High of Waterbury, Conn.; Scott High of Toledo; Kalamazoo, Mich. Central; Union High of Grand Rapids; Forz High of Nashville, Tenn.; the winner of the University of Kentucky tournament; the winner of the Wisconsin tournament; the winner of the Illinois tournament; Lane Tech, Austin, Oak Park, and New Trier.

These teams will represent the best high school talent in the east, south, and middle west, being chosen according to their winnings. Each team has been required to present records of their games, and the amateur status of their players.

Last year the tournament was won by the Cedar Rapids team, which defeated Crosby in the final game.

ROCKFORD FIVE BEATS NEW TRIER IN FINAL, 34-24

Aurora, Ill., March 11.—[Special.]—Rockford High defeated New Trier, Cook county entry, in the final of the northern Illinois district basketball tournament tonight, 34 to 24, and will represent the Aurora district in the state tournament at Urbana. In the semi-finals this afternoon Rockford defeated Elgin, 41 to 25, and New Trier eliminated La Salle, 22 to 8.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

New Orleans, La., March 11.—[Special.]—Doubtless there are many of the older generation of baseball fans of today who have watched the playing of the game for the fifty years or more it has existed, and whose judgment on selecting an all star team of all time might be better than the younger followers of the sport, who never saw the old timers and who may be prejudiced in favor of the modern athletes.

JIM CRUSINBERRY. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Consequently it is a difficult matter for one who has seen the game only since the late 90s to choose a team and be sure that he has not overlooked some great one of the 70s or 80s. However, in picking this team the writer held conferences with several old-timers, some who had looked at the game as far back as 1880 and some who played it during the late 80s and 90s. It may be that a lot of fans will take exception to some of the choices, but there is no way of assembling such teams and proving which is the best.

Matty for Pitcher.

Picking the one pitcher that stood out above all others was no easy matter, for away back there was Radbourne and Clarkson and Keefe. Later came McGinnity, Mathewson, Walsh, Johnson, Waddell, and a dozen others. After sifting all of them down Christy Mathewson, once of the New York Giants, was selected as the man greatest of them all, because of his long service, character, and marvelous ability.

Many of the modern fans may think there never was a catcher the equal of Ray Schalk of the White Sox. Some of the old timers who saw games in the 80s will name Mike Kelly. But largely because of expert advice of a man who played fifteen to twenty years ago the man picked is Johnny Kling of the Cubs during their championship days of 1906, 1907, and 1908. Kling not only was a great backstop and batter, but has been rated as one of the smartest men who ever wore the mask.

Chance Greatest First Sacker.

There have been many great first basemen from the time of Charley Comiskey and Capt. Anson down to George Sisler, but the palm has been handed to Frank Chance, who led the famous Chicago Cubs to four pennants. He was the greatest all around player among the first basemen, though many Sisler advocates may dispute it. Chance was a leader as well as a hitter, fielder, and base runner.

In the old days there were stars at second base, especially Fred Pfeffer, who played with Anson in Chicago, but there never was a man who could field, run, and hit as well as Eddie Collins of the present day White Sox. Larry Lajoie, ten years with Cleveland, was a great hitter and a good fielder. Johnny Evers was as smart and a great a fielder, but Collins has served more than fifteen years and still is a leader.

Wagner at Shortstop.

There will be few who will dispute the right of Hans Wagner, the famous Pittsburgh player, to hold the honor of shortstop. He was a leader in all departments of the game. Perhaps his nearest rival was Hughie Jennings, who starred with the famous Baltimore Orioles of the 90s.

Jimmy Collins, who performed with the Boston Americans when they were champions in 1903 and 1904, and who had starred previously to that time, is given the third base honors ahead of a lot of great ones, including Bill Bradley, with Cleveland fifteen years ago; McGraw, who starred with Baltimore, and Frank Baker, who still is in harness with the Yanks.

Ruth, Cobb, in Outfield.

The outfielders are not hard to pick because nine-tenths of the experts, young and old, will say at once that it is impossible to leave Babe Ruth and Ty Cobb off such a team. Without any hesitancy these two are named for left and right respectively. Ruth is the wonder of all times as a long distance hitter as well as being a capable fielder and base runner. Cobb is the greatest of them all in base running and one of the greatest hitters of all time, as well as the most spectacular all around player of them all.

Selecting a third man wasn't so easy because, besides Tris Speaker of modern times there are such old timer stars as Bill Lange, Ed Delehanty, Mike Donlin, Jimmy Ryan, and a dozen more listed among the great ones. After conferring with some experts both old and young the place was handed to Lange, who was with Chicago in the late 90s and rated as a leader in hitting, base running, and fielding.

Those who are not satisfied with this team may select one of their own.

ST. PATS, 21; ST. MEL, 3.

CUBS CANCEL GAME WITH VERNON TIGERS

spring up when least expected poured all morning, forcing Vernon Tigers to cancel their scheduled game with the Cubs today. The Bruins will try to play the game tomorrow, then return to Catalina Island on Monday morning.

Although the Chicagoans lost the opening game to Portland, enough good was noted to offset the temporary annoyance. The outfield, consisting of Flack, Miller and Statz, contributed hits and played nicely together. This fellow Statz is as finished a gardener as ever entered the majors and if he shows any inclination to hit should have a long, spectacular career with the Cubs.

Second base continues to remain the problem that most absorbs Killefer's attention. It will have to be solved satisfactorily if the Cubs hope to make a dent in the race.

WITH ROOKS AND REGULARS

Mineral Wells, Tex., March 11.—Influenza has invaded the camp of the Reds. George Harper, recruit garden prospect, was unable to accompany the seventeen members of Moran's team to Fort Worth for the game with the southern champions tomorrow. Adolfo Luque, pitcher, arrived today, completing Moran's staff of hurlers.

West Baden, Ind., March 11.—The Pirates had light practice today before starting the trip to Hot Springs, to wind up spring training. Inclement weather forced the men to remain indoors yesterday.

Whitey Glazner, star Pirate hurler of last year, wired Gibson today from Birmingham, Ala., his readiness to sign his 1922 contract and that he was leaving for Hot Springs to join the team.

Leesburg, Fla., March 11.—Jack Leslie, first sacker obtained from New Orleans by the Phillies, busted into camp today and impressed the boys by a snappy workout. Goldie Rapp was an arrival also. A full nine inning contest was staged between the regulars and the recruits today.

Eagle Pass, Tex., March 11.—Connie Mack and his Athletics were greeted with presentable weather today and the tail enders were given a work out. Heine Scheer, recruit infielder from Hartford, covered short, alternating with Galloway, before mixing it with the Earle Pass team.

Dallas, Tex., March 11.—Tris Speaker today sent his second team of Indians to Wichita Falls under charge of Jack McAllister. Bob Bisonette, college pitcher, has been added to the recruits.

Augusta, Ga., March 11.—Tyrus Raymond's Detroit Tigers have reached the practice game stage. Cobb expects ten days to come and go before he can weed out the thirty-five men now on his roster. From seven of these the veteran must select a shortstop. Nine hundred and sixteen fans have written Ty how to solve his keystone station problem.

San Antonio, Tex., March 11.—After shifting last year's batting positions, John McGraw of the Giants announced today that Beauty Bancroft, shortstop, will be leadoff man for 1922. George Burns held that position last year. Heine Groh will follow, with Frank Frisch next, and Pep Young cleanup man. The world's champs are in fine shape.

Jacksonville, Fla., March 11.—Uncle Wilbert Robinson was surprised today by the arrival of Jimmy Johnston, one of the holdouts.

Tampa, Fla., March 11.—Manager Clyde Milan of the Senators today served indefinite suspensions on Leon Goslin, the young recruit whose performances last year earned him a regular berth in the outfield. Reason—breaking training. The final squad of Senators left the capital today for camp. Hard workouts are in order.

Woods and Waters by BOB BECKER

THE OPEN SEASON FOR ROD

If you had been with me the other day at a meeting where some 200 or 300 anglers were gathered you would certainly believe that the "open season" for buying rods was at hand. Such remarks as "Man, O man; wait till you see my new Thomas rod. If I don't get the big one that I lost last summer," and, "Yes, gotta buy a new rod next week, as it's almost time to go bass fishing" could be heard on every hand. Any one who has stalked into a sporting goods store and played around with a bunch of shiny, beautiful rods while trying to pick out one, can appreciate how the fellow with a new pole feels.

This is especially true of the angler who is going to tackle the fishing game for the first time, as the sight and feel of a nine and one-half foot whippy bamboo rod all lit up with bright colored windings is enough to start any angler's nerves a-tingle. Probably never before has the fly fisherman had such a wide variety and excellent class of rods to choose from as can be found in the shops today. Manufacturers are vieing with each other in production of high grade poles, and whether the angler is thinking of all wood, bamboo, or steel rods, he can take his pick from a beautiful assortment.

At present the majority of the rods on the market are steel, solid wood, or split bamboo, with the last names taking the blue ribbon as the favorite and best material. During the last few years steel rods of excellent workmanship have been turned out in this country, and no doubt rods of this material make very serviceable tools for some kinds of fishing. Some of the extremely light weight poles, colorfully and strongly wrapped with silk, are quite popular with many anglers. However, the bamboo fan will tell you that the steel pole hasn't the snap and pep that the bamboo possesses, and then the fight is on.

MIDWEST TO RESPECT CONTRACTS OF O. B.

The semi pros of Chicago, always a thorn in the side of organized baseball, stand with the major moguls this season just as before.

The Midwest association, one of the most compact little circuits that has ever been formed outside of the regular ranks, is deluged with applications from players who want to quit the big show for the semi-pros.

CHARLES GIESMAN.

Some are on the square about jumping, and others are just using the Midwest as a means toward an end.

No Haven for Jumpers.

Bill Niesen, owner of the Pyotts, the president of the Midwest, announced recently when it was reported that his circuit was making tempting offers to holdouts, that the league was not a haven for contract jumpers, but that his circuit had no respect for the reserve rule.

He said Midwest teams did not want players that have signed with clubs in organized ball, but that they would consider the application of players who wish to quit O. B. for the semi-pro circuit.

League Opens May 13.

Despite the animosity of organized ball for the Midwest, this little circuit is plugging along and preparing for one of the biggest seasons in its history. The six clubs will play a closed schedule May 13 to Oct. 8, with Saturday, Sunday, and holiday games.

The league will hold its regular weekly meeting tomorrow night in the Morrison hotel. Practice games will start April 2. The Pyotts have arranged for a practice game with Beloit for April 9.

The Charlie Giesman-Frank Toomey combination, which looks after the interests of the Marquette Manors, has its lineup almost ready. For pitchers Charlie and Frank have Jack Quinn, Lefty Sullivan, Johnny Overlock and Eddie Stack; for catchers, Rudy Rehor and Bunk Delaney; infielders, Perring, Winkler and Flynn; and for outfielders, Le Beau, Burke and McGuire.

Fifty Teams in Interstate.

The Interstate league, the second largest circuit in Chicago, will be ready to open its season April 16. The league is composed of fifty teams and includes twelve park clubs. These clubs are: Grand Crossing, Normals, De Paul field, Elgin, Murleys, Cicero, Dundee, Lamont, Lockport, New Trier, Justin Bros., Oak Park and De Kalb. The league will meet tomorrow night at 128 West Randolph street.

The Intercity league will hold its regular weekly gathering at 180 West Washington street.

15 I. A. C. TANKMEN LISTED FOR A. A. U. MEET IN NEW YORK

Charles A. Dean, chairman of the athletic committee of the Illinois A. C., yesterday announced that fifteen swimmers and polo players will be taken to New York to compete in the National A. A. U. 400 yard relay and water polo championships at New York A. C. pool March 29 and 30. On April 1 a team will go to Brooklyn for the 200 yard championship relay and probably will meet Yale, holder of the world's record for the distance.

NEW CENTRAL MEETS MONDAY.

The New Central West Baseball league will hold its regular meeting tomorrow night at 128 West Randolph street.

HARRY NEWMAN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Toledo, O., March 11.—The Mineralites of Chicago, bowling on the first shift of the American Bowling congress tournament tonight, went into first place in the five men event with a score of 2,904, two pins above the score which carried the Hamilton club Reds, also of Chicago, into the top place more than a week ago.

JIMMY BLOUIN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The Mineralites put together games of 967, 1,013, and 924. C. O. Collier, captain, led the outfit with 636. H. Steen was second with 632. S. Thoma bowled 548, Rayal 561, and F. Thoma 557.

The Battistini Brothers' five, also of Chicago, went into third place on the same shift with 2,883, and the Commodore Barry K. of C. of Chicago hit 2,8[illegible] for eighth place.

Other Chicagoans High.

Jimmy Blouin, world's bowling champion, with Phil Wolf as a partner, rolled into a tie for second place in the two men event, piling up 1,248 pins for the same figures as E. Peterson and F. Zuhn, another Chicago pair.

Joe Shaw and Hank Marino of Chicago, on the same squad, rolled 1,206, which is a tie for seventh place. J. Bierzniak and R. Zimmerman of Chicago were two pins behind them with 1,206, for tenth place tie.

Although the all star rollers from Chicago were on the alleys, none of the leaders was disturbed. Oscar Hallberg was the top performer in singles with 627.

TOMMY GIBBONS AND HARRY GREB WIND UP TRAINING

NEAR TITULAR BOUT

PRINCIPALS—Tom Gibbons of St. Paul and Harry Greb of Pittsburgh.
PLACE—Madison Square Garden, New York.
TIME—Tomorrow night.
START—Approximately 9:30 o'clock, Chicago time.
FAVORITE—Gibbons.
BETTING ODDS—8 to 5.

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

New York, March 11.—[Special.]—With all the props in place after several weeks of careful training, the stage is set for Tommy Gibbons, the St. Paul fighter, and Harry Greb, the fast moving kid from Pittsburgh, to go through their act calling for fifteen rounds of boxing in Madison Square Garden Monday night. The two boys are confident of victory, like any well behaved pair of fighters ought to be just preceding the bell which will send them out for the real shindy.

This fracas Monday means an awful lot to both boxers. It might be that the winner will be chosen to battle with Jack Dempsey. As a matter of fact, the champion has announced a willingness to take on the chap who will emerge victor.

Have Met Three Times.

They met thrice before, without complete satisfaction on either side. The Pittsburgher says he can beat the Minnesota lad, while the latter thinks Harry is very much off his base.

At any rate it promises to be some scrimmage. That fellow Gibbons is credited with having the best stock. He has been all over the country exhibiting his wallop with considerable success. In his wake he has left scores of sprawling heavies.

It might be that some of the boys were of the setup order, but any man who can take them as fast as Gib has for the last few years must have something in those two good hands of his. It requires something even to knock over the mutts.

Britton Sees Greb Knocked Out.

Jack Britton, the welterweight champion, and one of the best judges of fighters in the country, picks Gibbons to win over the knockout route. Britton went so far as to say that if Gibbons could pick up a few extra pounds he would make it rough for Jack Dempsey.

Greb is not without his followers. The Pittsburgher is far from being a sucker for anybody and that goes for Tom Gibbons as well. Harry hasn't got an ounce of fear for Gibbons. On the other hand, he says he is going to beat Gibbons and beat him thoroughly.

The Pittsburgh fighter is a very hard man to hit. He is moving every moment, shooting punches at his opponent with every step and from every angle. He never allows a man to get set for a punch and that is likely to make it difficult for Gibbons.

GILMORE REFEREE FOR RING BOUTS AT FT. SHERIDAN

Harry Gilmore Jr., son of the boxing instructor, has been selected to referee all boxing bouts in the wrestling, boxing and basketball tourney of the sixth corps area, which opens tomorrow night at Fort Sheridan. The boxing matches will be decided under amateur rules. The contestants will box six rounds of two minutes each. A decision will be rendered by the judges with the aid of the referee.

Tomorrow night's program will consists entirely of boxing. Nearly fifty matches will be held, and knockdowns are expected. Not only will the best boxer be determined, but elimination contests will be held to discover the consolation boxer.

The event is under charge of Capt. L. B. Albro, who is depending upon outside patronage to defray expenses. Tickets can be secured at Spalding's, Wilson's and Wright & Ditson's.

SCHWEDT KEEPS PLUNGE TITLE, BEATING CULVER

Culver, Ind., March 11.—[Special.]—Fred Schwedt of Detroit retained his championship in the plunge for distance in the contests held in the pool of Culver Military academy this afternoon, making a plunge of 85 feet 2 inches, of which 78 feet 8 inches were covered in one minute. His nearest competitor was J. F. Dillon of Culver, who went 69 feet 4 inches. Chairman Charles D. Lynch of the National A. A. U. swimming committee judged the contest.

GARY AMATEURS WIN IN BOXING

Gary, Ind., March 11.—Joe Crotty of Gary Y. M. C. A., defeated Dennis O'Keefe of the Great Lakes Naval Training station tonight in the finals of the heavyweight division of the middle states boxing tournament.

Among the teams Gary Y. M. C. A. finished first with 23 points, the others finishing in the following order:

Hoosier A. C., Indianapolis, 12; Hawthorn A. C., Chicago, 9; Boys' Brotherhood, Chicago, 9; Culver Academy, Culver, Ind., 8; Lincoln gym, Chicago, 5; Great Lakes Naval team, 4; Chicago Hebrew institute, 1.

Summaries of classes besides the heavyweights follow:

126 pounds—J. Rohn, Culver Military academy, defeated A. Soucek, Hawthorn club, Chicago.

135 pounds—E. Orme, Hoosier A. C., Indianapolis, beat J. Mayer, Hawthorn A. C.

147 pounds—S. Secrist, Gary Y. M. C. A., defeated St. Simons, also of the Gary "Y."

115 pounds—Matt Farmer, Boys' Brotherhood republic, forfeited to Sam Finklestein, also of the brotherhood.

118 pounds—Bob Mulholand, Hoosier A. C., defeated M. C. Lyons of the Gary "Y."

158 pounds—M. Jones, Gary "Y," forfeited to Joe Marion, Hawthorne club.

FERRETTI'S RING BOUTS.

Amateur ring bouts at Ferretti's gym yesterday resulted as follows: Ben Shapiro stopped Frank Rizzo, one round, at 115 pounds; Fred Quitmeyer beat Joe Swacjel [2], 105 pounds; J. Leake stopped Fred Rae [1], 110 pounds; E. Blair and B. Shapiro fought a draw [3]; S. Mahir stopped Chick Sullivan [2], 145 pounds.

THE SECRET OF THE KNOCKOUT PUNCH

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

"IT'S the champion with the punch who gets all the popularity," said Freddy Welsh a few nights ago, as he watched Rocky Kansas being rubbed down after losing a fifteen round decision to Benny Leonard.

"Leonard is making a great record," Welsh went on. "He always has the punch. After winning the title from me he went right along winning other fights with knockouts. He hasn't needed decisions. In the decision fights he has fought he has stopped Welling and Ritchie Mitchell, and has outpointed Rocky Kansas. But he flattened Kansas in the eleventh round, and it's something to put that human battering ram on the floor. I never made a hit with the crowd that Benny makes, and only because I didn't have the 'kick'."

K. O. the Real Thriller.

Welsh said a lot there in a few words. Looking back over the long list of champions in different weight classes, it's easy to see how the possession of a K. O. punch commanded respect and popularity. The crowd likes action—plenty of it—excitement—thrills. And there is nothing that puts a thrill into a boxing contest like the possibility of a decisive punch that may slip over at the most unexpected moment.

John L. Sullivan was world famous because he won his fights with crashing knockouts. There are few decisions in John L.'s record. Jim Corbett was popular for a while, after beating Sullivan and knocking out Charlie Mitchell. But he never had a real K. O. punch, and it wasn't long before harder hitters took his place in public esteem. Tom Sharkey had nothing but strength and a punch. He once knocked out Gus Ruhlin with the first blow struck. He knocked out Kid McCoy after McCoy had dropped him twice. He was always dangerous. There were just two men he couldn't knock down.

Bob Fitzsimmons, who was too crafty to get in the way of Sharkey's swings, and who was the hardest hitter in the world at his weight—perhaps the hardest at any weight. The other was Jim Jeffries. Sharkey hit Jeff often enough, but he couldn't make an impression on Jeff's tremendous frame. In his prime Jeffries was the strongest man ever seen in a ring, and no fighter living in his time could hit hard enough to upset him. Jeffries had a great punch. He often held it back, being afraid of injuring his opponents if he used all his hitting power, but when he needed the punch he could deliver it.

There is a peculiar thing about punching power. The weight of the blow counts for nothing. The snap with which it is delivered gives it the stunning effect.

Dempsey has earned a place among the world's greatest hitters by establishing the cleanest knockout record ever held by a champion. His punch has earned him fame.

Look at the lightweights. Benny Leonard is the most popular champion the class ever had—and he nearly always wins with a punch. Joe Gans was a great lightweight champion because he could get up from a knockdown and even when reeling snap over a winning knockout blow. He did that twice with Dal Hawkins. Gans was a marvelous counter hitter.

Battling Nelson was a popular champion because he won his fights via the K. O. route, but it took Nelson years to work his way into real popularity because he took so long to win. Some of his battles went over forty rounds. His other qualities, stubborn courage, aggressiveness, and self-confidence, gave him popularity he couldn't win with the more spectacular punch.

Mistake by Kilbane.

Johnny Kilbane could hit when he wanted to. He liked the clever stuff, the dancing, looking around, smiling, kidding. He lost most of his popularity at one time by fooling too much—showing off to a tiresome extent, contenting himself with clever work. But when he realized that the public was beginning to count him a has-been without a punch, he took on a match with the most dangerous hitter in his class, George Chaney of Baltimore, and knocked him out in three rounds. Kilbane's popularity came back with a bound.

Jem Driscoll of England had a wonderful punch and the crowd loved him. Terry McGovern is still counted the greatest little fighter ever known in the bantam and featherweight classes. McGovern fought like a fury every step of every fight, and had a K. O. punch as sudden and decisive as a rifle shot. George Dixon was another great hitter, and "Little Chocolate" was the idol of his day.

Great Middleweights.

The greatest and most poular middleweights were Kid McCoy, Tommy Ryan, Stanley Ketchel, Billy "Thunderbolt" Papke, Frank Klaus, Sam Langford, and Mike Gibbons—all men with speed and a punch.

Of the welters, Mysterious Billy Smith, Joe Walcott, Honey Mellody, all great hitters, were the men in the class whose names made lasting places in fight history. The present champion, Jack Britton, has been a great puncher, but is reaching the point where he likes to win by outboxing his opponents.

Bob Fitzsimmons spent years studying the effect of different blows. Bob had a theory of his own about the knockout.

"I 'ate to 'urt any one," Bob used to tell me, "so I always look for a chance to land a clean knockout. No 'arm in that—not even a 'eadache when you wake up."

Punch Is Necessary.

After all boxing is the art by which an unarmed man can defend himself—and defense is best conducted by defeating the attacking party—which can't be accomplished by dancing around and tapping lightly "for points." The punch is the best thing in the game.

SHADE TO TRAIN HERE FOR MITCHELL BOUT

TRIBUNE DECISIONS

Decisions of The Tribune boxing representatives are:

At New York—Lew Tendler stopped Johnny Sheppard [3].

At Philadelphia—Sailor Freedman stopped Frankie Callahan [7].

Dave Shade, California welterweight, who held Champion Jack Britton to a draw in Madison Square Garden recently, passed through Chicago yesterday on his way to Buffalo, where he will meet Frankie Schoell in a twelve round bout tomorrow night.

Following this fight, Shade will return to Chicago to resume training for a ten round encounter with Pinkie Mitchell in Milwaukee March 27. Shade said negotiations are under way for a return match with Britton, in Jersey City this spring.

Amateur boxers who will represent Chicago in a dual intercity tourney at Memphis tomorrow night left yesterday. The boxers will represent the Arcade gymnasium. Kid Howard, owner of the gym, asserted he has kept his best boxers at home to compete in the three days' tourney which opens at the Elks' club tomorrow night.

Charlie White, local lightweight, matched to meet Johnny Dundee in New York Friday, boxed six rounds at Ferretti's gym yesterday and will box there again today. Charlie is confident he will beat the easterner. He will leave for New York Tuesday.

Joe Burman, west side bantam, who will trade punches with Midget Smith in New York March 20, is training daily at the Arcade, where he boxes with Frankie Kennard and others. Joe does road work in the morning.

LEAGUE COMBATS ON SOCCER CARD FEATURE TODAY

Local soccer teams will concentrate their attention on league matches today, seven games being scheduled, three in the Chicago league and four in the District league. A double-header in the city league will be played at 47th avenue and 19th street. In the first game the Canadian club and Swedish-Americans will collide, and in the windup the Thistles tackle Harvey. At Bricklayers' park the Olympias, Chicago league leaders, will meet Pullman.

The following games are scheduled by the District league:

Roseland and 122d field artillery at Palmer park.

Maple Leafs and Y. M. H. A. at Avers and Sixteenth.

Ulster United and Gary at 79th and Drexel.

Jugo-Slavia and North Shores at Foster field, Evanston.

LINCOLN PARK TRAPS

W. HARMENING and W. G. Warren topped a field of forty-four shooters in the two events at Lincoln park traps yesterday. Harmening won the 50 target 16 yard shoot with a score of 48, while Warren captured the doubles event, breaking 40 targets of the 25 pair. W. M. Johnston was second high in the 50 target event with 46. Leading scores:

New York, March 11.—[Special.]—Leroy Brown, Dartmouth's great high jumper, established a new world's indoor record in the first annual indoor championship track and field meet of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletics of America at the Twenty-second Regiment armory tonight. The Green leaper cleared the bar at 6 feet 4⅞ inches, breaking the old mark of 6 feet 4¾ inches.

LARRY BROWN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Cornell Athletes won the meet with 35½ points. Dartmouth was second with 25, Pennsylvania third with 24, and Princeton fourth, 16.

Another sterling performance was turned in by Larry Brown, the Penn middle distance runner, who in the final 880 yards of the two mile relay event stepped the distance in 1:55.2

"Alf" Leconey, the Lafayette sprinter, came within a fifth of a second of making a new record in winning the 70 yard dash. He stepped the distance in :07 3-10. In gaining his victory Leconey turned back such stars as Lovejoy of Cornell, Lever of Penn, Carter of Brown, and Graeb of Columbia.

Barron was an easy winner in the 60 yard hurdle event, stepping over the obstacles in :07 8-10. The two mile relay race resulted in a dead heat between Syracuse university and Princeton.

Sixteen colleges were represented in the meet, which drew a crowd of over 10,000. Summaries:

JAKE SCHAEFER WORKING HARD FOR HOPPE TILT

Although the world's championship balk line match between Champion Jake Schaefer and Willie Hoppe does not start until March 27 at Orchestra hall, both men are giving longer time to their preliminary practice than in many of their previous matches. Jake has gone to West Baden, where he is practicing with Ben Saylor, while Hoppe this week will start play at Peterson's room at St. Louis.

Augie Kieckhefer, who has eight games to play, retains the lead in the race for the William J. Blake trophy in the Chicago Billiard league, but is closely pressed by Moreau of the Madison Square room. Standing of the players:

BOY SCOUTS

MORE MEN NEEDED.

THIRTY THOUSAND Chicago boys come of age yearly.

Six to ten thousand Chicago boys get into court yearly.

Thousands of foreign homes in Chicago are without adequate grasp of American ideals and have no means for getting it.

Thousands of boys have only the streets for playground, with no man to be their friend and companion, with little chance to select right things to do.

Even the boys in the best homes need right companionship.

Scouting offers to Chicago, through mobilizing and energizing its best men to do it, a program of character building and citizenship training which knows no distinctions of class or race or creed, but where individual worth wins its true place. It makes boys trustworthy and manly.

In order that these future citizens may have the advantage of this great training volunteer men are needed as troop committeemen, scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters, and in various other capacities. If you have one or more nights a week to spare for a civic good turn, make yourself known to other scout leaders either through your own church or to the Boy Scout headquarters, 203 South Dearborn street.

North Shore.

Court of review Thursday at district headquarters.

Court of review, Portage Park school, Tuesday.

West Side.

The scout leaders' fellowship supper will be held Monday evening, March 20, at 6:30 o'clock, in the parish house of the New First Congregational church, Ashland avenue and Washington boulevard.

Patrol leaders' conference at Legler branch library Wednesday at 4:30 p. m.

At the Western Avenue Boys' club, 125 South Western avenue, Assistant Scoutmaster Philip L. Berton will start a class in pioneering for scouts who are senior patrol leaders or patrol leaders. The scope of the work given will be such as to qualify as instructors those who graduate.

Southwest.

A conference of all scoutmasters and assistants has been called for tomorrow evening at Hamilton park field house.

POINTING OUT ERRORS.

ERRORS deserve more space than good play, because they happen more often. The errors of beginners are not the ones in question, but those committed by players who have had years of experience.

The most common error is the failure to take an inventory at the beginning of the deal, as illustrated in the second deal, which follows. Very good and very bad play is shown in the first deal following:

THE HANDS.

S—A, 5, 2.
H—9, 7, 6, 3, 2.

H—K, 8, 4.
C—J, 5, 3.
D—A, Q, 8.

Score, 0-0.

THE BIDDING.

West dealt and bid four clubs, which closed the bidding. North had the initial lead.

West secured eleven tricks.

The first error in this deal was the play of the king of hearts at trick one. The ace must be in the declarer's hand, and no matter how many hearts were held by north and west respectively, it was impossible for south to gain by putting up the king.

In fact, when there is a declared trump there are very few instances where it pays to play a king third hand on the initial trick.

After getting into dummy with the queen of spades, and obtaining the discard of the singleton king of diamonds, it appeared that the declarer could easily secure all the tricks except the two black aces. There still was danger, however, that the jack of clubs might win a trick, should the clubs be unevenly divided. This danger could be eliminated if west could induce the opponents to lead trumps. By creating the impression that he was planning to trump spades in dummy the declarer coaxed a trump lead from north at trick five.

Had south played correctly in this deal, the declarer would have lost one spade, one diamond, and two clubs—four tricks, and his contract, instead of winning the game.

ANSWERS TO QUERY.

DEAR Mr. Metcalfe: In the following hand North dealt, and while it wasn't necessary, bid five spades. East—one of those who doubles any bid of four or more on "general principles"—doubles, and is redoubled. The hands:

3	*5S	5H	QH	AH
4	3C	7C	*8S	JC
5	*9S	5H	JH	KH

East set North 600 points and on a hand that looks spread for a small slam without even playing it. K. J.

ANSWER—This is one of the most remarkable deals ever played. North should have started with one spade. There was absolutely no reason for a preemptive bid, as it was impossible for the adversaries to take the play away from him.

In such cases it is better to bid one, then two, then three, etc., hoping for a double. Had North started with one spade, East would have bid diamonds, West would have supported the diamonds, and the initial lead probably would have been a diamond instead of a club, which would have given North a small slam.

HUTCHISON SETS RECORD AT MACON

Macon, Ga., March 11.—Jock Hutchison, British open golf champion, broke the record of 71 on the Idle Hour club course today, making the eighteen holes in 69. Hutchison and Jim Barnes, American open golf champion, won their match of thirty-six holes from Bobby Jones of Atlanta and Jack Oke, former Canadian champion, 11 up.

CANADIAN GOLF BODY REFUSES TO BAR RIBBED CLUB

BY JOE DAVIS.

News from Toronto that the Royal Canadian Golf club has declined to follow the ruling of the Royal and Ancient Golf club in barring the ribbed or deeply slotted clubs is another indication that the newer school of golfers will not bow humbly to British tradition.

WALTER TRAVIS.

The first break came when the British ruled out center shafted putters after Walter J. Travis of America, using a Schenectady putter, had won the British amateur championship at Sandwich in 1904. The American authorities did not consider this putter a mechanical aid to the game, and it has been used in our tournaments ever since.

No Action by U. S. Body.

Opinion exists among a number of our players that the value of the ribbed club has been exaggerated and that while a few players, like Jock Hutchison, are able to impart a great amount of backspin on the ball, others get all the backspin necessary by the use of clubs with comparatively plain surfaces. Jerry Travers, who was noted for his skill with the mashie, used a smooth faced club.

So far the United States Golf association has made no ruling on the ribbed clubs, but it is whispered that its action will be similar to that of the Canadian. The Western Golf association will take no action on the matter.

Canadians to Play Here.

The Canadian clubs are urged by the committee to send their professionals to the U. S. G. A. open championship at Chicago in July, and are hopeful of getting a number of the American players to compete in the Canadian open at Montreal, July 28 and 29.

Charles E. Hudson, president of the Musicians' Golf club of Chicago, and his associate officers, are conducting an active membership campaign and hope to make the organization 100 strong before the playing season starts. The musicians plan to play their first tournament about the middle of April.

Mrs. Hathaway Watson of Winnetka, president of the Women's Western Golf association, returned to Chicago yesterday from New York. Mrs. Watson is a member of the executive committee of the first exclusive women's golf club in the United States, which will be started this year at Glen Head, L. I., and finished in two years.

Mrs. Watson hopes to start a similar movement in the Chicago district within a year or two.

FRANK BLOSSOM IN SEMI-FINALS AT PINEHURST

Pinehurst, N. C., March 11.—[Special.]—Frank Blossom of Chicago was one of four survivors of a field of 333 golfers who started the annual spring tournament here. Blossom defeated Arthur Yates, the medalist, in the second round of the first flight, 3 and 2, and will meet A. L. Walker Jr of Richmond county in the semifinals on Monday.

Yates and the Chicago man resumed their match at the ninth tee, where it was stopped yesterday by rain, with Blossom two up. A number of Chicago players in other divisions defaulted because of being unable to Shorn lambs sell about $2.50 per 100 lbs. below above quotations.

One of the outstanding features in last week's cattle trade was the shipment of 1,600 head of export steers to foreign markets, practically all the big packers being engaged in the trade. They bought them largely at $8.00@8.50. General average price of good beef cattle for the week advanced 25c to $8.30, with top yearlings at $9.50.

Closing hog prices were off 10c from Friday, with the general average price at $10.70, lowest in over two weeks, and 45c below the recent high day. Packers discriminated against best 250@300 lb butchers, which showed most decline. Sheep and lamb values closed about the same as the previous Saturday, with top lambs at $15.75.

Receipts of hogs at Chicago last week at 151,400 were smaller than any week since the first of the year, being 2,800 smaller than a week ago and 1,700 larger than the eleven year average. While receipts were smaller than a week ago outsiders took 8,000 more than the previous week.

Estimated average weight of hogs last week at 239 lbs, stands 7 lbs heavier than the previous week and heaviest since middle of last October.

Monday's receipts are estimated at 21,000 cattle, 55,000 hogs and 19,000 sheep, against 22,247 cattle, 47,161 hogs and 28,839 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts 56,000 cattle, 150,000 hogs and 66,000 sheep, against 55,017 cattle, 137,615 hogs and 106,567 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs for Monday ranged from 50,000 to 60,000. Edward Morris marked 60,000, George Chandler, 57,000; J. M. Waters, 56,000; E. S. Waterbury, 53,000; H. H. Moore, 52,000, and F. W. Waddell and Felix Gehrmann, 50,000.

Pit Men Discuss Con Con Provision on Warehouses

A broader and more elastic basis covering the clause relative to the Illinois warehouse act is before the Illinois Constitutional convention. It was favored by members of the Chicago Board of Trade at a meeting of that association yesterday. John J. Stream and several other members favored the suggestion. John Hill Jr., who has been a strong advocate of a stringent warehouse law and its rigid enforcement for more than twenty-five years, actively opposed it.

Board of Trade officials desire to place grain producers, shippers, consumers and others interested in a position where it will be possible for them to apply to the legislature for any change they may deem advisable at any time.

Interboro Rapid Transit Shows $4,464,826 Deficit

New York, March 11.—[Special.]—The Interborough Rapid Transit company, in its annual report of operation during the year ended June 30, 1921, shows a deficit of $4,464,826, as compared with a deficit of $2,235,835 for 1920. Gross operating revenues for the year amounted to $55,031,941, comparing with $51,478,410 in 1920, an increase of 6.90 per cent. Operating expenses for the year were $36,024,646, as compared with $31,695,208 the preceding year, an increase of 13.66 per cent.

COTTON MARKETS

NEW YORK, March 11.—Selling of cotton by the south and by spot interests offset the effects of reports of curtailed planting in North Carolina. The political situation and the possibility of a coal strike, combined with easier foreign exchange, were depressing influences. Prices advanced early, only to react, and closed at about the inside with net losses of 4 to 10 points.

Investment and Speculation.

The difference between an investment and a speculation seems to be a matter of a good deal of perplexity in the public mind. It is not always easy to draw a distinct line of demarcation between the two. Generally speaking, probably the three principal factors to be considered in determining whether a security is an investment or a speculation are safety, stability, and salability. An investment must have safety and stability and a speculation must have ready salability. Of course, safety of principal and interest in a security will naturally bring a certain amount of price stability and, in normal times, the nearer the security approaches absolute safety the less fluctuation there is likely to be in its market price.

The purpose contemplated by an investor is different from that sought by the speculator. The investor purchases a security with the idea of holding it and receiving a steady income (usually fixed) in the form of interest. The speculator depends for his gain on the change in market price and buys securities not with the idea of holding them but hoping to sell them at an advanced price. With the speculator, therefore, stability of price is not only unessential but undesirable, and consequently safety becomes of less importance and may even become a detriment to the ideal speculation by its tendency to produce stability of the market. Ready salability is what the speculator wants and a security that will fluctuate widely.

These specifications are, of course, very elemental. A number of outside influences enter into the situation. Industrial, transportation, or labor conditions, political, financial, or foreign news or changes, the crop situation, new legislation, tariffs—any one of these and a hundred other elements or a combination of them may affect the securities markets and may cause a considerable fluctuation in the price of even the soundest investments. The shrewd, experienced speculator often has learned in a measure to foresee and interpret these elements in their probable effect on the market and to turn them to his profit, but the average amateur speculator trusts blindly to luck.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The Standard Oil company of Kentucky has doubled its present capital stock of $6,000,000. Of the increase, it is said that 66 2-3 per cent will be distributed in the form of a stock dividend and 33 1-3 per cent will be offered to stockholders at par or $100 a share. The laws of Kentucky do not permit the distribution of stock without compensation, consequently it is said the company will distribute cash to stockholders and they, in turn, will subscribe to the 66 2-3 per cent at par.

It was reported in the financial district that the United States treasury department will call on despository banks of this district for repayment, on March 15, of approximately one-third of the government deposits made with them Feb. 1. These deposits, which in New York amount to some $80,000,000, result from the sale on that date of 4¾ per cent treasury notes of series A, 1925, for which the total of $601,599,509 was allotted throughout the country and $254,213,300 in this district. The purpose of the withdrawal will be to meet maturities of treasury certificates on Wednesday.

Continuation of strength and activity featured the bond market. An exception to the general firmness, however, was the slump in Interborough, Interborough-Metropolitan, and Manhatian Elevated issues, a natural development following the announcement of the Interborough Rapid Transit that a rearrangement of its contract with the Manhattan railway regarding its lease must be made or the Interborough Rapid Transit company would consider accepting a receivership.

The directors of the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie railway company have declared dividends of 2 per cent on both the common and preferred stocks from accumulated surplus, payable April 15 to stock of record March 22. Semi-annual distributions of 3½ per cent have been made on both of these issues for some time, the previous payment being made on Oct. 15 last.

Bradstreet's says there is more life in jobbing trade, but rather less activity in textiles. Better reports are coming in from few industrials, with iron and steel building and kindred trades leading. A gain in mail order business is noted. There were 521 commercial failures in the United States last week, compared with 629 in the preceding week and 293 during the corresponding week last year.

Exports of iron and steel during January totaled 160,920 tons, compared with 129,921 tons in December, the department of commerce announces.

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending March 8 by 202 banks in twenty-four leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district aggregate $948,399,000, compared with $1,048,631,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $948,399,000, compared with $806,391,000 for the corresponding week last year.

TEXAS COMPANY EARNINGS DROP; STRONG IN CASH

The annual report of the Texas company, made public, gives further evidence of the severe shrinkage in earnings caused by inventory charge-offs following the sharp decline in crude oil prices. The statement shows a decrease in gross earnings during 1921 of $40,000,000, or 40 per cent. Notwithstanding this result, the company paid $5,600,000 more in cash dividends and it had a deficit on the year of $8,770,781, against a surplus the year before of $18,614,372.

Net profits after charges, federal taxes and inventory depreciation in 1921 were $9,286,129, equal to $1.41 a share, $25 par, on $164,450,000 capital stock, against $31,089,372 or $5.98 a share on $130,000,000 capital stock in 1920. The income account compares as follows:

	1921.	1920.
Gross earnings	$102,805,377	$142,806,331
Net earnings	29,645,580	44,446,835
Bal. after deprec.	19,922,852	31,089,372

Stock dividend	.....	13,000,000
Total surplus	74,571,921	83,342,792

*Surplus.

The balance sheet shows inventory and property depreciation of over $20,000,000. Working capital is $122,112,590 or $5,000,000 greater than at the end of 1920. Payable items were reduced more than $13,000,000, not including the $5,000,000 notes called for retirement March 1, this year.

Give Yourself a Square Deal

We go ahead or We go back

A good merchant takes time to look into the other fellow's proposition. He knows that it is to his interest to take advantage of everything which will help—he takes nothing for granted and you have to "show him." He gives himself a square deal.

There is always a newer and better way—a merchant will fail today by following customs and practices which would have made him successful twenty-five years ago. Merchants used to pay their bills twice a year—sometimes. The average business could not make a profit today on such sales terms—we must turn our capital more often.

If you carry your customers' accounts until they pay you, you can make two sales on the same capital on 90 days' terms against only one sale on six months. On the same principle, if you sold your goods for cash you could make still more sales on the same capital, but you turn it over and over again and with an added profit each time. That's the modern business way.

Write for our brief plan or have our representative call for a short interview and see how our proposition will work out to your advantage in your particular business—no obligations.

We purchase Open Accounts Receivable, Notes, Drafts, and Acceptances from Manufacturers and Jobbers. We also buy Installment Lien Obligations covering the sale of motor vehicles, machinery and other merchandise. Our Customers collect the Accounts they sell us.

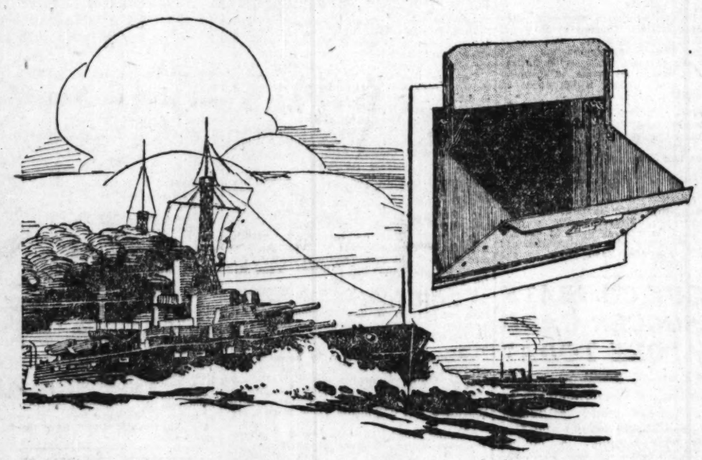
Armor Plate Construction
Gives Kewanee Its Great Strength
Built like a battleship to withstand terrific blows



The wear and tear on a coal chute is so great that unless it is built of all-steel it cannot stand up as you have a right to demand that it should. Only by such construction have Kewanee engineers been able to overcome all chance of breakage. You can install a Kewanee "Armor Plate" Coal Chute and never have one cent of expense for repairs or replacement.

Guaranteed Against Breakage

The use of a special metal, known as "Copper Steel"—unbreakable and rust-resisting—gives the Kewanee its permanence and durability. The absolute guarantee against breakage which goes with a Kewanee "Armor Plate" Coal Chute cannot be placed upon cast-iron or other inferior material.

Install a Kewanee—it costs no more. No building, new or old, is complete without one.

Where a hopper is not required, install a Kewanee Coal Door—at a lower price.

Write for descriptive literature and name of nearest dealer.

Is More Liquidation Coming?

1. Will the next two months see business grow better or worse; and after that, what?
2. Is there more liquidation to come—or are we at the bottom?
3. Is the stock market in for a setback; and, if so, how long will the reaction continue—a week, a month or two months?
4. What are 7 attractive preferred stocks—and what are the best bonds—for the investor?

You can easily have the answers to these questions (and many others equally important in planning your business or your investments).

WHEAT PRICES UP AND DOWN; CLOSE ABOUT THE SAME

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Trading in grains has fallen off materially and, with sentiment strongly divided, price fluctuations were erratic. Wheat was alternately weak and strong and closed ⅝c higher to ¼c lower, with May showing the most strength. Corn was ¼c to ⅝c higher, oats unchanged to ⅛c higher, and rye ½c higher.

Despite the heavy liquidations which was on in all grains early in the week, the net losses were not severe, and the finish was well above the low point, with wheat 2⅝@4¾c lower, corn unchanged to ⅝c lower, oats 1⅛@1½c lower, and rye 1⅛@1⅝c higher. Provisions were under pressure the greater part of the time and closed with lard off at 62½@65c and short ribs 27½@40c.

Strength in corn came mainly from buying by local professionals, and with a light trade a higher range was easily attained. Prices fluctuated rapidly. Export demand at the seaboard was rather slow.

Bulk of the trade in oats was in spreading between the May and the July at about 2c difference. In the main the market followed corn.

Rye showed more strength than other grains, and while easier at one time with wheat showed a strong undertone, and pressure was light. Export demand was again in evidence at the seaboard.

Provision Prices Off.

Lower prices for hogs and scattered selling carried provision prices lower and more than offset buying by houses with eastern connections. Closing trades were at net losses of 12½@17½c on lard and 8@12½c on ribs. Deliveries on March contracts were 200,000 lbs lard. Packing at Chicago for the winter season to date is 245,000 hogs, against 257,000 last year. Prices follow:

RAILROAD NOTES

Reports from all of the local railroads were irregular in nature, and while the majority showed a considerable improvement over the record of the previous year and a slight gain on the previous month, a few of the bigger roads found conditions about at a standstill, with tonnage about the same as a year ago. Officials of southern roads report total freight loadings about the same as recent weeks.

Railroads of the United States burned 38,894,000 bris fuel oil in locomotives in 1921, against 45,847,000 in 1920. Of fuel oil consumed last year 27,615,000 bris came from domestic crudes and 11,209,000 Mexican, according to the American Petroleum institute.

The Maine Central railroad announces an agreement with Connecticut lines by which a reduction of about 10 per cent on fares of southern and western points would be made next summer.

Freight cars idle, because of business conditions on Feb. 28 totaled 417,964, compared with 437,678 for the previous week, a decrease of 19,714 cars.

CASH-GRAIN NEWS

Exporters reported only a moderate demand for cash grain at the seaboard, Saturday generally being a bad day for business. There was some corn worked overnight, but the demand for wheat was slow.

Chicago cash handlers sold 150,000 bu corn to the seaboard. Domestic milling sales were 23,000 bu wheat, 95,000 bu corn, 70,000 bu oats, and 25,000 bu rye, the latter going to exporters.

Hard winter wheat prices were 1@2c higher as compared with the May, the advance coming just before the close. No. 2 hard was quoted at 3@4c, and dark No. 2 hard at 2@3c under May. No. 2 red was nominally 2@4c under the future. Receipts, 19 cars. Demand in outside markets was better, with prices 1@3c higher. Omaha leading.

Offerings of cash corn were not large. Basis firm as compared with May, with No. 2 yellow at 4½c under, mixed at 4¾@5c under May and No. 2 white at May price, selling at the best figures of the week yesterday. Sample values ½c higher for the day. Receipts, 181 cars. Outside markets, 1@2c higher.

Demand for cash oats not very keen. Sample values ¼c higher, with receipts 120 cars. No. 2 white brought May price to 1c under, and No. 3 white 1@1½c under.

Highly Profitable Suggestions concerning your LIBERTY and VICTORY BONDS

YOU CAN INCREASE the income you are now getting from your Liberty and Victory Bonds. You can make a profit on them that probably you never expected—far greater than you think. Let us suggest the way.

No bonds so SAFE were ever offered in the history of the world—yet, in all probability, you are losing money, due to the lack of new information which only H. O. STONE & CO. is prepared to give you.

Make $2,292.56 Profit on One $1,000 Liberty Bond

It may seem hard to believe that this can be done, yet this old, conservative house, with eighty-seven years of experience in Chicago real estate investments, tells you it IS being done—now—by our clients. No other investment house has taken the pains to make up this data for you, that is all—to clearly point out the opportunity to you—to furnish you unmistakable proof.

You can positively make a profit on every Liberty Bond you own—no matter what the denomination—in addition to—over and above—the interest that will accrue on your bond if held to maturity. This is an absolutely CLEAR PROFIT, due to the plan we wish to give you.

No bond client of ours ever lost a dollar. This plan is as safe as any bond we ever sold. You do not understand it now—of course not. How could you?—the information, the plan, the literature explaining it are all new—never before published. First copies of the circular will be received from the printer tomorrow morning.

Delay in getting this literature may be costly. Call at our office tomorrow and, if possible, bring a list of your Liberty and Victory Bonds or the bonds themselves. Or telephone, write or mail this coupon. It will pay you if you own a single Liberty or Victory Bond—of any issue—any amount. Just ask for Circular T-312. Our plan will be given you without obligation.

7% Gold Bonds

Cole Lithographing & Printing Co.

THIS new $35,000 issue of 7% Gold Bonds is secured by a direct first mortgage on the land and building owned and occupied by the Cole Lithographing & Printing Co. This well-known, long established company occupies all except two-thirds of the first floor space in the building. A rental of $2400 a year is received for this space.

The property is located at 3027-33 South Wabash Avenue and consists of a two-story and basement, brick, mill constructed, steam-heated building which covers the entire lot, 72½x114 feet.

The company recently refused an offer of $90,000.00 for this property.

Serial principal payments have been arranged for, which increase the margin of security annually for the duration of the loan—five years. Interest is payable semi-annually.

Write today for information concerning the 7% Cole Lithographing & Printing Co. Gold Bonds. Sent without obligation.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

The government report on interior mill and elevator stocks of wheat in the United States, as given out late yesterday, aggregates 72,564,000 bu, compared with 82,000,000 bu last year. It suggests total supplies in all positions March 1 of 251,000,000 bu, compared with 331,000,000 bu last year and 346,000,000 bu two years ago. On the basis of 35,000,000 bu consumption per month for the four months from March 1 to July 1 there would be 140,000,000 bu required. Allowing 50,000,000 bu for export and 30,000,000 bu for spring seeding, there would be a nominal carry over of 31,000,000 bu. The trade in general is looking for a carry over of about 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 bu.

On the basis of the government report of supplies on farms and interior elevators and mill stocks, there is an unusually close adjustment of supplies to requirements of wheat. With a belief in light stocks of flour, there is a situation in wheat which is not favorable to the short side. Russel, the New York statistician, in a review of the world's situation, says that the underlying foundation is not a weak one, and, while many look for rapid fluctuations with numerous breaks, sentiment is favorable for high prices for a long pull.

It is the belief of close observers of the wheat trading that most of the local element were short and their buying furnished the bulk of the trading yesterday. The big commission houses absorbed the offerings on all weak spots, with Bartlett-Frazier, Bennett, Harris, Winthrop, and J. Rosenbaum conspicuous buyers. Cash wheat prices are strengthening and the milling demand improving. Sales of No. 2 red wheat were made in St. Louis at $1.48 and of No. 2 hard in Chicago at $1.34¼ for 59½ lb wheat, the latter being 3¼c under May, the smallest discount of late.

A noticeable improvement in the cash corn market and the narrowing of discounts is being generally commented on and is inducing buying.

Supplies on ocean passage increased 6,800,000 bu, as given by the London Grain, Seed and Oil Reporter, the total being 65,960,000 bu. Corn increased 1,315,000 bu to 29,377,000 bu.

Buenos Aires closed ½c lower on wheat, unchanged for corn and oats, and 5c higher on flax, as compared with Friday's finish.

John F. Barrett left yesterday for Hot Springs, where he will spend a month in doing nothing.

Argentina has around 40,000,000 bu old corn on hand available for export, according to Broomhall, and with the surplus of 108,000,000 bu from the new crop there is a total of 140,000,000 bu, compared with 154,000,000 bu last season.

Wagner & Co. Creditors Will Take Slow Assets

Creditors of E. W. Wagner & Co. are to get 50 cents cash and have the prospect of 50 cents more in slow assets. Plans for this settlement have been about completed and are to be submitted to creditors. It is proposed to organize an asset realization corporation to liquidate the slow assets. It is proposed to push the liquidation as fast as possible and dividends are to be paid in small amounts from time to time.

All details have been practically worked out by the two committees at Chicago and New York who have been conferring in Chicago of late. Creditors are coöperating with the committee in a way that makes them feel that all plans will prove satisfactory.

Liabilities of the company are $8,500,000, of which $6,500,000 are in the west and $1,500,000 in the east. The Chicago committee having the liquidation in charge is composed of J. C. Murray, F. S. Cowgill, Fred S. Lewis, G. B. Van Ness, John H. Jones and John Hill Jr. The latter, as secretary, has had a large part of the work to handle.

"Now, Mary, We Know Our Money Will Be Safe"

---and earn the maximum income, too

WHY put your money in anything presenting the slightest risk when you can come to the Madison & Kedzie State Bank and get first mortgage gold bonds paying 7% with safety?

You can obtain this attractive income in one of the safest forms of investment known—part of a first mortgage on a high grade, well located building and land valued greatly in excess of the bond issue. Every detail of the issue has been investigated and approved by this Bank; we consider these bonds so safe that some of our own funds are placed in them.

Don't flounder around in the myriads of "investment opportunities" that are long on promises but short on tangible security and proper safeguards. Stick to something you know is safe—where you can judge the security yourself and deal with an institution that is reliable. Get at the same time the maximum income—7%.

Thousands of people have learned the safety and profit of buying these bonds. Why not investigate what they offer you? Come to the Bank and let us explain them to you. Whether you have $100 or less, or $1,000 or more, you will be assured of the same courteous, conscientious attention.

If not convenient to call personally, just telephone or write for interesting literature

A Personal Word from President Davis

Now that we are going outside for additional capital, I feel that the investor who puts his money into my business is not only entitled to a preference as to dividends, but also to an equal share in the profits and valuable "good will" of the business.

We have therefore arranged a unique new form of security that not only assures a perpetual fixed income of 8% a year, but also gives the investor an opportunity to earn greatly in excess of 8% a year on his money.

From my intimate knowledge of the business, which I founded 18 years ago, and have continuously managed, I am confident that this company, with the realization of the additional working capital, will in the future excel even its past remarkable record of growth and earnings.

E. E. DAVIS,
President.

8% New Form of Profit-Sharing Non-Callable SECURITY

Offered Direct by the Largest Company of Its Kind in the World

The worth and stability of a business enterprise can be accurately measured only by its record of results, and any reliable forecast of its future must of necessity be based on this record. Discriminating investors who carefully investigate this opportunity will find that it offers a combination of safety, liberal profits and specially attractive features of a most unusual character.

The Davis Boring Tool Company started 18 years ago with $1,000 capital. Today it is the largest concern of its kind, with an uninterrupted growth that has resulted almost entirely from earnings. Only $10,000 of outside capital has ever been brought into the business.

Each year the plant capacity has been enlarged from profits, but the volume of demand has grown so rapidly that it is now desirable to provide additional capital to care for the large number of profitable orders that have heretofore been declined.

The Company Has Practically No Competition

The company has practically no competition, due to the proven superiority of its product, which is fully protected by strong basic patents. Davis Boring Tools are used exclusively as standard equipment by 98% of the railroads of the U. S. and Canada and by 60% of those in foreign countries. The enormous waiting business in the automotive and general industrial field will increase our volume many times.

The World's Oldest Investment Now Coming Into Its Own

Farm Mortgages are the world's oldest investment. They are known to have existed 2,500 years ago. Always they have been safe. In fact, Farm Mortgage Investments are ultra-conservative. They have always yielded a liberal return.

And yet, they are overlooked by many investors. The reason for this is easy to see. Farm Mortgage Investments are much in demand by insurance and trust companies, and estates—where trained experts place money for investment.

These experts take all the Farm Mortgages they can get. The public has not been much urged to buy them. No wave of popularity has been promoted to increase their sale.

Now, however, a change is taking place. This 2,500-year-old investment is coming into its own. Investors large and small are beginning to see its advantages for them—a liberal yield with the utmost safety. They are beginning to see that the farm—the greatest business institution in the world—is the best security for their money.

100% Safe for 36 Years

All who have bought Forman Farm Mortgages and Gold Bonds have found them worry-proof. They have a 36-year record of 100% safety. No individual has ever suffered loss or delay in either interest or principal. This 100% record of over a third of a century is your best assurance of safety.

Forman Mortgages and Bonds require no supervision by the investor. All matters of title, insurance, collection of interest, etc., are looked after by us. You only need to clip your interest coupons and mail them to our office twice yearly.

Easily Bought By Mail

So simple is the purchase of Forman Securities that it is easily done by mail. Many who have never met us personally have bought by mail for years. Ask us now to mail you full details about Forman Farm Mortgages and Gold Bonds.

It doesn't matter whether your purchases are large or small. Our bonds are issued in denominations of $100, $500 and $1000. Orders for any amount are given equally careful attention.

And if you haven't the funds for investment now you will want to know about the Forman Plan. It shows you how to invest your savings monthly, and earn full interest from the start.

Have You an Interesting Proposition That Needs Development?

Can Invest Up to $10,000

Am 34 years old, two and one-half years' university training and have had fifteen years' excellent business experience. Fifteen months ago I was asked to become general manager of machine shop and foundry employing normally 375 men, but at that time practically without business and in serious difficulties. Within four months this plant was running to fullest capacity and very recently I have arranged sale on highly satisfactory basis to all concerned.

I now desire an attractive proposition, automotive field preferred but not necessary. Proposition must be clean. Give full particulars and references first communication.

The New York Times.

New York, March 11.—[Special.]—The only incident of large financial interest today was the reduction of its official discount rate by the Bank of France. This cut from 5½ per cent to 5 had been expected. The downward tendency of money had of late been felt on the Paris market as elsewhere.

Precisely as the latest reductions by our federal reserve and by the Bank of England has been preceded by reduction of the interest rate on treasury short term loans, so the French bank's action had been foreshadowed by a similar reduction in the rate of the French government's so-called "defense bonds." Paris has been the slowest of the European money markets to decline, but the world-wide tendency could not be resisted.

Stocks and Bonds Strong.

These changes at London and Paris have not yet been accompanied by further reduction at our federal reserve, where the New York rate has not been changed since Nov. 3. But the London rate is now only at a level with New York's, and the Paris rate one-half of 1 per cent higher.

Today's markets were made up of another fractional decline in foreign exchange, in which, however, sterling did not reach the low point of the week; continued strength in the investment, bond market, and a moderate further rise in stocks. The last named movement was not of important scope; perhaps its main significance lay in the fact that, coming at the week's close, it apparently indicated on which side of the market speculative commitments have been the larger. Taken as a whole, the week has been marked by a considerable advance of prices, ranging from 2 to 4 points in a fairly long list of stocks.

Prices Make Good Gains.

Trading on the stock exchange during the two hours of business today was on a fairly active scale, and the movement on prices was generally higher, both the railroad and industrial "averages" scoring moderate gains. Some of the speculative favorites, however, registered sharp gains, while some of the investment stocks also made further headway. Among the latter General Electric was prominent with an advance of 3¼ points to within a fraction of the high record for the year.

The copper stocks as a group were exceptionally firm, the strength in these stocks being attributed to the recent improvement in the export market. Anaconda gained 1½ for the day and American Smelting 1¼ and Utah 1¼, these stocks being featured. Railroads also continued prominent, and the rubber tire and motor stocks also continued active and higher.

Loans Drop in New York.

Another substantial decrease in the loans of the New York clearing house banks is shown in this week's statement, the contraction amounting to $22,685,000. The deficit of $12,054,030 in reserves reported a week ago is replaced by a surplus of $30,401,650. Net demand deposits have increased $23,205,000 and time deposits $1,159,000. Reserve deposits with the New York Federal Reserve bank show an increase of $45,100,000 and government deposits are practically unchanged. Details of the statement, with comparisons, follow:

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

The weekly review of F. M. Zeller & Co. follows:

The unlisted securities market worked along broader lines than for many months. A number of issues which had been neglected are showing considerable activity. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply advanced from around 41 to sales at 50, closing at 49@52. Butler Brothers ranged between 34½@35. McCord Manufacturing improved from 3¼ to high sales at 5⅜, and was in demand at the latter price, with light offerings at 6.

United States Gypsum common sold as high as 55, with a rapid break to sales as low as 43, and a quick recovery to 53 bid. Godchaux Sugar preferred was quoted at 60@65. Burroughs Adding Machine declined about 2 points to 143 bid, offered at 145. Wahl Adding Machine preferred was a trifle lower at 94@95. Moline Plow preferred was in demand at 8½, with stock offered at 9½. Consumers common was wanted at 5¼, with stock offered at 5½. Packard was fractionally lower at 6 bid, offered at 6⅜; preferred was traded in at 65 ex-dividend. Bids of 325 for Northwestern Yeast failed to bring out any offerings of stock. Avery common was wanted at 16.

The public utility group was quite active, being helped by the favorable decision of the New Jersey public commission in the Consolidated Gas case. American Light and Traction common was the feature of the list, advancing from an opening of 116 to a close of 129.

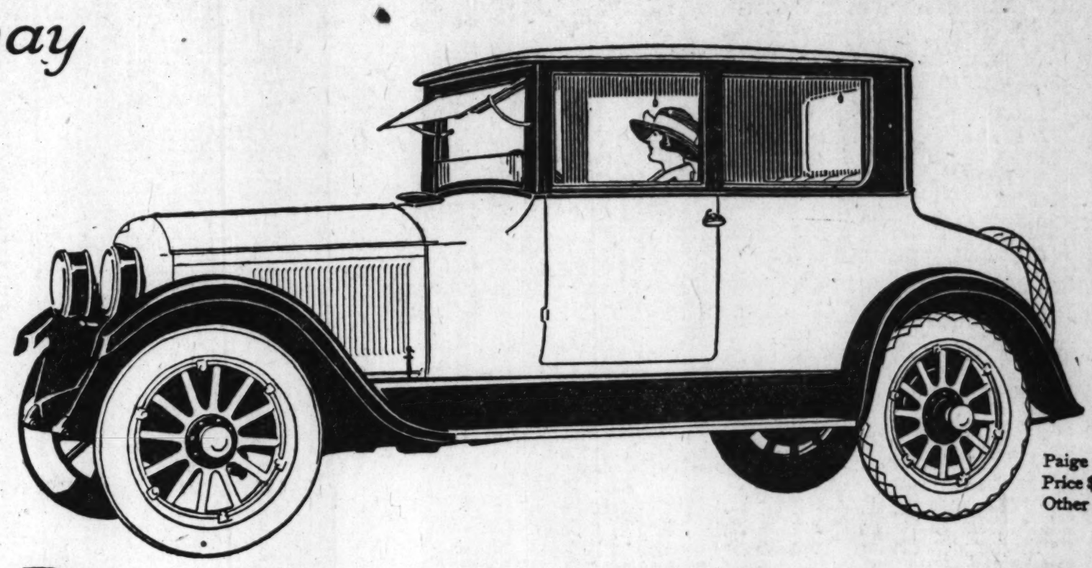
PAIGE

Master of the Highway



Paige Six-66 Brougham.
Price $3,100 f. o. b. factory.
Other models listed below.

Such Power you never heard so Quiet

Seventy horse-power—power that drove the Daytona Six-66 stock chassis 102 miles per hour—and it passes you as silent as the stars. Power that has won local hill-climbing events the country over—power that will pass any car you meet on hill or level—and not a feel of tremble in the car.

You do not begin to know this Paige Six-66. You cannot even imagine how its spirited performance will get you. So different, so thrilling, so obedient. For this masterful car is easily controlled. It makes of you the master. You soon drive by instinct.

And because it is so easy it is restful. A long day's drive leaves you fresh and keen. Rough roads, tight places, have left you unperturbed. Passengers, too, gain confidence quickly. Restful seat positions, low hung chassis, 131 inch wheelbase, long springs—these do ease mind and body.

Compare this car in modernness with all fine cars you know. It is, in fact, the only car of its size and power designed since the war—with all those engineering lessons incorporated. It excels, of course. In fact, it leads in engineering advancement today.

Every day Paige owners ask, "Why does anyone pay more for a less able, old type car?" There is only one answer—"They do not know this Paige Six-66." Those who have driven it marvel at it. Those who have compared it with the costliest say this Paige gives all that money can buy.

Especially is this true of the five-passenger Brougham pictured above, at $3,100. In a year it has become the pattern type for compact enclosed cars. Low hung, low roof, yet plenty of head room. Smart as you could ask, and roomy inside.

The right front seat slides crosswise. Any of the passengers may enter or leave without disturbing others. Seats are all full cushioned and comfortable. The upholstery fabrics and fittings are of the highest class. On the road it is as able as a touring car—power to spare. Try to match its comfort and performance for $4,000—or even $5,000.

Our strength in Chicago protects you

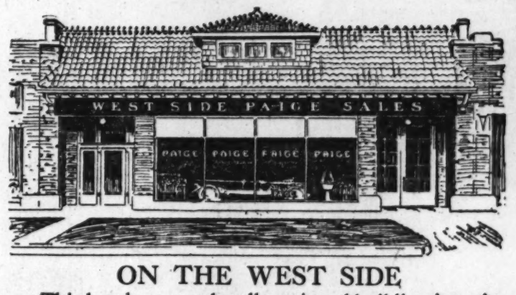
After-sale service has much to do with the enjoyment of your new car. Adjustments will be needed. An accident may make repairs necessary. Then why not investigate the facts before buying?

Consider for a minute what is behind the Paige in Chicago. First—$1,500,000 invested in the buildings and equipment belonging to us and our nine associated dealers. Next—$150,000 worth of parts in stock in our ten Sales and Service Stations.

Think what this means to you! It means that wherever you live in Chicago, a Paige Station is near you. It means that we have practically a complete stock of parts for every Paige car ever manufactured. It means that if replacements are necessary there will be no delay in finding what you require. What a feeling of security these service provisions give to every Paige owner in Chicago! Where else can you find such strength and protection?

But in spite of all this preparation for replacements, the average cost of parts served from our stock in 1921 was very low—only $25 per car. And this includes parts for cars up to ten years old, accident replacements and frozen radiators.

No wonder the 4,000 owners in Chicago have such confidence in the organization behind the Paige!



ON THE WEST SIDE

This handsome and well-equipped building is maintained by West Side Paige Sales. It is located at 4641 Washington Boulevard, just a mile from Garfield Park.

Nine other stations are situated at central points over the city. They are listed below. No matter where you live in Chicago, there is Paige Service within a reasonable distance.

In every station are competent mechanics. They make repairs and adjustments with swift skill. A great convenience for the 4,000 Chicago Paige owners. The women or young people of the household can deal with them with confidence. The man of the house does not need to cut into his business hours to attend to repairs and adjustments.

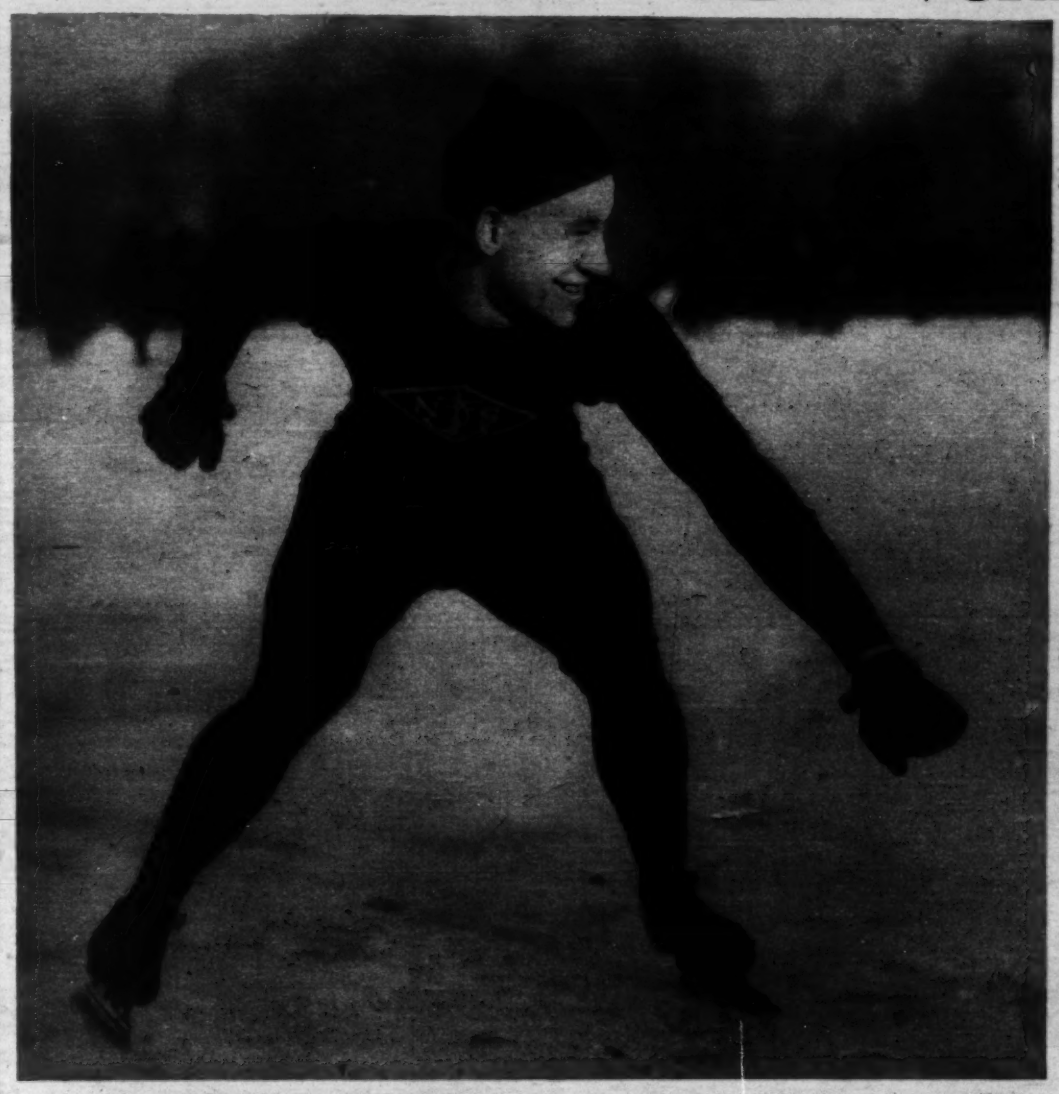
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

MARCH 12, 1922

SOME NEW CHAMPIONS



ART STAFF OF CHICAGO won the Canadian professional ice skating championship at St. John, N. B., on Feb. 25, winning every event in the two-day meet except the five-mile race. (TRIBUNE Photograph.)

JOHNNY WEISMULLER OF CHICAGO, who already held many records, has just broken the world"s record for the 220-yard free style swim at Great Lakes. (TRIBUNE Photograph.)

PHIL A. NEER, a senior at Leland Stanford university, is the college tennis champion, winning his title by defeating J. B. Fenno of Harvard at Philadelphia. Neer will defend the title this spring in a series of matches. (Photograph from Kadel & Herbert.)

JIMMY BLOUIN OF CHICAGO won the world's classic bowling championship tournament here by piling up a record of 547.14 points. Twenty-four of the country's best bowlers rolled a total of 115 games in the two weeks' tourney at the Coliseum annex. Blouin received $1,200 and a diamond medal.

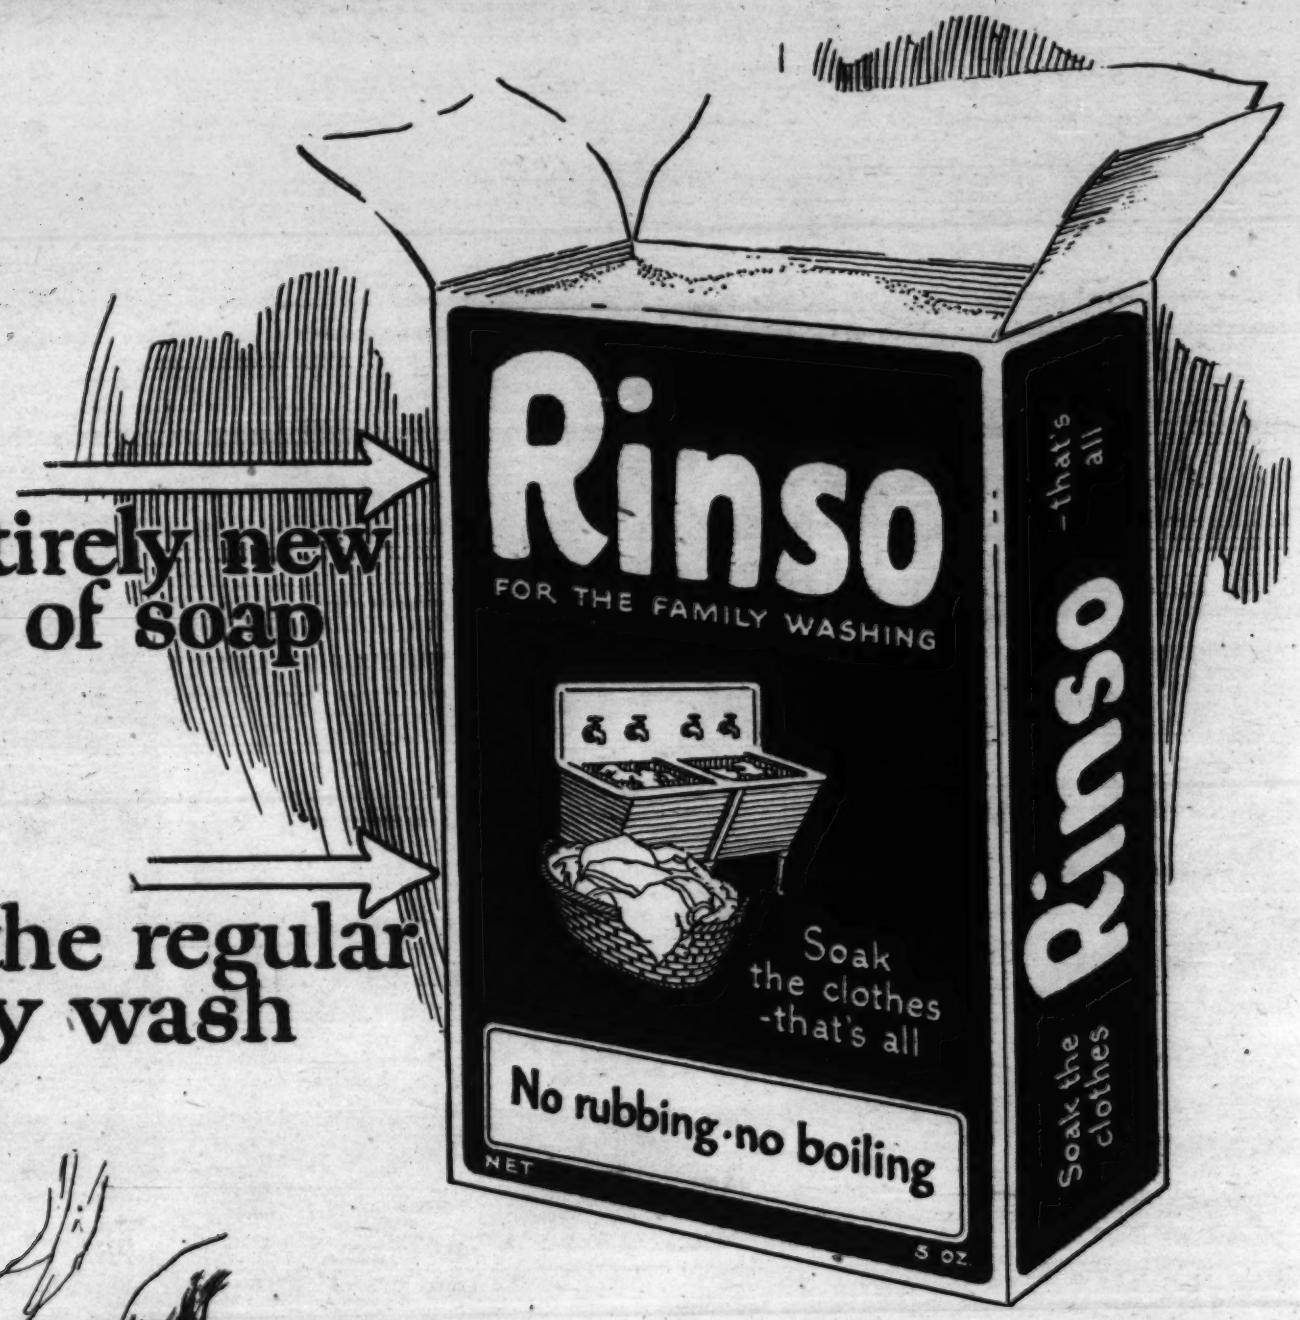
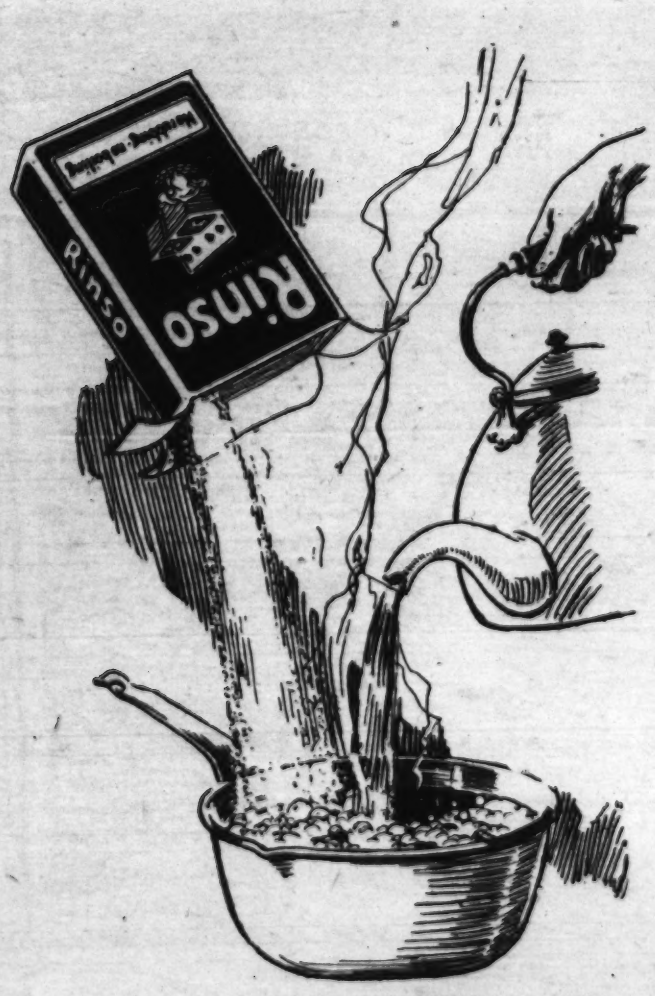
An entirely new kind of soap



For all the regular family wash



Dissolve in boiling water
Pour into tub of lukewarm water
Use enough Rinso to get big, lasting suds

More cleansing power than bar soap

A new kind of soap.

Soap made of pure materials combined in such a way that it has more cleansing power than soap has ever had before.

This new kind of soap gently soaks loose the most ground-in dirt without weakening a single thread.

Rinso dissolves completely and almost at once in boiling water. It gives such soapy water, such big lasting suds that soaking does almost all the work instead of a small part of it. Even the worst soiled spots need but a light rubbing with dry Rinso.

Rinso soaks clothes so clean that boiling isn't necessary. But if you like to boil your white cottons see what a difference it makes in your boiler.

If you have a washing machine help it do its best work by using Rinso in it. Rinso takes the place of bar soap at every step of the family wash.

Rinso is made by the largest soap makers in the world. Get Rinso today at grocery and department stores. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

In very hard water it takes from 1¼ to 2 packages of Rinso to a tub to make the big lasting suds that loosen all the dirt

Cinderella Silk is the smartly black-and-white patterned fabric of this surplice day-frock. The plaited gilet and sleeve puffs are of gray Crêpe jerlana.

SPRING INTRODUCES THE NEW SILKS

SPRING—and the new Cheney Silks make their debut, bowing graciously to the lovely vagaries of the mode.

The Topping Twills come first, with Cinderella and Foulards, each in a distinctive new collection of fetching designs. Then there are the Crêpes, of which Frostkrêpe and the wonderful Colorspun Crêpes, are the very latest. There are glinting Cheney Satins and rich Cheney Failles, too, and the "swishy" taffetas that youth loves best.

Stores with a reputation for fine merchandise will be quite sure to sell Cheney Silks, either by the yard or in garments ready to wear.

COOK COUNTY'S SECOND COURT HOUSE was swept by the great fire of 1871? It stood in the same block as the present county building.

ADRIAN C. ANSON—yes, "Cap" Anson—was at the head of the Chicago White Stockings? Those were the days! Last summer he managed a golf club.

EDITH TALIAFERRO was appearing as Lovey Mary in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" and as "Polly of the Circus"? Here is a charming portrait.

MABEL TALIAFERRO, favorite of screen and stage, and a sister of Edith, looked like this? She made her stage debut when she was 2½ years old.

Tender Gums Become Firm

Gum soreness and bleeding usually end in one week. Kloria destroys germ cause. Free trial proves it.

NOTHING like Kloria has ever been known before for sore, bleeding gums, pyorrhea, etc. Usually, in one week, all gum soreness and bleeding disappear, and soon the shrunken gums tighten around the teeth again. Doubt if you must, but try it.

This is the new and wonderful antiseptic discovered in the world war, which, by scientific test, is over 40 times more germ-destroying than carbolic acid. This great germicidal power is what makes it so effective.

Yet Kloria doesn't burn or irritate, is soothing, pleasant, and absolutely safe because not poisonous. As a healing agent, it knows no equal.

Apply it, without fear, to any skin disease such as eczema or barber's itch, and watch the trouble fade away. Mark how it soothes soreness, itching and irritation. Note how promptly it destroys the pus infection of boils, carbuncles and sores; how it heals cuts and burns, often in one-fourth the usual time. For dandruff, simply wet the scalp a few times with Kloria, and see how quickly the itching and dandruff disappear, yet it is harmless as water to the hair. As a mouth-wash, it really destroys the acid-forming bacteria, thus preventing tooth decay. As a gargle, there is nothing like it for sore throat. Harmless, yet more effective than any poisonous antiseptic for personal hygiene.

Dissolve a few Kloria Tablets in water, and instantly you have, at a cost of a few cents, a large bottle of liquid antiseptic which is clean, colorless, stainless and virtually odorless.

All druggists. 50c. Money refunded if not satisfied.

Free Sample A sample of Kloria, enough for a convincing test, will be gladly sent free. Write for it. The results will be a revelation.

Fleischmann's fresh yeast helps digestion and cleans a coated tongue

THOUSANDS of men and women have found relief from various digestive disturbances by eating Fleischmann's Yeast.

It is human nature to want to find out "why." So far as science can tell us this is the reason:

Fleischmann's Yeast is a food abundant in certain elements which are necessary to health and life itself. It promotes the flow of bile and of pancreatic juice. It has a remarkably beneficial effect on the whole digestive system. It cleans a coated tongue.

Try Fleischmann's fresh yeast in orange juice or, if you prefer, in milk. Men like it in milk shakes and malted milks. Women like it spread on bread or crackers.

Keep your digestion in the pink of condition and your tongue clean and healthy by eating 2 or 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast fresh every day before or between meals. Get Fleischmann's Yeast fresh daily from your grocer.

Your skin can be improved by one of these famous treatments

Different types of skin need different care—are you using the right treatment for your special type of skin?

SLEEP—fresh air—the right food—all these contribute to a healthy condition of your skin.

But your skin itself must be given special care if you want it to have all the beauty and charm it can have.

Many a girl suffers from embarrassing little defects in her complexion, such as blackheads, etc., which do not arise from a general condition of health, but from lack of proper care of the skin itself.

Use the right treatment for your special type of skin

You can overcome defects in your complexion by giving your skin the right treatment for its needs. Remember—your skin is changing every day; each day old skin dies and new takes its place. Give this new skin the right treatment and see how much clearer and smoother your complexion will become.

Skins differ widely—and the treatment that is right for one type of skin may fail to benefit another.

That is why the famous Woodbury treatments for different types of skin have been formulated. By using the treatment that meets the needs of your skin, you can give your complexion a freshness and beauty you never thought was possible.

Three of the famous Woodbury treatments are given on this page. These and other complete treatments for each different type of skin are given in the booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch," which is wrapped around every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today and begin using your treatment tonight. The same qualities that give Woodbury's its beneficial effect in overcoming common skin defects, make it ideal for general use. A 25c cake lasts a month or six weeks.

Send today for a complete miniature set of the Woodbury skin preparations

For 25 cents we will send you a complete miniature set of the Woodbury skin preparations, containing:

A trial size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap
A sample tube of Woodbury's Facial Cream
A sample tube of Woodbury's Cold Cream
A sample box of Woodbury's Facial Powder
Together with the treatment booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch."

Send for this set today. Address The Andrew Jergens Co., Spring Grove Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

How to correct a skin that is too oily

EVERY night before retiring, with warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

A special treatment for a pale, sallow type of skin

ONE night a week, fill your basin full of hot water—almost boiling hot. Bend over the top of the basin and cover your head with a heavy bath towel, so that no steam can escape. Steam your face for thirty seconds. Now, lather a hot cloth with Woodbury's Facial Soap. With this wash your face thoroughly, rubbing the lather well into the skin with an upward and outward motion. Then rinse the skin well, first with warm water, then with cold, and finish by rubbing it for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

The right treatment for an exceptionally sensitive skin

EACH night, before retiring, dip a soft washcloth in warm water and hold it to your face. Then make a warm water lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and dip your cloth up and down in it until the cloth is "fluffy" with the soft white lather. Rub this lathered cloth gently over your skin, until the pores are thoroughly cleansed. Rinse well with warm, then with clear, cool water, and dry carefully.

6-ROOM HOUSE FREE

Stop Paying Rent! This offer is so liberal it is hard to believe, but it is true—every word is true. There are no strings to my offer and I will positively give a house away just as I promise in this offer. You can get a home Free if you send me your name quick and do as I say.

Surely you have longed for the day to come when you could cease paying rent to a heartless landlord, and call your home your own. I am now offering you the golden opportunity to free yourself from the clutches of the money-grabbing landlord and at no cost to yourself. Picture a handsome six-room house, nice lawn and pretty shrubbery and flowers growing in well-arranged beds. Don't you want a place like this, and FREE, too? Of course you do, so send me your name TODAY—before you lay this paper aside.

The House Can Be Built Anywhere You Want It Don't hold back—don't say "no such luck for me." You can have the house built wherever you say—California, Maine, or anywhere in the United States. It makes no difference where you want to live. This offer is open to all.

I Will Even Buy A Lot For You

Perhaps you do not own a lot, or have no place to build, but don't allow this to prevent your sending in your name and address, because I will arrange to buy a lot for you if you don't own one. A wonderfully beautiful and comfortable home can be yours if you promptly answer this advertisement, and do as I say. Don't take chances of some other person getting ahead of you, but rush your name and address to me at once. An offer like this may never come to you again.

Costs Nothing to Investigate You run absolutely no risk whatever. It costs you nothing to investigate this wonderfully liberal offer. I would like to place one of my houses in your locality. All I ask you to do is to rush me your name and address—a post card will do. Just say "I want one of your FREE homes."

Bourjois' Java Face Powder will make you more beautiful

It will give a deeper, richer tone to your natural coloring, soften the glow of your complexion, enhance the beauty of your face.

The chiefest charm of Java is naturalness. It never prompts the whispered comment "too much powder."

Originally, Java was made for a distinguished French woman who wanted a Face Powder that enhanced her own natural complexion and coloring.

She knew that this was the most effective way to display her beauty.

And you, too, shall know it, if you use Java. You, too, shall say that Bourjois' Java Face Powder is indeed a compliment to your complexion.

Bourjois' JAVA Face Powder

A compliment to your Complexion is a discreet, hand-made French rouge. So subtle is it, so natural, that its devotees say that it is art to heart with their complexions. Use it with Java Face Powder and note the sparkling expression it lends to your face. For the woman who prefers a lighter shade, we suggest Rouge Mandarin. All of these are included in the 12 leading preparations to be found in the Bourjois Cabinet Assortment at leading dealers.

ASHES of ROSES

The Big Job Calls

For days the directors' choice hung in the balance between two able men. This one was called to bigger things because he had placed the true commercial estimate on health.

It pays to take good care of the teeth.

Thousands have their efficiency lowered and their resistance to disease cut down by their failure to heed the first warnings of Pyorrhea which afflicts four people out of five who pass the age of forty and many younger.

Are your gums tender? Do they bleed easily when brushed?

Those are the signs of Pyorrhea's presence. If neglected the germs attack the teeth, which loosen, drop out or must be pulled. Pus pockets form and the whole system may pay the penalty of neglect.

If you would prevent Pyorrhea, see your dentist often and heed his advice. Also, start using Forhan's For the Gums today.

Forhan's For the Gums is the formula of R. J. Forhan, D. D. S. If used consistently and used in time, it will prevent Pyorrhea or check its course. An excellent dentifrice, it keeps the teeth white and clean and the gums pink, firm and healthy.

Brush Your Teeth With Forhan's — How to Use It

Use it twice daily, year in and year out. Wet your brush in cold water, place a half-inch of the refreshing, healing paste on it, then brush your teeth up and down. Use a rolling motion to clean the crevices. Brush the grinding and back surfaces of the teeth. Massage your gums with your Forhan-coated brush—gently at first until the gums harden, then more vigorously. If the gums are very tender, massage with the finger, instead of the brush. If gum-shrinkage has already set in, use Forhan's according to directions, and consult a dentist immediately for specia! treatment. 35c and 60c, in the U. S. and Canada. At all druggists.

Professional care for your nails—

In your own home, in five brief minutes

Many of the women you meet whose dainty nails look as though they had just come from a beauty shop, really spend no more time with their manicurist than you do. For that beautiful, glowing lustre which Good Society now demands, they merely brush their nails once or twice a week with Glazo, the smart new liquid polish.

You can give your nails this professional care in your own home in five brief minutes, without a moment's buffing, and the fashionable glow of Glazo will remain from five days to a week.

When you visit your manicurist, have her use Glazo, and your polish will last ever so much longer.

And the care of the cuticle is equally simple

Keep your nail sheaths soft and lovely by using Glazo Cuticle Massage with your orange stick when you shape the cuticle. Massage this delicate, beautifying cream in occasionally and leave it over night. You'll find a new charm in your dainty fingertips.

Ask for the Complete Glazo Manicure at any of the better toilet counters.

THE GROWING BOY

by W. E. HILL

"Really, I don't know what the young people of today are coming to! For my part, I've decided that Lawrence shall touch no liquor stronger than claret punch until his twenty-fifth birthday!" Such is the wise decision of Lawrence's mamma. Lawrence, be it known, is, at the moment of speaking, tripping the light fantastic at the country club with a flask on his hip and a flapper for his partner who has been expelled from finishing school for having a still in her room.

Clayton is chasing Shirley all over the yard. This is early caveman stuff. He is threatening to rub mud on Shirley's face. This is a first attempt by Clayton to flirt with a member of the opposite sex. Not much finesse, as yet. However, Clayton will improve as time goes on.

"I don't want him to start in on those terrible cigarettes, so if he has to smoke, I've bought him this nice pipe for his birthday."

(Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.)

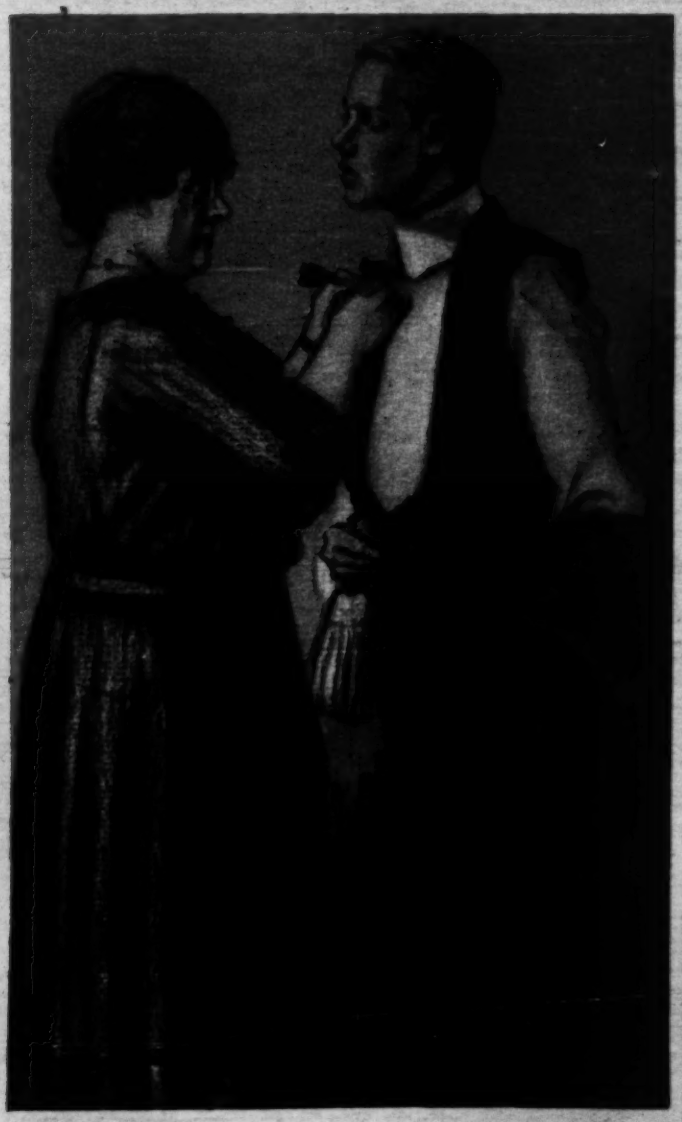
The eternal gap between the generations is the hardest thing in the world to bridge over. For instance, neither mamma nor grandma can see why Harold should want to take his very best young lady to tea at a big hotel when he can just as well bring her home for a nice hot cup of tea with mamma and grandma. And no chaperon? O, dear! And again, O, dear! In her day, argues grandma, no really nice girl would think for a moment of stepping into a public hostelry with a young man unless her mother or father were with her. And what would Harold think, adds mamma, if she and grandma were to smoke cigarettes in a public restaurant, and dance all over the place wearing dresses 'way above their knees, like the girls of today! How would he like that?

To the casual thinker it would seem that the boy of seventeen and the girl of like age ought to be pretty well matched. Not for a moment. The growing girl of seventeen summers is at least three centuries ahead of the growing boy. "Don't you think," she will ask, "that platonic friendship is a fine thing?" And then she will follow it up, if he is bashful, by asking him to look very closely and tell her what color he thinks her eyes are, brown or hazel? On the way home the boy will observe, no doubt, that, anyhow, a man never can understand a woman.

The elder sister of the growing boy is expected to act as a sort of Baedeker on social etiquette. She is supposed to be the last word on drafting an acceptance to an invitation, and if she falls down on her job you can be sure the boy is none the wiser.

The lost illusion. "Thirty! Why, gee, she's middle-aged!"

"Janet and I do wish you'd run over and see us some time!" When the growing boy reaches, say, the mature age of seventeen the mammas of the growing girls of his acquaintance (particularly if she is of the stout, wholesome type) grow very friendly with the boy's sister, and make no end of advances.



The first evening jacket and the tie that won't tie rightly. "I hope," Edwin's mother is saying, as she makes a bad job of the tie, "you'll remember to thank Mrs. Munson and tell her how much you've enjoyed the party," which is, of course, the last thing Edwin will remember to do.

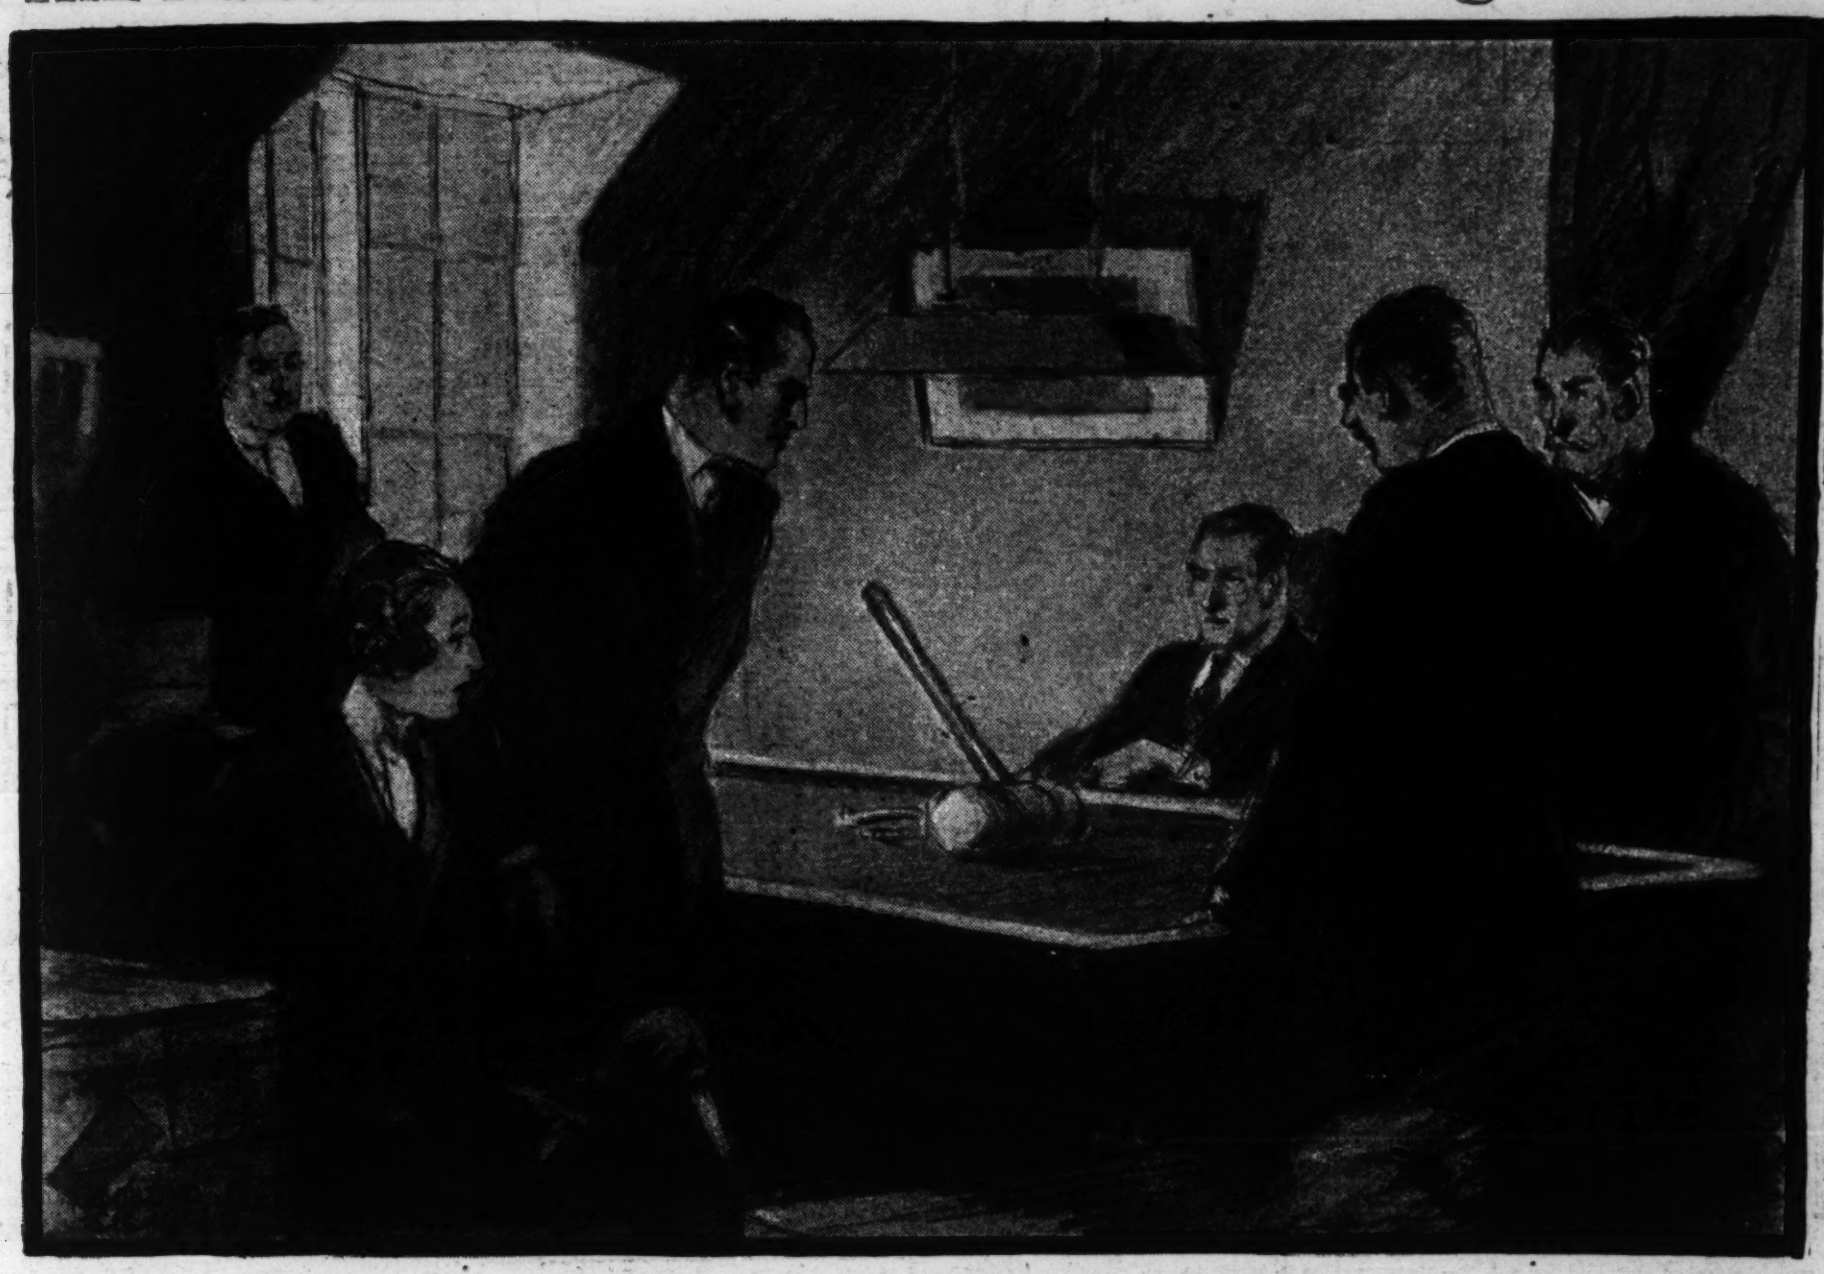
THE MAN KILLER

By Frederick Irving Anderson



The wooden maul, teetering on its rounded edge, was the focus of glazed stares.

Being the Tale of High Gun, the Demon Horse, and the Fourth Tragedy on Murder Row.

THERE were no primroses on the river's brim for Mr. Parr, deputy of police and inveterate man hunter by twenty years of habit. He could only see red, even when he was looking at green.

"Up there," said Mr. Parr, apropos des bottes, as the French say, indicating with a jerk of a thumb the sheep nibbled eminence of Beacon Hill, "up there women manslaughter their husbands with the utmost impunity."

He turned to scowl ferociously at his companion, Oliver Armiston, whose whole attention was occupied in holding his mettlesome roadster down to three miles an hour on high, behind a fleet of stone-deaf moving vans.

"I call it 'Murderers' Row,'" rasped the man hunter in Oliver's ear, showing his teeth in a mirthless smile. Armiston bleated feebly at the rumbling obstruction ahead. He had been bleating for his right of way for the last ten minutes. Several times the rearmost van had swung out, and just as Oliver gave his eager engine the gas a car would come snorting through the gap from the opposite direction, and before Oliver could pull himself out of the ditch the insolent moving van would be perched on the crown of the road again.

Mr. Parr returned his fierce look to Murderers' Row. Coy rooftrees, ornate and glinting, returned his regard over the feathery tops of exotic shrubbery. Beacon Hill was gorgeous, especially on such a June day as this. Nature and landscape architects had conspired to eradicate the last taint of poverty from this part of the island, the 'Hampton Country. Oliver continued to bleat plaintively with his horn.

"The first one," mused Parr, glowering at a red tile expanse of roof showing amid aisles of lank locusts, "the first one used white arsenic."

The aggrieved Oliver, one immovable eye on the van ahead, suddenly snarled at the inextinguishable deputy.

"The first what?" he demanded.

"The first lady," said Parr suavely. "She was quite frank about it. The second—that one with the holy cologne bottles on the ridgepole—used a pearl handled pea shooter. Lord! You wouldn't have thought it would kill a flea. But it did!" He snapped his chops over this reflection. "The third one"—he ruminated further—"where you see the green shingles—preferred a sawed off shotgun. There was hardly enough left for the coroner."

Parr removed his cap and scratched his head reflectively.

"The fourth one," he began, and paused, surveying his companion with renewed ferocity. "I don't seem to recollect what happened the fourth one. Maybe nothing, yet."

The man hunter subsided momentarily, adjusting the wrapper of his cigar.

"Parr," said Oliver patiently, "you've been seeing blood ever since we left the city line. You've been pointing out the landmarks of oilcloth murders and trunk mysteries and garrotings all along the road. Forget it! You're on your vacation, man! Take a nip of the air. Look at the sky. The grass. The trees. The flowers. Can't you imagine some innocence somewhere?"

"O, if it doesn't interest you," said Parr glumly. It was true he was on a vacation—the first in twenty years. He had consented to come, but with misgivings.

"Turn to the left!" he commanded suddenly, waking up; and Oliver obediently turned into a little side road. "Give her her head! There's a parallel road a half mile out. We can run around that mob of piano movers if we can't run through them." Now the deputy was positively jocular. Somewhat cheered, Oliver stepped on the gas, and the lithe car jumped into a sprint like a quarter horse. "I know this country like a book," roared Parr in Oliver's ear as he clutched his cap. "I used to live here—off and on—when Murderers' Row—was in—eruption."

Chance.

A WINDING road lost itself among nicely barbered trees, to emerge at an upper level, where an ornamental garden looked over the edge of the escarpment. There sat the fourth house of Murderers' Row. It was an ornate affair. Carved in stone was its name—"White Bars."

At this instant Chance, that mischievous handmaiden of Fate, doubtless summoned by the pregnant auguries of the situation, took the center of the stage. Drama was in the air. The scene was set, the actors waiting. In the first place, there was Parr, inveterate man hunter, whose fame extended from Cape Cod to Waikiki. Beside him sat Oliver Armiston, extinct writer of tall tales, whose undue fame as a fiction criminologist had for some years held his imagination in leash. For a back drop Murderers' Row looked down expectantly through the shrubbery as though thirsting for fresh notoriety.

It was just here that Chance put her shoulder to the wheel. A moving van, abandoned by its keeper on a saucerlike incline in the road, started to roll down hill. It came to halt with a gentle bump. The bump itself was harmless enough, but the effect was like the kiss of a trigger on fulminate. A

Why Women Grow Old More Quickly Than Men

Science Now Shows What Causes Loss of Youth, Beauty and Attractiveness and Makes a Woman Fretful, Nervous, and Run-Down

If Your Face Is Haggard, Pale and Worn; Your Body Tired, Weak and Drooping, You Should Try This Magic-Like Substance Which Often Makes Women Look and Feel Years Younger

THOUSANDS of women are like the woman in this picture. They have grown old much more rapidly than their husbands. The roses have faded from their cheeks, they are weak, pale and careworn at a time of life when they should still be filled with buoyant health and radiant with youthful beauty.

Look for the woman who appears younger than a man of the same age and you will find the exception to that vast majority upon whom anaemia—lack of organic iron in the blood—has fastened its grip and is gradually sapping the health, vitality and beauty which every woman so longs to retain. In most cases men safeguard their health better than women by eating coarser foods, being more out of doors and leading more active lives, therefore keeping their blood rich in organic iron. The very moment a woman allows herself to become weak, nervous, and run-down she places a drain upon her whole system which overtaxes the power of the blood to renew wasted tissue., For want of iron a woman may look and feel old at thirty, pale, haggard, and all run-down—while at fifty or sixty, with good health and plenty of iron in her blood, she may still be young in feeling and so full of life and attractiveness as to defy detection of her real age.

Without organic iron in the blood nothing you eat does you any good. You don't get the strength out of it. When iron is supplied it enriches the impoverished blood, puts Nature's own color into the cheeks, strengthens the nerves and gives renewed vitality to the whole body.

You can tell the women whose blood is rich in strength giving iron. They are the beautiful, healthy, rosy cheeked women, filled with life, vim and energy, envied and sought after everywhere they go.

For centuries scientists tried in vain to make organic iron. At last the problem was solved so that you may now obtain pure organic iron like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils, and apples, from any druggist under the name of Nuxated Iron. By enriching the blood and increasing its carrying power, Nuxated Iron will often transform the flabby flesh, toneless tissues, and pallid cheeks of nervous women into a glow of health and make them look years younger within a surprisingly short time.

If you are thin or emaciated in appearance and wish something to increase your weight, yeast vitamine tablets should be taken in connection with organic Nuxated Iron, but DO NOT TAKE VITAMINES UNLESS YOU WISH YOUR WEIGHT INCREASED up to what a person should normally weigh. Vitamines are a most amazing nutrition substance found in certain foods. They are extremely valuable in putting flesh on thousands of thin people. We do not claim, however, that Vitamines will put flesh on everybody. Some people are naturally too thin and will remain so in spite of Vitamines and everything else.

At 20 Years

At 30 Years

At 40 Years

Those whose diet consists principally of meat-soups, white bread, meats of various kinds, fish, potatoes, tinned fruits and vegetables, pies and cakes, are likely to suffer from undernourishment and a weakened physical condition due to a deficiency of both vitamines and organic iron, and in such cases both vitamines and Nuxated Iron should be tried.

Arrangements have been made with druggists to give every reader of this paper a large $1.00 package of Genuine Yeast Vitamine Tablets with every bottle of Nuxated Iron that you purchase. Be sure to take only Nuxated Brand Genuine Yeast Vitamine Tablets, pure and unadulterated, with Nuxated Iron. In taking Vitamines with Nuxated Iron always take Yeast Vitamine Tablets before meals and Nuxated Iron after meals. Weigh yourself before you start and test your strength on a gymnasium strength testing machine, then weigh yourself again after ten days and see how much you have increased in weight, strength, energy and endurance.

It is often remarkable what an astonishing difference it makes in a person's appearance to round out face and figure with a few pounds of good, firm flesh. It is often equally surprising what a tremendous amount of pep, vigor, force and energy a little more oxygenated organic iron will do for a person whose blood is deficient in this magic-like substance.

Over four million people are using Nuxated Iron annually, their experience proving that it increased the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down people in many cases in two weeks' time.

If, after making the above test with Nuxated Iron or Nuxated Iron and Vitamines, you do not obtain all and even greater benefits than you expect, the manufacturers will promptly refund your money.

THE WANTED MAN

by Harris Dickson

THE STORY THUS FAR

ON opposite sides of Lake Marmion, in thousand devils, suddenly liberated in the interior of that van, sprang to life, swinging gigantic flails.

"The man killer! The man killer!" bellowed the head piano mover through the hideous clamor; and, as the herd ran pell-mell to the van, a pair of glistening hoofs, driven by a fury incarnate, crashed through the rear doors. The hoofs were gone and come again, this time carrying the two doors off their hinges with a shower of splinters.

Parr and Armiston lined up alongside just as a demon horse, backing and kicking itself free of hobbles, crashed to the roadway on its haunches. A knot in the torn halter rope caught fast in a broken hinge, and held—for the moment at least. The mad beast now seemed bent on strangling itself. Parr, noting the agony of the animal and its obvious aristocracy, tried to dodge in to its head; but he quickly desisted and backed off, helpless, rubbing an ear that had been fanned by those lashing sharp shod hoofs.

Just then, with a clatter of hoofs from behind, three riders wheeled through the stone arch of the gate, two men and a woman. They cannonaded up, careless of the fact that Parr and Armiston stood in their path. The woman slipped out of her saddle in the middle of a full stride. With the dexterity of a trained matador she dived under the caulks of the demon hoofs. With a sharp, eager cry of "High Gun! High Gun!" in a bound she was at the animal's head; she clamped a long fingered, jeweled hand on its muzzle. The effect was sheer magic. Instantly at that touch the murderous horse became subdued, though it continued to tremble slightly as she rubbed her cheek against the velvet nose and fondled an ear. High Gun arched his graceful neck to her shoulder.

"O! You darling baby!" she cried ecstatically, stroking the sleek neck. She loosened the demon's throat latch and took off the torn halter. She let the halter drop and stood examining the creature for a pensive moment; then she slowly walked around the horse, running a hand over the pasterns and hocks.

She was in boots, breeches, and jacket, with a starched ruff; and beneath her little hard hat her mahogany hair was drawn so tightly as to accent the natural sharpness of her features. She was of a type indigenous to this 'Hampton country, as fit and as sleek as her horse. Parr stared in frank admiration.

Another caress and she turned her back on the man killer and strode across the road, where her own mount, a spare roan, was picking grass in the ditch. Her "darling baby" followed at her shoulder, nosing her playfully. She slipped the bridle from the roan and inserted the bit, clinking, between the villainous teeth of the demon; with quick, sure movements she made the ears snug, drew tight the headstall. In a twinkling she had transferred the saddle and blanket, and, putting her beautiful neck in jeopardy, she reached under High Gun's belly for the girth. With a knee braced against the animal's ribs, she drew the girth tight and made it fast. Neither of her two companions offered to assist. She was so splendidly competent that comment or aid seemed superfluous.

Two Men.

ONE of the men had dismounted and, with one arm hooked over his steed's roached neck, hung idly watching her. He was a startling tall man, large boned; he bore a curious resemblance in facial contours to the horse beside him. If he admired the graceful shining creature or the woman's skill in subduing it, or if he were aware that strangers were looking on at the dramatic spectacle, his equine countenance gave no hint.

The second man sat idly looking down on them with a feebly amused expression. He had the tufted brows and the sharp beak of a hawk; his lean face was decorated with an absurdly slender mustache that seemed to have been "tweezed," as some ladies these days "tweeze" their eyebrows. It was he who spoke first.

"At last you've succeeded in doing something original. Eh, Jimmie?"

"You'll break your fool neck," he ventured absently.

The woman said, not to the languid prophet, but to the other:

"That barrel, Cecil! What?" Her long eyes glittered with pride as she caressed the horse with a look. She took out a cigaret, and as she tamped it daintily on her gold case she asked with a look for approbation—not for herself, but for her precious High Gun. Cecil nodded stonily. These two were undoubtedly high priests of the paddock, versed in a cult hidden to ordinary mortals. She thrust out a varnished boot, and Cecil, with one seven league stride, was beside her; he gave her a leg up as though she were a feather weight in the hollow of his hand.

"He'll break your fool neck," croaked the male Cassandra from his high seat, wasting another mouthful of breath.

The shining eager beast, at the touch of her knees, made the ditch in one bound; with a flirt of the ribbons she gave the horse its head, and it sailed over the stone wall through the brown of the rail birds, who threw themselves desperately to right and left with wild yells. Cecil was only a jump behind her, and with resounding hoofs the two were instantly lost in the woods. The second gentleman now bestirred himself; he slapped the roan over the rump with his crop and followed it clattering through the gate and up the drive.

Real Aristocracy.

ARMISTON and Parr were back in their car and Oliver's low spirits bobbed up like a cork as he let in the clutch and started ahead; that demon horse had at least served to eliminate road hogs from the vacation scenery. Parr now lapsed into a brown study, chewing a match end. Some distance down the road Oliver broke the silence. He said:

"I had the queer sensation back there of being invisible. You, too, Parr. Those three never saw us—no more than if we weren't there."

"That's aristocracy, my boy," said Parr. He was wearing his fiercest frown. "You've been in society today, son," he added. "That was Jimmie Penwarden."

"Eh? Which one?"

"The one that rather hoped Mrs. Jimmie would break her neck," said Parr. "She may," added the man hunter thoughtfully, "but I doubt it."

Jimmie Penwarden was famous primarily for Mrs. Jimmie; he took blows for her when she did something astonishing, which she was forever doing. Also Jimmie was notable in his own right for his clothes. Twelve months in the year he was stalked in his haunts by intrepid photographers for illustrated society journals published for the delectation of hoi-polloi. It seemed an idle thing—man's attire—to hang ambition on; nevertheless Jimmie was the object of envy among his kind. He followed Mrs. Jimmie about assiduously, fetched and carried for her with the utmost willingness. If there was a shade of rather bored tolerance in her attitude, she accepted him as a necessary and even valuable adjunct; Jimmie rarely got in her way.

The road Armiston traveled accompanied a busy brook down a long winding hill, emerging in the bowl of a valley where basked a ramshackle hamlet inhabited by the few adventurous natives who had stayed behind after the conquest of these hills by the idle rich.

They were half way down the village street when Parr exploded in a "Hel-lo!" Armiston, wondering, brought the car to a gentle stop at the curb. The deputy commissioner of police leaped out and the next instant was joyfully buffeting an inoffensive rustic asleep in a chair tilted against the sunny side of what appeared to be the temple of justice. On the sleeper's suspender, shining like a beacon, sat a polished star proclaiming him to be a sheriff. It was Jeremiah Zabriskie, Poohbah of these parts.

As Sheriff Zabriskie came out of a sound sleep and recognized his old friend Parr, Armiston had a swift premonition that they would never see Shelter Island on this trip. It speedily developed that the three grand occasions of the career of Mr. Zabriskie—the triple eruptions of Beacon Hill—were indissolubly associated with the famous Mr. Parr. Daily during the phenomenal run of the three widows pleading unwritten law in this same court the sheriff and Mr. Parr (the latter as consulting engineer) had been photographed together for the Sunday supplements.

The first ebullition over, the sheriff admitted that he had just dispatched a boy for a bushel of shrimp to chum with—for in these milk-and-water times he had taken refuge in fishing. Mr. Parr straightway invited himself and Oliver.

The Fourth Husband.

AFTERNOON lengthened into evening. There was a good supper. The sheriff's wife, after giving motherly attention to the batch of prisoners in cells in the basement, stood at Oliver's elbow during the meal with lively reminiscences of the days when the lightning of violence had struck and struck again and yet again, on Beacon Hill, with horrible iteration. As the people who live within the shadows of a volcano date all events from its eruptions, so the dwellers in this happy valley reverted with pride in their talks to the three cataclysmic crimes that had focused the eyes of the world on them.

When she raked off the crumbs of the repast, she presented Oliver, as a special favor, the entombed records of those grisly occasions, the proces verbal of crimes that had been read by the whole country with its morning coffee. The details stared at him in glaring headlines in the pall of cold type. Thumbing those pages, and picking up a thread here and there, Oliver got the reek of it—the fluttering murmur of the veiled woman in the box; the buzz of flies; the drone of clerks; the barking challenge of contending lawyers; the rustle and uneasy shifting of the craning audience; and the indrawn breath at the inevitable verdict that justified cold slaughter by delicate women. This was the personnel of Murderers' Row, in which Parr took such a proprietary interest! They lived "kind of to themselves," the sheriff's wife said. O, yes, they still lived up there on the hill.

Oliver could picture the gradual and qualified withdrawal of the countryside as the glamor of the sensation waned, and the moment's tragedy queen lapsed into the small-beer heroine. Every crime has its aura: the verdict of the court is not the last word. Even through his disgust, Oliver was conscious of the curious thread of paganism in these related histories.

He read himself tired, saturated himself with the realism of stark words. Finally he put himself to bed in the sepulchral silence of the village night.

He was trying to blind his eyes to the glare of the early sun, when he became aware that Deputy Parr, with shining morning face, was standing over him trying to impress some weird fact on his half-awakened senses.

"'They moved in the fourth husband last night,'" repeated Armiston automatically; then he sat bolt upright, staring.

"Hurry," commanded Parr, starting out. "We'll wait for you, down below."

"Get It Over With!"

IT was the fastidious Jimmie whose fool neck had been broken, and Mrs. Jimmie, as he himself had so blithely prophesied on the occasion of High Gun's dress rehearsal, the day before. No doubt had it been turn about, Jimmie would have felt constrained to appear (outwardly, at least) quite as bitterly resentful against her, as she now felt against him. One doesn't get one's self brained by a pet horse without involving one's next-of-kin in a bad half-hour with the police.

Nothing had been disturbed. There is a gruesome etiquette about such things, prompted doubtless by some common horrid understanding that the law, like a microscopist, demands its specimens frozen in an attitude, so that if necessary they may be sliced micrometer thin, and examined by transmitted light. To the three experienced men who stood silently peering in over the half door of High Gun's box stall, it seemed that a tyro could easily fit together the pieces of the swift catastrophe. Mrs. Jimmie and their guest, summoned by the departing shriek of the victim, had arrived too late. The gaunt Cecil, however, had had the forethought, in that moment of finality, to thrust a fourteen-foot gate pole between the gratings to crowd High Gun into the far corner.

Poor Jimmie lay there on the clean straw, one hand extended as if reaching for the overturned measure of oats, High Gun's breakfast. The beautiful horse, silky as a kitten and quite as tame, turned its lustrous eyes on them as they spoke in lowered tones, whickering now and again with wistful friendliness. The perfect cast of a steel shod hoof at the base of the skull told the whole tale with ghastly terseness.

"Go about it! Get it over with!" said Mrs. Jimmie, as she tapped her gold case with a cigaret she had been about to light for the last hour. She had told her story in curt sentences. The whole thing had been over in a moment. Jimmie had always been afraid of the horse. But sheer bravado had sent him out. There were no servants, it seemed, in the house, the kitchen, or the paddock. There had been a walkout, in town, a few days before, when it transpired below stairs that the household would summer again in the 'Hamptons instead of at the North Shore for a change. A fresh batch had been consigned the day before, but something had diverted the shipment. There was nothing more—the facts were before them.

She hung the cigaret in her dry lips and surveyed the sheriff, shaved and starched for the occasion, through those glittering long eyes that looked as if they had never known a tear.

"I'm not a sentimental woman," she said, without moving her lips. She added—"But it is bound to shake one."

She took to tapping the cigaret again, as if she found some relief from her acid reflections in this simple act. She was clothed as on the day before—in fact, this woman lived in breeches. One pigskin leg was balanced over the other as she sat hunched in an old arm chair in the disordered billiard room. Boxes and crates and bundles of burlap stood or lay about. At the end of the room the blinds of a French window had been withdrawn, letting in the morning sun through bleared panes; and beside this window stood the rawboned Cecil, not looking up when Zabriskie entered. Cecil concerned himself with a sliver imbedded in the fat of a thumb. There was the remains of a breakfast on the dusty cover of a billiard table—three glasses, a carafe, and fragments of hardtack, indicating the conventual meagerness of early morning fare in sporting high life.

Bad Business.

ZABRISKIE, who was not ever keen, had the vague and fugitive impression that this wife and friend of the dead man had occupied the same impassive attitudes for the last hour—since, in fact the telephone messages [one to himself, the other to Struthers, her lawyer in town] had been sent off shortly after daybreak. It was as though the shock of the tragedy had cut the wires of communication between them. Zabriskie sensed an antipathy, a curious withdrawal each from each. They had nothing to say to each other; nevertheless for the time being they were tied hard and fast together by this act of inconceivable stupidity on the part of poor Jimmie.

"Well! Is there anything more?" demanded Mrs. Jimmie, as if the mere presence of this man of the law strained her endurance to the breaking point.

Zabriskie, rather ill at ease, ventured the suggestion that possibly the lady who had told all she knew of the case—bravely, too—might wish to rest; the gentleman—and the sheriff cast a look at Cecil, who remained stonily inert, could attend to other formalities. Zabriskie seemed to ask her indulgence for the callous juridical curiosity of the law even on an occasion such as this; he wished to spare her the cruelty of any further inquisition. A wintry smille flitted across her face as, eyes downcast, she permitted the loutish official to stumble through what he so evidently meant as an act of delicacy. If the gentleman would accompany him, said Zabriskie, eying the wooden image at the window——

Mrs. Jimmie brought him up with a sharp "No!" Cecil had been let in for quite enough as it was. Instantly softening her tone, she went on:

"You must pardon the feelings of a wife, sir. But it is I—I alone—who must answer all questions—see this through to the end. No one can speak for me—" After a little pause—"about Jimmie."

At this moment the roar of a motor announced the arrival of the forehanded Struthers, to be instantly hushed, as he lifted his racing car up to the terrace, with the echoing cries of frightened birds. The sheriff, hurrying out to join him, found Struthers drawing off his gloves and peering through the door of the box stall.

"Well, Jimmie," the lawyer was saying under his breath, apostrophizing the figure on the straw, "at last you succeeded in doing something original. Eh, Jimmie?"

He turned and discovered Parr standing there in the darkness of the box.

"Parr!" he said queerly. He questioned the deputy with uneasy eyes. "There's nothing here for you?"

"I was passing," said Parr.

"And you, Oliver!"

Armiston looked up with a curt nod from a keg where he sat nursing one knee. He knew Struthers as a shrewd fashionable lawyer who danced with the younger set and exercised their inheritances for them. Apparently Mrs. Jimmie, who was not a sentimental woman, had given him a coherent account by telephone in those first moments of her bereavement. Struthers cogitated for some seconds, eying Parr, who waited.

"It's bad business, Parr."

Parr sniffed. "He never knew what hit him," he said slowly.

"O, not that!" said the lawyer hastily, hardly giving Jimmie the grace of a look now. "It's Mallet!"

"Mallet!" said Parr, curiously.

The lawyer nodded.

"The honorable Cecil," he explained, with a jerk of his head over a shoulder. He's a—" He paused abruptly and stared at Zabriskie suspiciously.

"Sheriff Zabriskie," said Parr. "He's in authority."

"Cecil is official, you know, and incognito," muttered the worried lawyer. He lowered his voice. "British Intelligence Service—won't do at all! We must keep him severely out of it! There'll be a riot in the papers, of course. Jimmie and Mrs. Jimmie!"—he jerked his head at the big house rising out of the morning mists—"and this empty house—and the three of them, alone."

Parr added softly, for extra weight:

"And up here, too."

"Eh? What do you mean?"

"Murderers' Row," said the deputy with a grim smile.

"Good God! I'd clean forgotten! I say, this IS rotten!" Struthers turned and stared hypnotized at the three prim roof trees presiding over finely landscaped gardens just beyond. Three legally-justified uxoricides would shortly be opening their morning shutters and looking out sympathetically—it was already eight o'clock.

A long silence intervened. Parr seemed to enjoy it. Zabriskie chewed meditatively at a straw as his eyes wandered about the circumscribed stage of the tragedy. Oliver's fingers began to itch—had he only had his typewriter to play with, he might think.

"O, I say, Parr! You're not going to let the yellows drag that in!" cried the lawyer aghast as he suddenly conceived the length of the shadow those three other women had cast over this hill. His eyes were drawn to the patient dead man. "Poor devil!" he muttered. "He never had a cent. She had it all. His cousins, the Van Duersins, staked him occasionally, so he wasn't exactly a pauper. How do you happen to be here, anyway, Parr? You're rather out of your jurisdiction, aren't you?"

"No, this is an old stamping ground for me up here," drawled Parr. "I'm getting to be a sort of guest conductor." He took Struthers by the arm, and they started in pace across the blue stone drive to the house. "The sheriff and I were cleaning fish this morning, when the message came. I'm on a vacation," he added, with a queer smile. "Curious thing," he volunteered as they walked along, "but Oliver and I were driving by when that horse staged a dress rehearsal on the public road yesterday."

Armiston on the Trail.

WHILE they paused to talk in the drive, Armiston was prowling about the stall. The properties were so preciously few that he moved round and round. That gate bar held his attention. It was a massive thing, painted a glistening white, decorated with brass ferrules. It must have taken a giant to handle it singly from the outside—a giant laboring under superhuman excitement. He stooped to examine it. Its smooth surface was nicked with many a glancing caulk of timber toppers, mementoes of high days and holidays up here on this beautiful hill. It had been driven, wedged into place, and stood as rigid as a riveted beam. Armiston, as he examined the outside end, noted from the battered butts that it had been pounded home. Evidently Cecil had taken no chances that those villainous heels would reach Jimmie again. A wooden maul lay there where Cecil had dropped it.

"I'd like to see that hoof," said Oliver, looking dubiously at the friendly High Gun.

"So would I," agreed Zabriskie. They approached the bar, High Gun nosing them and whickering again for his delayed breakfast. Zabriskie had been a blacksmith's apprentice in the days when horses were in flower among the commonalty down here. He ran a practiced hand along the clean back, down the flank to the pastern; with the touch of a mechanic who knew his trade, he picked up the foot and settled it heavily between his two knees, High Gun accepting the familiar move with quiet confidence.

It was the left hoof; the steel plate still bore its grisly signature.

"See if you can find a pair of tongs," said the sheriff. "That plate has got to come off, anyway."

In the toolhouse close by Oliver found the tongs and fetched them. Zabriskie tapped the shoe with the tool, from the habit of a mechanic.

"It's loose, anyhow," he mumbled. "He'd a' cast this plate in a few more jumps."

With a twist of the wrist he drew off the shoe, and let High Gun down on all fours again. They examined the hideous memento. Parr was calling Armiston, and Oliver, answering the summons found them in the billiard room, the now pompous Struthers going through the form of introductions.

"The Honorable Cecil Mallet, gentlemen," repeated Struthers unctuously.

The Honorable Cecil looked up momentarily to acknowledge the introduction. He was still giving surgical attention to his sliver.

"I am afraid your precious High Gun will have to pay the penalty this time, Madam," said Parr.

"This time?" asked Mrs. Jimmie, narrowing her eyes.

"He has a record, I believe," replied the deputy, watching her quietly. Their looks met, like foils touching in the first salute.

"He brained a stable boy, a year or two back—over in Jersey?" continued Parr.

She hesitated for an instant, then nodded.

"And was condemned to be shot, after that. Wasn't he?"

Again the woman bent her head.

"You smuggled the horse out of the state, ma'am." Parr was alarmingly direct; the woman stiffened.

"High Gun," she said, to her cigaret, "is a lineal descendant of Adalbahram—the only one in this country: Because an idot of a boy got in the way of his heels, must I destroy the blood?" She raised her eyes to challenge Parr squarely.

During this interchange Oliver had wandered over to the French window, intent on a sliver of his own; he too had handled that gate-bar. He was operating with a small pair of tweezers.

"Did he fight?" he asked absently, picking at his finger.

The tall Englishman's mouth dropped open.

"High Gun, I mean—when you shoved in that pole?"

"O! No!" The Honorable Cecil heaved a sigh.

"There!" said Oliver triumphantly. "I've got mine. Let me get yours for you." He took Cecil's hand in his own without farther ado, and with a single deft movement of his tweezers drew out the annoying silver. "It's a young crow bar!" he said, holding it up. "You ought to get an antiseptic in that hole right away. I've got some in my car," offered the gracious Armiston, and he hurried off to fetch it.

Weaving the Web.

HERE in the billiard room the drama had practically reached an impasse. Parr was the obstacle. Cecil remained tongue tied at his post. Mrs. Jimmie chafing at the restraint made no attempt to conceal her resentment at the deputy commissioner's intrusion. Struthers, entirely alive to the effect of Parr's presence, strove to pour oil on the troubled waters. Parr himself sat back ponderously, letting the lawyer do all the talking while his keen eyes missed no detail.

Behind his urbane front, as he lent ear, the old man hunter was in the throes of an unprecedented mental conflict. Within the last few moments, with no tangible circumstance to hang it on, the conviction had gradually grown in Parr's mind that he sat in the presence of murder. So irresistible was the impression that it seemed to his startled senses as if some one had shouted it aloud. In the next moment he was dismissing the idea as an arraignment of cold logic—he, a police expert, judging before teh facts! He looked about him, as if expecting to find some confirmation. Their attitudes and manner were unchanged. Mrs. Jimmie was petulantly tapping her eternal cigaret; Cecil had not moved a hair.

It was all too pat, the deputy told himself. An animal act—and it must be an animal act, if anything—never goes off exactly as it is scheduled, even on the stage. This one had run on oiled wheels. Glancing from one to the other, Parr assured himself again it must be an accident. It could be nothing not moved by a hair.

But the doubt persistently returned, it was like an obsession. Why? How? Struthers' monologue gradually penetrated his thoughts. Meeting with no opposition, the lawyer was arranging it all. They would run the Honorable Cecil down to the Shore, and a fast motor cruiser would take him to town in a jiffy.

Of course, the woman was the intelligence; that wordless ninny by the window would be merely the tool—Parr was again coming back to his fixed idea. But how, how—and why? This was a problem for the hectic faculties of Oliver Armiston, which Parr for lack of a better understanding was wont to ascribe to clairvoyance. Oliver, in collusion with the familiar that dwelt in the keys of his trusty typewriter, had developed an uncanny introspection. Set a stage with its characters, load the scene with atmosphere, and the action flowed from his finger-ends. That was the fiction writer's metier. Parr had made use of him a score of times, solving the "frozen" plots that had baffled his shrewdest operatives. Parr did not attempt to understand his methods, but Oliver's results had made criminal history. Oliver's explanation was cryptic—instinct can be reduced to a chart; impulse follows a groove. But where was Oliver? What was keeping him?

"Mr. Commissioner," broke in Struthers in oily tones, "we are exceedingly fortunate to have you with us. We need authority, and understanding—and appreciation of how international relations might be seriously embarrassed by a wrong step."

"Who was the other gentleman? I didn't catch his name," said Mrs. Jimmie to fill the pause.

"He is a celebrated criminologist," said Parr, yawning. He was certain he caught the flash of an eye between those two.

Nemesis.

JUST then the door opened and Oliver came in. In one hand he carried a huge wooden maul, and in the other a horseshoe—the horseshoe —with four bent nails protruding. Without a word to any one, without even a glance about, he set the maul down in the middle of the room. Gingerly he placed the horseshoe on the billiard table; still ignoring his startled audience Armiston absently explored a vest-pocket and produced a piece of tissue paper from which he extracted the sliver he had so kindly withdrawn from poor Cecil's suffering thumb; this he deposited beside the horseshow. Then he selected a seat on one of the crated boxes, and languidly prepared a cigaret. [Balzac somewhere spoke of a painter who could introduce an ordinary broomstock into a scene in such a manner as to freeze the beholder with horror.] The wooden maul, teetering gently on its rounded edge out there in the middle of this disordered room, was the focus of glazed stares.

Strauthers, who had sprung to his feet, halted in midsentence, mouth open. The woman now finally applied a match to her cigaret, and threw back her head to blow the first puff into the air. As she did so, her gleaming eyes under half closed lashes sought the gaunt Cecil at the French window. Parr, taking his cue from Oliver, held himself in easy attitude, ready for instant action.

The tension was broken by a stifled cry from the window. With one movement the giant Cecil, his horselike face livid, thrust open the glass leaves and plunged out in headlong flight. Armiston raised a quick hand to check Parr. All turned. There was a moment's silence, followed by a slow, heavy tread on the portico without. It was Cecil, returning. He was half crouching, his hands above his head; he backed through the window into the room, his wide eyes staring with birdlike fascination down the shiny muzzle of a revolver held level by Zabriskie, who advanced deliberately step by step. With one hand Zabriskie, still holding the ashen Cecil with his hawk eye, produced clinking handcuffs from a pocket; still threatening with his weapon, he snapped first one, then the other, into place. The manacled man, covering his face with his hands and sobbing convulsively, fell in a heap on the floor. Zabriskie nodded to Oliver.

"There you be, gol durn you! I didn't believe you. I swear I took you for another nut." The sheriff with a contemptuous sneer, prodded the groveling figure on the floor. "You ain't much of a horseshoer, be you?"

The woman studied the slender thread of smoke rising from her cigaret; her eyes traveled moodily from one to another, till, with shrinking disgust, they finally reached the blubbering giant by the window. Struthers was demanding incoherently—"What—Who—Why—This is——" when Parr angrily waved him to be silent, then turned on Oliver. Oliver reached over to the billiard table and held up his sliver.

"That sliver," he explained. "The one I extracted from the Honorable Cecil's thumb," he added unpleasantly.

"Well! What about it?" snapped Parr.

"It was painted red, man! The gate pole was white."

"Well! Well!" snarled Parr.

"I looked for something red," said Oliver. "I found it. There it is! That maul! Damn him! he nailed the horseshoe to it—and deliberately brained the poor devil with it, in cold blood. Then he tacked the horseshoe back into place! High Gun wasn't the man killer! There's your man killer—that snivelling wretch in the corner." Oliver made an effort to control himself. "If you don't believe me," he cried, "look at that maul. You can see the nail holes—even if he did try to batter them out."

A shriek came from the corner.

"It was that woman—she made me do it—she hypnotized me!"

A ghastly silence followed this outburst. Mrs. Jimmie rose quietly. With fingers that did not tremble, she extinguished the live coal of her cigaret in the ashes of the tray beside her. This done to her satisfaction, she daintly brushed her hands and looked expectantly at Parr. Parr gave her credit for nerve. She could gaze without a tremor at the hideous weapon that had reduced the stalwart man to a blubbering confession.

"Well, Mr. Commissioner," she said in level tones, "what are we waiting for? Why prolong it?"

Zabriskie drew the abominable Cecil to his feet, and led him down the room. As he passed the woman the man turned on her one beseeching look. She, drawing back as if afraid her garments would touch him, gave him back a glance of unutterable disgust. It was not the foul murder of her husband, for which she must now stand accused before a court of justice, that daunted her; it was the shaming realization that one of her blood had been brought to the mire with such a yellow cur as the Honorable Cecil.

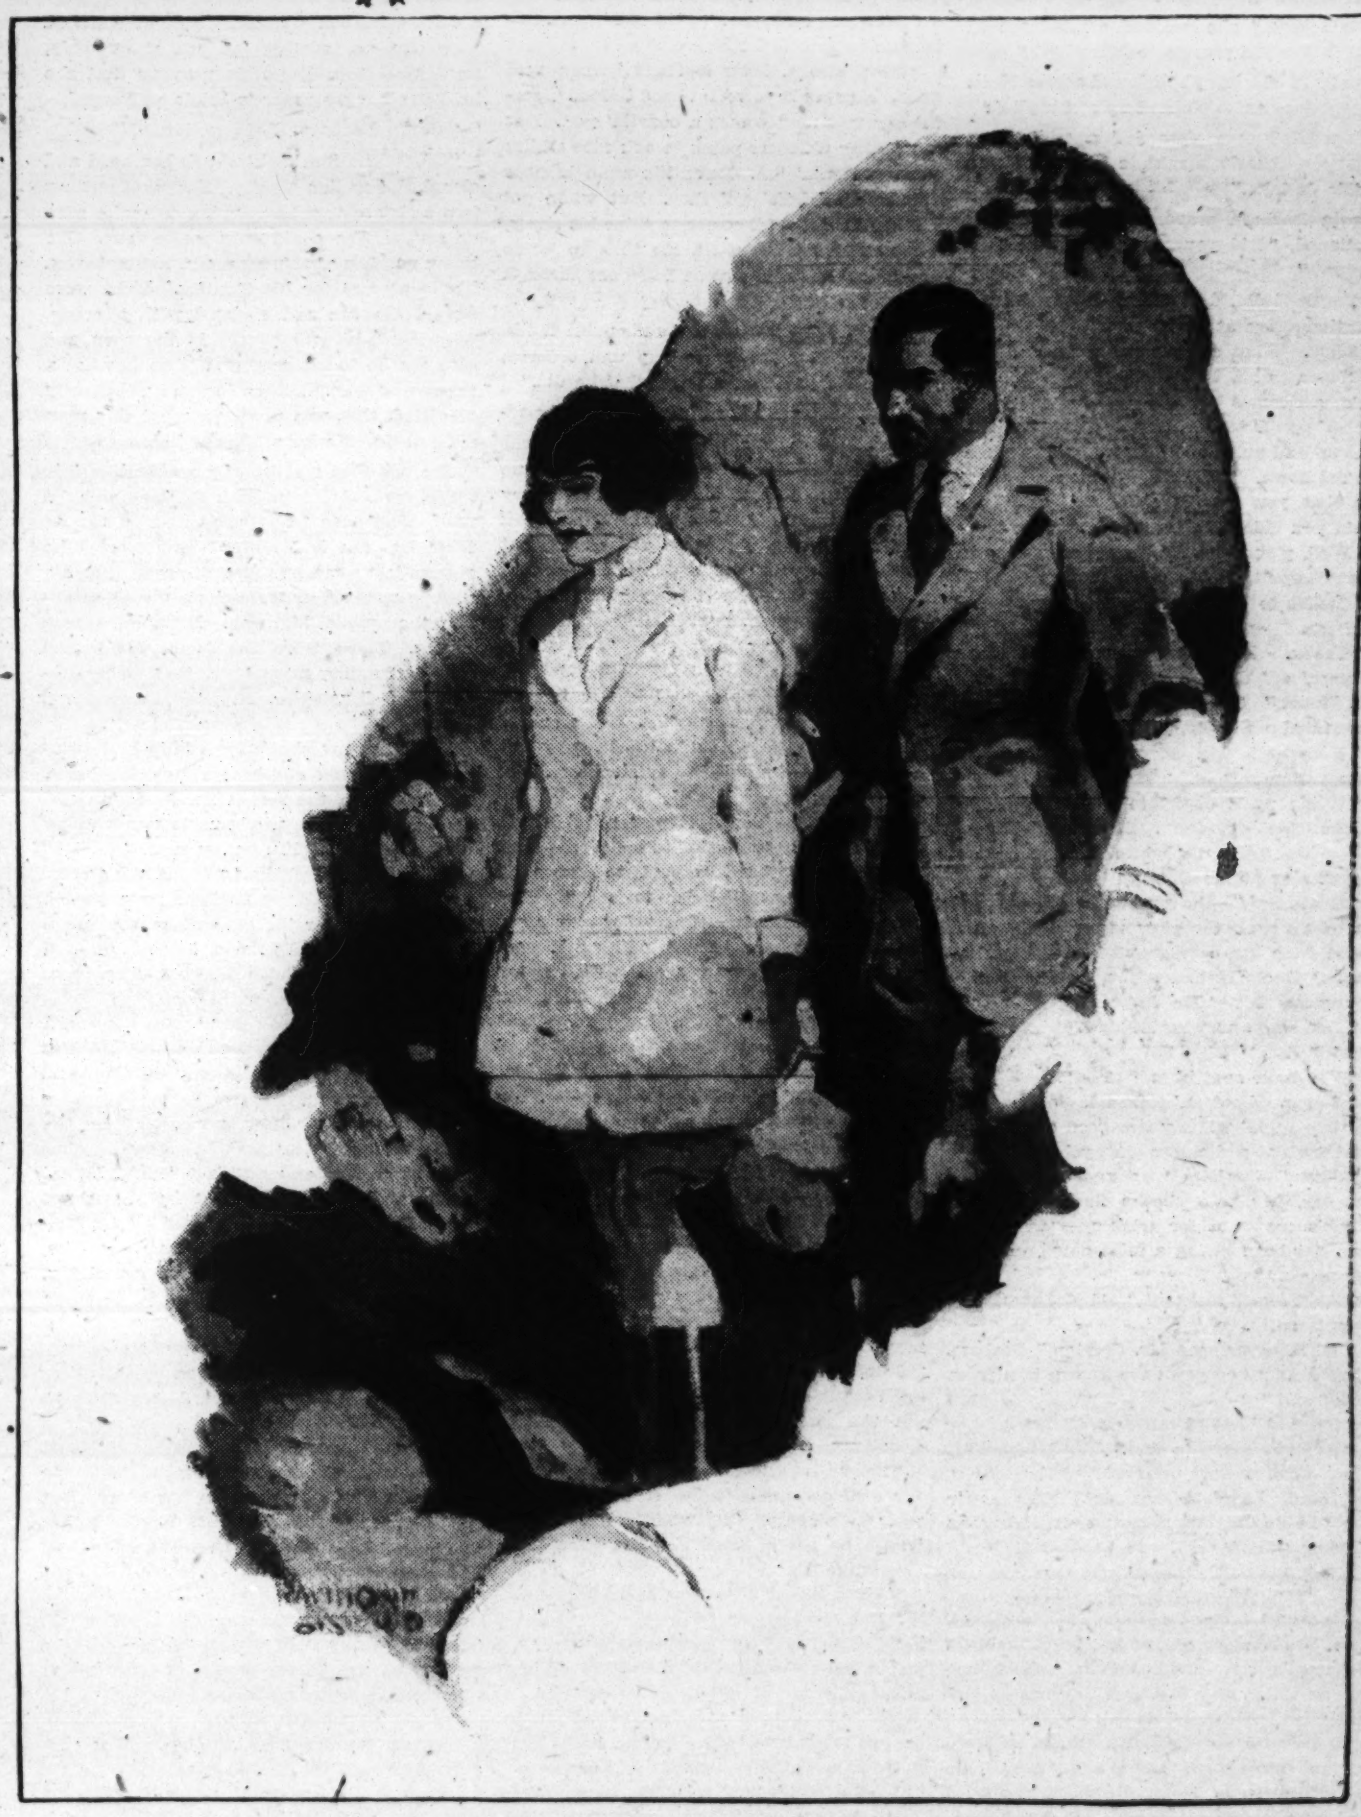
THE WANTED MAN

True Detective Fiction

by Harris Dickson

THE STORY THUS FAR

ON opposite sides of Lake Marmion, in Mississippi, are two large estates—Bennington, owned by Maj. Kenneth Stark, and Marmion, owned by Gen. Bob Clayton. Their owners have been at feud for many years. First there was a political row, then a bitter lawsuit over a boundary, then a duel that left Maj. Stark with a stiff leg, while Gen. Clayton fled to Salamanca, in Latin America, with his tiny son Stuart. As the story opens, old Uncle Nat, Maj. Stark's colored servant, is dozing by the roadside when two constables ride up in an automobile. They have heard that Stuart Clayton has returned to Marmion, and they question Uncle Nat, who is evasive. They also question Florian Razilly, a creole, who, with his beautiful wife, Adelaide, is the guest of Maj. Stark and his lovely daughter Barbara. The constables have handcuffs with them, and are on a man hunt for Stuart. They leave after arranging a rendezvous with Uncle Nat and later with Razilly. Uncle Nat tells his story at Bennington House and it causes Adelaide and Barbara to become strangely excited. The girls depart to keep a tryst in the woods with a mysterious stranger who is in love with Barbara. Barbara announces she has given Adelaide's name as her own. Adelaide tells how the Salamancan consul visited her husband on a mysterious mission connected with Stuart Clayton. Uncle Nat sets off to warn Stuart the constables are seeking him. On the way he finds a horse, saddled and bridled, in the midst of a jungle. At Marmion House he becomes offended when a youth, who says he is Stuart, throws him a dollar. He doubts the man is Stuart.



"Yes, blood runs swiftly in the tropics, and I have no time to waste."

THIRD INSTALLMENT.

The Tryst at the Lone Oak.

RAZILLY preferred a boat to himself for the development of certain theories concerning the use of a casting head in brushy water. But whether Razilly angled in open or brushy water, whether in company or with a crowd, it cut no ice with Uncle Nat. Nat instinctively disliked the creole and would never have given him a second glance except for an itching curiosity to know why Razilly kept watching the Marmion porch.

However this might be, old Nat had long since learned not to unduly excite himself over the behavior of white folks. For a spell he rested idly, poising his paddle and trying to make out if the major were having any luck. Then a flash caught his eye, a flash of reddish brown along the shore. He saw the flying sorrel skim like a swallow across a little glade, then vanish into the woods. Only for a moment Nat glimpsed the horse before its broad hatted rider disappeared. Farther on there was another opening through which he must pass, and the negro watched that until again he saw the horseman, speeding towards the south end of the lake.

"Dar now! Mr. Foxyjaw done flushed him. He sho' is leavin' dat plantation in a rush."

Nothing was farther from Nat's intention than to confront again his insulter of Marmion porch—not if Nat saw him first. But if a man in a dugout does collied with a man on horseback it's the fault of the dugout. Having the broad water for maneuvers, Nat could afford to take chances.

On the eastern shore there towered one solitary oak, a lone and grizzled patriarch, bearded with gray moss, and throwing its mighty limbs almost to the water's edge. Near it was a small inlet which had been called "Lone Oak Slough" from that time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary.

For acres around this Lone Oak a growth of young cane had shot up, higher than a man on horseback, and thick as hair on a dog. But beneath its shadow lay a clear and turfy glade, with a log to sit on. Nat knew the place well—and so did Barbara. The sun shone hot upon the lake; so much paddling and such a bunch of worriment had made Nat drowsy. So he paddled towards this cool and shady resting place, where nobody could pester him and he'd have plenty of room to stretch. His dugout kept on sliding in that direction and poked its own nose into a mud bank near the mouth of the slough.

Thoughtful Providence had planned this retreat with all modern conveniences. Here was a log just high enough to sit upon, and grass that sank like a mattress beneath Nat's feet. He could sit up or he could lie down. Nobody would know that he was here. The glade could not be seen by fishermen on the lake, and a patch of mutton cane hid it from travelers along the plantation road. In luxurious solitude Nat lay down beside the log to finish his nap that Mr. Foxyjaw had interrupted.

Colored Man's Luck.

WHEN luck sets in to running against a colored person, whatever he does turns out badly. With the choice of a thousand right ways and one wrong way, he invariably guesses wrong. The banks of Lake Marmion were lined with a thousand slumber spots on which old Nat might have requiescatted in pace. It had but one tiny glade where the negro could not rest. Yet bad luck touted him to pick that particular place which Miss Barbara and Mrs. Razilly were surreptitiously approaching from one direction, while a stockingfoot galloped from the other. Old Nat lay down, but not to R. I. P. Horses were coming; he supposed they would pass. They did not. They stopped, just as Mr. Foxyjaw's automobile had previously stopped—immediately, next to him, with only a fringe of cane between.

"Barbara, I'm afraid." Nat stuck up one ear as he caught Mrs. Razilly's voice.

"Afraid of what?"—and now he recognized Miss Barbara.

"Can't you see the men? Florian might come over here and catch me."

Miss Barbara only laughed and said she was willing to risk Florian. It sounded just like Miss Barbara Stark to risk most anything when she once got her head set. Nat peeped out and saw that her face was flushed, and she was even more excited than Mrs. Razilly, who kept pointing her whip towards the fishermen and begging to go home.

"Go home?" Miss Barbara laughed all the more, and insisted: "There's my father, and he's a sight worse than your husband. I'm going to stay."

At that she jumped down from her horse and came slipping through the cane before old Nat could limber up and run. But he cuddled down so close against the log that she didn't see him as she hurried to the edge of the lake, pulled aside some willows, and peered out.

"All safe, Adelaide," she called. "The men can't see us."

"They'll never see me," Mrs. Razilly said, sticking to her saddle and keeping on the far side of the cane, while Miss Barbara walked up and down as if she were in a hurry, slashing at leaves with her whip and looking towards the south end of the lake.

If that log hadn't been so long old Nat might have wriggled around the far end of it and sneaked away. He was figuring on trying it anyhow when Miss Barbara turned around and gasped right quick to see a negro lying beside her own particular seat.

"O! Uncle Nat!" she exclaimed. "What are you doing here?"

"Nothin' 'tall, Missy; nothin' 'tall. Jes' lyin' down to res' my rheumatiz."

"Get up from there and go home. It's time to get the mail."

"No'm, 'tain't, Missy." He squinted westward at the sun and then sat down on the log. "Mr. Edwards won't come 'long fer more'n a hour yet."

From the fidgety way in which Miss Barbara cut down leaves with her whip, and walked about, and couldn't stand still a minute, shrewd old Nat suspected that she wanted to get rid of him even before the girl wheeled and ordered:

"Uncle Nat, go for the mail. I'm expecting an important letter."

"Suttinly, Missy, suttinly. On de road."

Maybe Nat intended to go, or perhaps he didn't. Yet he made all and singular his deliberate preparations for launching the dugout, while Barbara urged at his elbow: "Hurry, Nat. Hurry."

"Yas'm, Missy; dis boat done stuck in de mud, an' I can't git started."

"Push harder. Go on!"

"Yas'm. But ef you warn't in sech a rush I'd tell you 'bout what I seen at Marmion."

"You?" she burst out. "You went to Marmion?"

"Yas'm." He was bending over his boat, pushing it away from the muddy bank, but with the white of one eye rolled backward, as a mule that listens for his driver to say "Whoa!" Barbara never even wondered why Uncle Nat should guess her interest in Marmion. She only hesitated, then asked:

"When did you go to Marmion?"

"Wait till supper, Missy, den I'll tell you. I got to hurry now an' ketch Mr. Edwards."

He made matters worse now by throwing a long arm around my shoulder and trying to pat me into a good humor. "Come on, Foster, don't queer the whole scheme. Don't you see, this is the whole plot—the very reason I asked you to get up this yachting trip?"

I turned and rid myself of his patronizing arm. "So you had this mock wedding in mind when you came into my office that day after Kitty threw you over last?" I demanded.

"Well, something of the sort," he admitted. "At least, I wanted you to have this yachting party so we could—or rather, so I could—see what would happen by playing on Kitty's jealousy a bit. I purposely had you arrange that just you and Phoebe and Kitty and I should be the only single ones here, you know. Well, this mock wedding, with Phoebe and me as the principals, ought to——"

Ted halted, winked at me significantly and departed, for Kitty was hovering near and presently joined me. But the game little minx never mentioned the mock wedding planned for this evening, but concerned herself chiefly in asking me to tell Capt. Hudson to turn the yacht about and steam out through the Virginia capes.

"What's the matter with cruising down Chesapeake bay and into the roads this afternoon and tonight?" I asked.

"O, I want the tang of the real salt air, the roll of the ocean under my feet! This sailing up and down the bay for two or three days has become monotonous."

"O, all right, Kitty," I agreed. "But will you run up and tell Capt. Hudson for me? I've got to make some extra preparations for dinner."

With Kitty's Help.

AT dinner the conversation ran almost exclusively to the approaching nuptials. Opinion narrowed down to Ted and Phoebe as the logical happy couple, and, although Phoebe made a polite little demurrer, she consented at length with a grace that made me sympathize inwardly with Kitty's ill hidden concern over the state of affairs between Ted and this brunette beauty at his side. Then Mrs. Channing beamed upon Kitty, sitting across the table:

"And, of course, my dear, you'll be the bride's maid, won't you, Kitty?"

Kitty carefully twined a bit of lettuce on her fork before she glanced up to her questioner. "O, I reckon so—if Ted's willing!" She looked ingenuously around at young Maxwell, then at Phoebe: "And you, Phoebe—as the bride, you ought to have something to say about your attendants. Want me?"

That niece of mine certainly could sling a wicked question mark! Of course, Phoebe consented; Ted, being only the bridegroom, found his nod of assent unnoticed even by Kitty.

Again Mrs. Channing continued on her picking of the cast of characters.

"You, Foster," she said, turning to me, "will give the bride away, as her host and—what is the legal phrase?—O, yes, her 'next friend!' So that's settled. O, let's hurry through dinner! I'm so excited about it all!"

But Kitty wasn't excited, at least. For in a lull in the hum of chatter near the end of the meal she confronted Mrs. Channing with another of her inquiries:

"And who's to read the ceremony?" she

Kitty Carruthers was a most discerning young woman, withal she was something of a coquette.

asked demurely. "Did—did you bring your prayer book with you, my dear?"

There was a ripple of merriment at Mrs. "Uncle Foster, how about you?" I shook my head sorrowfully.

"I have it!" exclaimed Mrs. Channing. "The captain—what's his name, Foster?—Capt. Hudson can marry Ted and Phoebe! How silly I didn't think of it before! The captain of a ship always marries couples on the high seas, doesn't he?"

I nodded. "But this isn't the high seas," I laughed. "We're in the three-mile limit, you know, and the ceremony should be performed by clerical or civil authorities."

"O, of course, if it were to be a real wedding," went on Mrs. Channing. "But for this mock affair the captain will do! It will make it seem so much more ro-ma-a-antic! And Capt. Hudson must have a Bible or prayer book in his cabin somewhere."

"I'll go up and ask Capt. Hudson right now," volunteered Kitty, darting up the companionway. I marveled at the sportsmanship of this niece of mine; she actually was entering into the spirit of the mock ceremony as if Ted Maxwell meant nothing whatever in her fickle young life. Maybe Ted's grand scheme was to fall flat, after all.

As we were arising from the table Kitty came prancing back upon us. "He has a prayer book, and he'll do it!" she announced. "He says we must wait until about nine o'clock, though, until he's had dinner and got everything ready for the night watchmen, or whoever it is takes care of the ship after dark."

There was such spontaneity about Kitty's manner that I wondered at it, wondered if she wasn't a more consummate actress than I ever had imagined. She linked arms with Phoebe now and commanded her to come with her to her stateroom to prepare her bridal gown. "It'll take the best part of an hour," she explained to us.

"Which means the worst part of two hours," put in Ted, as he followed the two girls up the stairs.

And Ted was nearer right. For it was well after nine o'clock before either of the feminine principals of the ceremony appeared in the saloon—and that one was Kitty. Her face was downcast, her attitude dejected.

"O, I'm afraid we'll have to—postpone it till tomorrow," she exclaimed. "Phoebe's—well, Phoebe's not much of a sailor, you know. She's gone to bed. The slightest rolling of the yacht upsets her fearfully, you know."

We all looked crestfallen. Ted Maxwell, who entered upon the last few words of Kitty's remarks, seemed helpless to offer any suggestions; evidently, I judged from his expression, he was too vexed for utterance at this eleventh hour disaster to his cherished little plot.

Capt. Hudson came down the steps now and bowed right and left. He could not conceal his surprise at the gloomy looks upon our faces and, with a dapper salute, he confronted me questioningly:

"Miss Carruthers said 'wedding,' not 'funeral,' I thought," he remarked quizzically, with a shrug of his shoulders. "What's the matter, Mr. Carruthers?"

"Nothing—except the bride's indisposed," I muttered. "Reckon it's all off until another night."

Capt. Hudson turned to go. Then his eyes fell on Kitty and he paused; again he faced me and saluted. "Why not—Miss Carruthers—for the bride?" he suggested. "That is, if it's any of my business," he apologized, in the next breath.

But Mrs. Channing had overheard, and she was quicker than I to accept the amended plan.

"Of course!" she chimed in. "Kitty can substitute! It's just a mock affair, anyway, so one bride's as good as another!"

A buzz of excited interest greeted this latest development and presently, after much cajolery and persuasion and a bit of coercion by all of us—that is, except Ted, who remained apparently unconcerned—Kitty agreed to take Phoebe's place. This time Ted was not even consulted by Mrs. Channing or me, and after another lapse of half an hour, to allow Kitty a few more dabs of powder and touches to her hair, we all lined up, seated or standing, for the ceremony.

I must admit, even though she is my niece, that Kitty made about as pretty a bride as Phoebe would have done. Of course, maybe some day I'll have occasion to alter that view if—well, never mind all that.

Ted plainly was nervous, as befitted even a bridegroom in a make-believe affair. He fumbled over the ring for all the world as if he were acting for a film comedy; and when he produced it, with a sheepish smile, he handed it first to Kitty, then to Capt. Hudson, while a titter of amusement ran through the rest of us.

Capt. Hudson, too, did his part well. He was an old coastwise captain, retired, once of the Old Dominion line from Norfolk to New York, and had married his share of romantic couples at sea. This was the first ceremony, either mock or real, that he had performed since he had been in the service of myself and several other Richmond and Norfolk men who engaged him for cruises on their private yachts—a service whereat he made a pretty handsome living every summer, I am told.

The Real Plotter.

FINALLY, the "last words" were spoken, and the captain closed his prayer book solemnly after gazing benignantly upon the couple before him. Kitty and Ted looked foolishly at each other a moment, then——

"Go on, kiss the bride!" cried Mrs. Channing, and we all took up the call.

"You're afraid!" I overheard Ted dare Kitty. But she wasn't! She stood on tiptoes suddenly and implanted a firm kiss on the young rascal's lips, then as suddenly slipped out from his eager grasp and ran toward the stairs. I wondered if Ted saw the tears in her eyes, as I saw them, that delicious moment when her face was close to his; but no, I hardly think so, for Ted was blinded by the quick passion of her kiss and could only blink and stammer after her as she ran from the saloon.

It was a shame to have Kitty run off like this and spoil our chances for making merry over the new couple. But our chagrin at the denouement was forgotten the next moment when a sailor came scampering down the stairs to Capt. Hudson.

"I've been looking for you, sir," he said rapidly, but in a voice we all could hear. "Our steering gear is broke an' we've drifted ten or twelve knots off the coast."

Capt. Hudson was alarmed. He questioned the man sharply, but all he could learn was that the ship was drifting down below Virginia Beach, fully fifteen land miles from shore. The captain started, for the stairs. Half way up he halted and turned about. With a salute he addressed me:

"Mr. Carruthers, sir," he said, and his tone betrayed concern. "I'm sure afraid this accident makes that—that mock wedding real! Outside the three mile limit, you see, sir!"

Kitty sprang out from the darkness a few yards from the hatchway as Capt. Hudson strode along.

"How did they take it, captain?" she asked, a nervous laugh in her voice.

"Like a good joke on themselves, mostly," the officer replied.

"And Te—Mr. Maxwell?" she questioned further. From my hiding place I could sense the suspense in this second query.

"Why, he took it like a soldier, ma'am," the captain said. "You didn't think he'd kick, did you, Miss Carruthers?"

And the two of them chuckled! The next moment I saw Kitty hold out a rolled up bill to the captain.

"The minister's fee!" she said, mock seriously. But Capt. Hudson declined it and tipped his hat ceremoniously.

Kitty seized his arm. "But I promised you I'd pay for the damage to the steering gear, you know!"

"Maybe you better settle that with your uncle, ma'am," he advised.

"What! And let him know Phoebe—Miss Antrim and Mrs. Channing and I concocted this whole thing? Never? He'd tell my—my husband!"

Well, I'm glad Phoebe really wasn't ill that night, after all. For she and I never could have taken our honeymoon on my yacht to Bermuda that fall if she had been as poor a sailor as Kitty had led us to believe.

Ted? O, he never found out.

THE WANTED MAN

him to be Stuart Clayton. But his words came with such a rush that she could not stop them.

"Listen, Adelaide. I am not free to tell you everything. My name is Stuart Clayton. That is my plantation across the lake. Father took me away from here when I was a child. I live at El Jucaro, Republic of Salamanca, Central America—and must hurry back within the next day or two. But I'll return to Mississippi if you'll marry me?"

"What an inducement!"

"Will you marry me?"

"I? Marry you? It never entered my head."

"Of course, it hasn't, dear. But I must put it into your head, for there's nothing else in mine. You'd believe that if you only knew how dangerous it is for me to tell you that I'm Stuart Clayton, and going back to Salamanca."

"Dangerous? Why so?" Barbara thought instantly of constables with the nippers, and ached for him to tell her the whole truth.

"Because," he answered, simply, "certain people are trying to learn what I have just told you. You have the right to know who I am and what I am. Now, will you marry me?"

"What kind of a girl do you take me for?" Barbara had failed to stop him with petty evasions, and now retreated behind another subterfuge. "Do you think I'm to be picked up, accidentally, by the first man I happen to meet in the woods?"

"I know what kind of a girl you are. And it was no accident, but destiny, which brought me here to look at this lone oak that father used to speak of as our original boundary."

"It was not the boundary!" Barbara sprang up with belligerent heat, glad to start an argument which offered a little time to collect herself.

"This oak never was our boundary," she hotly denied. "The court decided that our line runs to the burnt cypress, half a mile farther down the lake."

"Your line?" And even before he asked the question Barbara felt herself floundering in deep water.

"No, no!" she corrected, "I didn't mean that. I mean the Bennington boundary. This land belongs to Miss Barbara Stark. She told me all about the lawsuit. There! I hope you are satisfied."

"I've never been dissatisfied," he answered, with a quiet smile. "Boundaries mean nothing to me—now. Are you visiting Miss Stark?"

"I didn't say I was."

"Well," a slight shrug, "suppose we also waive that point."

Then the woman within her foresaw what was coming, and Barbara knew the utter futility of trying to prevent. Inexorably he started again at the place where she had broken in upon him.

"It was not an accident which led me to this oak. Three times since you have met me here of your own accord. Was that chance?

"No," she laughed, "that was just silly."

"Silly?" he repeated, and flushed.

If Barbara Stark had been a man she might not have dared to bait this other man who looked so resolute. But from the sudden reddening of his check she thought that ridicule would prove a more effective weapon of defense.

"Of course it was silly," she taunted him again, "and not a bit of sport."

Barbara felt that she now had the game in her own hands, and was smilingly invulnerable as he took one quick step forward and demanded:

"Did you come here to play with me?"

"O, dear no. I had nothing else to do, and imagined it might be fun." Nonchalantly she began drawing on her gauntlet and started to leave; but he stood squarely in her path.

"Good-by," she said, with the slightest quiver of indecision, for she was testing him to see what she meant.

"You are not going." There was no uncertainty in his tone. "You shall not go without hearing what I came here to say. If you are visiting Miss Stark, it will be impossible for me to follow you there."

Although many inches shorter than he, Barbara straightened up until she seemed every bit as tall, and announced, "I am going."

Nat made a balk to shove off, but the girl seized his arm.

"Hold still!" she ordered. "Tell me at once. When did you go to Marmion?"

No gleam of triumph flickered across Nat's innocent face as he glanced up and replied:

"I paddled over dere jes' a while ago. Ain't been skacely a minute 'rived back on dis side de lake."

Again Barbara wavered, and again she questioned, "Did you see—did you see Mr. Clayton?"

"Yas'm, I did, den agin I didn't," with a tentative shove at his dugout.

"Wait. What do you mean?"

"Never mind, Missy; I'll 'splain all dat when you comes home."

"No, you'll tell me now." Barbara held his arm and pulled old Nat to the log, where she sat down. "What do you mean by saying that you saw Mr. Clayton, and then again you didn't?"

"Well, y'onderstan', Missy, I seen de man what claims to be Mr. Stuart."

"Claims to be?" The nation disconcerted Barbara.

"Yas'm. Mr. Bart Scurry calls him 'Stuart,' an' dem Marmion niggers say it's Mr. Stuart." Old Nat shook his bushy head and stated positively, "But he ain't!"

"Nonsense! Mr. Scurry ought to know young Clayton."

"White folks ought to know a heap o' things which dey don't. Strangers wid good clo'es kin 'ceive de white folks, whilst a nigger sees plumb through 'em."

"Uncle Nat,"—the sparkle had died out of Barbara's eyes; the glow of expectancy had faded from her cheeks and left them colorless. "Uncle Nat, are you sure that this young man is not Mr. Clayton?"

"Jes' shore as I is dat ole Nat ain't Mist. Stark."

"You have seen him?"

"Yas'm. I sot an' talked to dat man, all de time spyin' wid my two good eyes. Miss Barbara, dat white man ain't yo' sort."

"Then,"—Barbara rose undecidedly from the log, her pale cheeks flushing with a Stark's contempt for trickery—"Then this man has been giving a false name and fooling people?"

"Ain't fooled me none," old Nat remarked complacently.

"I had never seen Mr. Clayton," Barbara admitted. "And you have known him from childhood?"

"Knowed him? I raised him."

"And you saw this man? You talked with him? And you are certain?"

"Lawd, Lawd, Missy, dat feller never could be no Clayton, not even whilst he was a teeny chile."

The Mysterious Horseman.

BARBARA seemed dazed. She rose slowly from the log and stood utterly still, trying to think. Old Nat had never seen her look like that, and would not have known Miss Barbara for a Stark until she stiffened up just the same as the old major used to do when something pestered him, then shoved her way through the cane. So Nat tagged behind to bear witness.

Mrs. Razilly had drawn aside from the plantation road on her big black horse as she held the bridle of the gray and watched the lake.

"What's happened, Barbara? What's happened?" she called out, for anybody could see that things were going wrong.

At first Miss Barbara never said a word, only marched straight to Mrs. Razilly and laid a hand upon her knee.

"Adelaide," she said briefly, "Uncle Nat says that the man we've been—that he is not Mr. Clayton."

The creole woman turned fiery with wrath and shame, then whirled upon the offending negro—"Do you mean to say that we have been meeting an impostor?"

"No, ma'am, Miss Adelaide, no, ma'am," Nat protested. "I don't claim he's nary 'posser, but he ain't Mr. Stuart Clayton, an' that settles it."

The Starks were a stubborn race, and Barbara refused to give up without a fight.

"Uncle Nat," she demanded, "how do you know that he is not Mr. Clayton?"

The old Negro never backed an inch; "I been knowin' dat boy sence he was born, an' if dat feller's Mister Stuart Clayton, den I'll jes bodaciously eat my hat."

"Eat your hat?" Mrs. Razilly interrupted; "Why should you do so?"

"Lawd, Lawd! Mrs. Razzle," Nat grinned with every white tooth in his head; "tain't no mo' chance o' me eatin' dat hat dan dey is of him bein' Mister Stuart."

"Why do you think that?" the creole persisted.

"I don't think, Mrs. Razzle, I knows." Nat clamped his lips with bulldog tenacity.

"How do you know?" Barbara wasn't satisfied, and forced the Negro to tell.

"Now, lissen, Miss Barbara, lissen real good. Niggers is powerful hard to fool. 'Sposin' a young man comes a courtin' you. Dat man takes p'ticular pains to ack nice whilst you's watchin' 'im. Dat's his main bizness to show off befo' yo' face. But when yo' back's turned, an' I comes to shine his shoes, he considers tain't wuth his time to 'ceive a nigger. Dat's how come I kin see through 'im."

Both girls winced at this undeniable truth, then Miss Barbara blazed up and ordered, "Uncle Nat, tell me exactly what he did."

"Well, Miss Barbara, it's like dis. I paddled over dere to see Mister Stuart, 'cause me an' him is always been good friends. I no sooner got to de gate dan Mister Bart Scurry hollered, 'O, Stuart, come out here an' speak to Uncle Nat;' so dat white feller come out on de gallery an' sot in his rockin' chair; never shuck hands wid me or nothin'. Ef his own manager hadn't claimed so, I'd never tuk him fer a Clayton."

"What did he look like?"

"Lemme see. He peared kinder tall, or mebbe short; dat don't signify. Had on ridin' pants an' a brown shirt an' dat floppy hat o' his'n, wid a funny little mustache on befo lips."

"He must be the same person," Adelaide was regretfully compelled to believe.

"Well?" Barbara wanted to know all about it. "What did he do to you?"

"Do to me? Huh! Dat feller never sot down a minit befo' he rousted himself from his chair an' throwed down a dollar, an' 'lowed, 'Here, ole nigger, take dat dollar an' go home. I'm busy."

"Perhaps he was busy."

"'Twarn't dat, Miss Barbara." Old Nat shook his obstinate head, "'Twarnt dat. Yo' pa kin say, 'Git out o' here, you damn nigger, an' don't show yo' face no mo' tell next year at fo' o'clock.' Den ev'ybody on de plantation snickers, cause de major's jes havin' his fun. It was de way dis white man flung down de dollar. Gen'l Clayton never throwed nary bone to a stray dog in no sech style. Huh, I wouldn't tech his dollar wid a pair o' tongs; jes lef' it on de flo' an' marched mysef home."

Never before had Barbara Stark encouraged any Negro in totin tales on white folks, yet the girl listened intently as old Nat gabbled on.

"Mebbe he ack so fidgetty 'cause he look fer dem constables to be comin' after him wid de nippers. 'Pears like it, anyhow, 'cause he got a horse tied out dere in de canebrake."

"What horse?" Barbara asked quickly.

"Dat stockin'foot sorrel."

"The sorrel!" Barbara exclaimed with a triumphant glance at Mrs. Razilly, as if it made a heap of difference what color of horse the fugitive intended to use in his escape.

"Yas'm, dat's de horse," Nat assured her. "An' dat sorrel sho' did come in handy jes a minit ago, 'cause I seed him lopin' away from dere."

"You saw him? Going in which direction?"

"Travelin' dat way, Missy," old Nat pointed toward the lower end of the lake, from which a plantation road turned northward to Lone Oak Slough.

"He's coming here," Barbara said, and her eyes sparkled with elation. Now she understood. It was love which kept the sorrel hid so that he might ride to her without being seen. She was doing almost the same thing, and making a secret of it. Barbara felt relieved to think that old Nat had jumped at a wrong conclusion. And if he had misconstrued one perfectly innocent circumstance, he must also be wrong as to the others. So Barbara could afford to laugh, and disregard his tattle.

"Barbara, what are you laughing at?" her puzzled friend inquired.

"O, nothing. I was just thinking."

Fascination.

IN spite of feud and duel—possibly because of feud and duel—it fascinated Barbara to sit in these woods beside a Clayton playing at the world old game of fence and parry. Yet when they talked together she sensed a sinister undercurrent of something wrong, that some powerful and unusual motive had recalled him to his father's long deserted house—if this indeed were Clayton. Or was it Clayton? There festered the doubt. For no matter how she tried to laugh it off, Nat's positive denial had made its impression. Any glib tongued stranger might fool a woman, while the old Negro could sense his breeding by intuition.

Old Nat stood wonderingly, and watched Miss Barbara twisting the lash of her whip, until Mrs. Razzilly got so nervous that she held out the gray mare's bridle and urged,

"Come, Barbara. Let's go home?"

"No." The Stark girl shook her head and clenched her lips tightly. She was putting two and two together, trying to make nine or seven. She could only make four. She knew nothing of this man and had not even his own word for his identity. If he were Stuart Clayton and charged with a crime, why didn't he stand forth in the open and give the lie to his accusers? That's what a Stark would do. Yet, as Barbara reluctantly admitted, that was precisely what this man did not do. He kept himself hid.

She had first met him by accident in this glade, concealed from both the lake and the road. And even while sitting beside her on their log, she had noticed how fearful he seemed lest someone might discover him. He always came riding through the woods, avoiding the public highway. Plainly he was hiding. Those were the facts, which had made a tingling mystery of their meeting—but now! Constables! Nippers! False name! Ugh!

It might be romantic for a fairy book princess to hold her stolen trystings, incognito, with a prince, the son of her father's royal enemy. Their love would unite two warring kingdoms, and all live happy ever after. But to meet some strolling varlet in the woods, some smooth talking fugitive from justice who sailed under the alias of another mani Barbara shuddered at such low intrigue.

"Barbara," Adelaide insisted, "Barbara, we must go. Florian might come."

"You may go if you like." The Stark girl shook her off with a gesture that old Nat knew so well. Mrs. Razilly begged and pleaded, but nobody could argue with Miss Stark when her jaw set cold like the major's. Nat knew that he ought to shut up, yet he kept on mouthing, "Huh! Ef dat feller ain't po' white trash, he sho is got ways like 'em."

"Hush, Nat," Barbara tried to silence him, but the Negro persisted in his grumbling, "Po' white trash! Po' white trash! Common as pig tracks."

Then Nat did shut up, abruptly and completely, for Mrs. Razilly rose erect in her stirrups and pointed, "Look, Barbara! There he comes! Hurry! Hurry!"

Barbara never budged. Planting both feet squarely on the ground, she disputed the power of any man to drive her away. But old Nat felt mighty different. He was guilty of toting tales against the white folks, and had no pride in proving to a man's face what he had just asserted behind his back. So while the stockingfoot came in a gallop, old Nat likewise struck a trot. He dodged like a rabbit through the screen of cane, flitted across the little glade, scrambled into his dugout, and shoved off.

Thirty seconds prior to the arrival of a swarthy cavalier, judicious old Nat had departed in his dugout. Instead of venturing into the open, Nat's dugout dived in at the mouth of the slough and went wriggling like a moccasin amongst the brushwood. Here he felt safe from pursuit by land or sea, and paused to mop the sweat from his face.

"Huh! Miss Barbara sho did axe mo' questions dan a constable. Ev'ybody makes sech a fuss over dis feller, dat's how come dese po' white trash ack so biggety. Flung me a dollar! Huh!"

The Tryst.

OLD Nat was gone, but like a venomous wasp he left his sting behind, a sting that rankled in Barbara. Yet the girl steadied herself with such a composure that even the nervous Adelaide could not detect that Miss Stark was in any wise disturbed.

"Who do you think the imposter can be?" Mrs. Razilly whispered, and Barbara laughed aloud.

"I don't care what's his name, he hasn't got the best of me."

This is a land of loving affinities between lakes and roads; ridges follow the water, and roads follow the ridges. Three hundred yards to the southward, in the woods beside the lake, both girls saw the stockingfoot, its sleek hide shining in the sunlight as he galloped toward them, bearing a rider in a broadbrimmed hat.

"Come on, Barbara, come on." Like a frightened child Mrs. Razilly tugged at Barbara's arm, but Miss Stark stood her ground with a scornful curling of her lip. Then she broke out laughing. She wanted him to find her laughing when the speedy sorrel brought his rider to their side, as graceful a Lochinvar as ever swung from the saddle and bowed his knightly compliments.

Whoever he might be, this stranger rode with such dash and verve that Adelaide dismissed all suspicions engendered by the Negro's idle tales. Her snapping Creole eyes defiantly approved him, while the cooler headed Miss Stark gave the suspect a far more searching scrutiny. He was slightly upwards of 30, sinewy and slender, with intensely black eyes and hair, and cheeks of deeper tan that were ever browned by Mississippi suns. The black mustache, with its tiny fleck of hair on the lower lip, was doubtless the decoration which old Nat had attempted to describe, and which confirmed his identification of the man who'd flung the dollar. And he was distinctly foreign looking.

Whether Clayton or no, whether his manner were natural or assumed, he knew how to be courtly with ladies. And from his impartial cordiality no male person could have guessed which of these he loved. But Adelaide Razilly knew, the superfluous Adelaide who scorched with curiosity, yet did not openly offer to withdraw. That would be far too crude for a woman of her finesse.

As the three of them chatted together, a separation of the detrop from the desired was gradually accomplished by the tact of Mrs. Razilly's horse, who began nibbling at the cane shoots and grazed out of hearing to a spot where even the crown of her stiff hat became invisible. Adelaide chose an observation post from which she peered through the brushwood at the cork helmet of her husband; and it thrilled the sentimental Creole to keep such guard that Peeping Tom could not disturb her lovers.

Trouble.

THE superfluous woman having removed herself in one direction, Barbara and the stranger went drifting in the other. Without apparent intention she parted the fringe of cane and led him to their log. They always sat under the Lone Oak; it seemed the only place. And there she carried with her the faint, elusive perfume of new mown hay. He followed silently, the sorrel's bridle caught in the crook of his elbow, and tethered the horse to an overhanging branch. Although he spoke no word, his every movement showed a definite purpose. Now he turned and came straight to Barbara, as a man who knows precisely what he means to do. What she intended to do was not clear, except to denounce his trickery, and overwhelm him with a dignified contempt for his cowardice. Yet from the instant when Barbara Stark sat down and began to fumble with her whip, she felt a helpless sense of being on the defensive. Without glancing up she saw how tall and straight he was, how quiet, and perilously handsome. The initiative slipped from her hands, and panic struck her as he bent over, saying, "I am late, my Adelaide."

"My Adelaide? My Adelaide?"

"Yes," he gravely inclined his head. "You told me to call you by your name."

"Suppose I did," she snapped. "I didn't tell you to say my Adelaide."

"No. I made up that part of it—as I went along."

"But you're getting along entirely too fast, when you don't even know who I am."

"I know who you can be—you can be Mrs. Stuart Clayton, in an hour."

"Indeed! So quickly?"

"Yes. Blood runs quickly in the tropics and I have no time to waste."

"Then pray don't waste a minute on me."

Barbara loathed herself for behaving like a peevish child when the suspected man showed no trace of annoyance as he suggested:

"Please drop that tone of banter; I really have something to tell you:"

Something to tell her. Above all she wanted to hear. He turned his head to make sure they were alone, and she saw the lines of decision gather at his lips.

"Every woman," he said, "has a right to trifle with a man, to dangle him on a hook, just as those fishermen are playing with the bass. But I can't play that way because——"

"Oh!" Barbara sneered because she was afraid, afraid of herself, "Oh, you want to play some other way?"

Heedless of her interruption he spoke straight on. "I can't play that way because I may be forced to leave Mississippi tonight and never see you again unless——"

"Every schoolboy threatens that!"

"Unless I come back for you."

This was reaching his objective swiftly, overthrowing every barrier that Barbara had interposed. He might not have advanced so far except for her own demoralization, and her efforts to puzzle out whether she believed sadly. "How much do you have to pay for a quart nowadays?"

NOTHING BUT TALK by Berton Braley

Ted glared at me and stalked around to the side of my flat top desk. One fist thumped impressively down on a volume of Virginia statutes at my elbow as Ted delivered himself of his ultimatum:

"I'm going to save your niece from herself, Foster, but I insist on your helping me. It's go to be done without her knowing it," he added mysteriously. "And that's where I need your advice."

"But I thought you came to give me advice," I protested. "Ted, let's get all this straight. You want to advise me to help you save Kitty from herself so she won't go around shooting innocent men, and it all must be done without her knowing it. And yet you——"

"Don't be a damned fool!" blurted Ted. "Kitty isn't going to shoot anybody!"

I sighed with relief. "I hope not; I hope not. She isn't much of a shot, anyway—and then, she's never written a diary! But how do you figure me in on your rescue of Kitty?"

"Well, I haven't doped it all out yet," he confessed, "but you can help. I've got just the germ of an idea."

"Germs are contagious," I warned. "Don't go spreading any around here."

The Great Scheme.

BUT Ted ignored my admonition and straightway launched into a rambling explanation of his scheme. I'd like to be able to tell it just the way he gave it to me, but Ted wasn't a scholarly talker, and—well, today he was somewhat incoherent at times, due, undoubtedly, to the manhandling Kitty had given him the day before on the tennis courts.

At any rate, Ted's germ idea intrigued me after he had expounded it for several minutes. Since I was as much interested in saving Kitty—from whatever it was, it didn't matter—I ended up by promising Ted my assistance. He departed in a far more gentlemanly frame of mind than when he had rudely thrust himself in upon my office hours' hospitality.

It was ten days later that Kitty, at dinner one evening, mentioned Ted Maxwell's name. In the interim since his last—or his latest—dismissal at the capricious hands of this niece of mine, his name had not been brought into our conversation. For, you must know, in the plot that Ted had outlined in my office that day, I was to play chiefly a silent part, leaving the next moves up to him.

"Do you know, Uncle Foster," said Kitty this evening, leaning a pair of dimpled elbows on the edge of the table. "I'm rather glad I've broken off Ted and my engagement." I inclined my head respectfully. "Yes, he's—well, he's not dependable. I reckon that's the word.

"What's he been doing?" It was a different Kitty that was discussing young Maxwell this evening from the Kitty whom I had tried to reprove that day at the Country club. Evidently Ted's plot was beginning to react upon her.

"O, nothing," replied the girl, which was another way of putting a woman's "because" into an argument. "Nothing, except that I'd rather find out he's fickle now than after I've married him."

"And when did you decide again that you'd marry him?"

"I haven't!" she protested. "I mean—O, well, Ted's rushing another girl now, so it's none of my affair!" Kitty seemed to regret that she ever had ventured on this discussion, for now she arose hurriedly and excused herself.

Jealous? Maybe she was. But when I followed her into the library and sought to pry further into the matter, she answered me airily and buried herself in a magazine.

All at Sea.

A FEW days after this bit of conversation with Kitty I heard from Ted. He said everything was ready and it was my move. Over the telephone I sought to escape from going through with the bargain; but Ted only reminded me I had as much at stake in saving Kitty as he had.

So the upshot of it was that a week later found a merry party aboard my private yacht down on Hampton roads, preparing for a cruise up Chesapeake bay and points unknown. Merry, I said, but it should be qualified. For after the first day of our cruising around the bend of Old Point Comfort and up along the mouth of the York river, one of our party began to lose something of her usual piquancy.

Of course, Kitty, withal she was my niece, was only human! She had been brought rather than invited on this cruise, for I had told her she must come with me to play hostess to our guests. A woman's hand must direct the social side of the party while I looked after the yachting and business ends. Now, on this second day out, she began to flock by herself, so to speak; indeed, it was noticeable that I was about the only person on board that she would have any conversation with, and much of that was cryptic and enforced.

You see, Kitty had been led to believe that Ted Maxwell was not to be in the yachting party. Maybe I had lied a bit here and there, but I consoled myself that the sin was in a praiseworthy cause. So when Kitty had discovered Ted among the last minute arrivals she had looked at me reproachfully and, in the next breath, was giving Ted himself the benefit of a shudderingly formal bow.

Then entered Phoebe upon the machinations of one Ted Maxwell. Perhaps I should tell you a little about Phoebe Antrim; but you'll find it hard to believe everything if I should happen to tell you just what a ravishing beauty she really was. Well, Phoebe was the kind of brunette that could wreck a kingdom, big or little, ancient or modern, by the lure of her eye, the seductiveness or her dimple flanked smile, the appeal of her velvet soft neck and shoulders—O, it's no use! You'll be saying next that either I was in love with Phoebe myself of I was under her hypnotic spell—and maybe you'd be right in either surmise, or both. Anyway——

She darted a look over her shoulder, as if to apologize for leaving before I had quite finished my limeade.

Poebe and Ted soon were the talk of the yacht. No one could blame Ted, exactly, for Phoebe was dazzlingly vivacious. Only I thought she might have had better taste than to flirt so brazenly with Kitty's thrice-late-fiance right in front of Kitty herself. Kitty, as I said, seemed to ignore Phoebe and Ted, along with the rest of my guests, so it was probably lost effort on Phoebe's part if she had been planning a triumph in the face of a quondam rival.

"Ted, what's the tremendous idea about you and Phoebe?" I asked him the afternoon of our second day out. We were standing on the bridge while Capt. Dudson gazed out over our heads from his eminence in the pilot house.

"Idea?" he repeated. "It's just part of our campaign—you know, the plot to save Kitty."

"And, incidentally, to—to break her heart?" I supplemented.

"Break Kitty's heart?" The handsome young brute laughed in strange glee at my fears. "No such luck!" he cackled. "You couldn't break——"

"Now, see here, Ted," I put in, "she's my niece, and I've a right to see that no young he-vampire makes a fool out of her!"

"Lord, Foster, you're too serious for any use," he replied. "Can't you see? I told you if you'd cruise with a crowd of congenial married couples as the—well, for the 'mob scenes,' while you, Phoebe, Kitty, and I were to be the only single ones, I'd guarantee results with Kitty. Didn't I?"

"Ye-es," I admitted. "But I didn't think you'd be going daffy over Phoebe as soon as we drew in the gang plank."

"O it began before we came down for the cruise," the conceited young wretch boasted. "It's all part of the plan. I've been rushing Phoebe for a couple of weeks now—ever since Kitty jilted me last."

My fingers somehow itched to shake this tanned Apollo at my side until his teeth dropped out. So Phoebe was the girl Kitty had referred to that evening at dinner! If I'd only known before I assented to Ted's dictation of our guest list!

"See here, Ted, leaving Kitty out of it for a minute, how about your—your hurting Phoebe's feelings?" I would try a new angle of attack.

"Phoebe's a good scout," he vouchsafed. "She can tell when a man's in earnest and when he's just amusing himself."

"Damn it, Ted, I don't like the idea of your amusing yourself, as you call it, at Phoebe's expense!"

Ted eyed me pityingly. "Why, bless me, old man, I thought it was Kitty you were worried about—and here I find it's Phoebe! What's Phoebe to you?"

The impudence of the unblushing rascal! I controlled my growing impatience and contented myself with a well assumed reply of indifference:

"Phoebe's nothing whatever to me," whereat Ted snickered, "but I don't want to see you playing fast and loose with the hearts of two girls the way——"

Ted grabbed me by the arm and dragged me to the steps leading down from the bridge. "O, come on down and have a game of cards with the fellows!" And so I meekly surrendered the whole battle.

"Kitty," I told my niece that evening after dinner, while we were leaning on the rail to watch the sun's last tints dissolve over the sandy stretches of eastern Virginia, "I would suggest that you pay more attention to the comforts of our guests. You're getting yourself talked about for your indifference."

Kitty conferred upon me a scornful glance from the corner of her eye. "Uncle Foster, whose party is this—yours or mine?" No answer to that, of course; so she went on: "And, since Ted Maxwell seems to be so much closer to you than I am lately, why don't you get him to play assistant host to you tonight?"

"Why, Ted is one of the guests—what do you mean?" I pretended amazement.

"O I saw you two chattering together and Ted laughing and talking about Phoebe—yes, I did, too! I heard him quarreling with you over her at the end! He asked you what Phoebe was to you! What did you want to bring me along for, anyway?"

I was beginning to wonder why I had brought anybody along—why I'd ventured on any scheme of Ted Maxwell's concoction. Kitty turned from the rail.

"I don't think I'll dance this evening, Uncle Foster," she announced in a tone of finality. "I—I don't think—I didn't bring any dancing slippers."

But she did dance finally. And, to my consternation, she was dancing with Ted when I first espied her among the whirling groups on the after deck about the middle of the evening. Three or four Negro sailors were strumming syncopated melodies that made even my old bachelor feet patter on the floor beneath my chair; the luxuriant August moon, its full radiance abetted by the magic sparkle of its reflection over the water, was fit for romance and midsummer madness. Was it for this one moment—this almost erotic blending of music and the insinuating glories of the flawless skies—was it for this, then, that Ted had planned the whole trip, so he might ensnare my niece again when she would be helpless to exert her usual wiles?

Kitty and Ted seated themselves next to me when their dance was over. Ted's elbow nudged mine, but he did not turn his head. His eyes were straight in front and he seemed to be indifferent to Kitty as well as to me. It was Kitty who made the usual platitudes about a "wonderful night" and a "dandy dance." Ted mumbled in agreement.

Then Kitty leaned out beyond Ted and addressed me:

"Uncle Foster, why don't you dance with —Phoebe?"

"O—well, maybe—O, I'm not up on these new dance steps," I demurred, glancing furtively around to see if Phoebe might have overheard.

"I know!" Kitty tossed her head. "You're afraid of making Ted jealous!" This niece of mine was herself again, confound it!

Presently Kitty complained of a headache and disappeared. Ted managed to worry through the rest of the evening by dancing almost every number with Phoebe, so Kitty would have had uneasy slumber if she could have known. And, then, maybe she wouldn't; you can't tell anything about Kitty.

Mock Marriage.

IT was the next afternoon, just before time for dinner, that Mrs. Gordon Channing, Phoebe's sister, who lived in Norfolk, proposed a new diversion for this evening in Phoebe's sister, who lived in Norfolk, proposed a new diversion for this evening in lieu of more dancing. It seemed that these married couples had been given their fill of dancing with their own and the limited number of other men's wives and other women's husbands the evening before; so Mrs. Channing, loudly seconded by her pudgy, nervous little husband, announced a plan for "something different" for tonight.

"What's your idea?" asked Phoebe, standing next to her sister in the hatchway that gave down into the saloon. "Can we all join in on it?"

"Well, most of us will be spectators, I'm afraid, but it'll be just as much fun," Mrs. Channing went on ambiguously. "My plan is to—now don't all laugh at me—is to have a mock wedding! What do you say?"

She looked around upon affirmative nods in every direction—that is, all except two. For Kitty and I seemed to realize, in the same instant, that there were only two unmarried couples on board and that—well, no one cares to watch a pair of matrimonial veterans go through a mock ceremony when they've been husband and wife in reality.

Ted Maxwell constituted himself master of ceremonies right off the bat with such assurance that I couldn't help but suspect the young rascal was in on some scheme. While our guests were buzzing in excitement over the prospects of the mock ceremony I went up to Ted and awaited a chance to interrupt his chatter with Mrs. Channing.

"It's a bully idea," Maxwell was telling her as I came near. "Now, if you say so, I'll get the bride and groom picked out and—why, we can call dinner tonight the wedding feast! Why, look, Mrs. Channing——" and he pointed to me—"the very fellow for the bridegroom! What d'you say, Foster?"

"I say nothing doing," I replied solemnly. "I'm host and I don't think I should occupy the limelight at a time like this. How about yourself?"

Ted grinned shamelessly. "O very well, if you won't. I was sort of hoping you wouldn't, anyway, Foster," and the brazen scoundrel took my arm to walk me out of earshot of the others and explained: "You see, I got Mrs. Channing to propose this mock wedding stunt—and who do you think is going to be the bride?"

I shuddered. "Kitty, you probably think," I replied, "but I'll lay you a bet that she won't l:s——"

"Wrong, as usual, Foster!" he interrupted airily. "Kitty isn't going to be asked to listen! Phoebe's to be the bride!"

"And how do you know Phoebe will listen to your plan?" I demanded.

"O, Phoebe's a good scout," he said.

"That seems to be the sum and substance of your estimate of Phoebe," I remarked sarcastically.

"Well, good Lord, Foster," he half apologized, "if I told you what I think of Phoebe you'd be too damned jealous to let me live!"

Nat made a balk to shove off, but the girl seized his arm.

"Hold still!" she ordered. "Tell me at once. When did you go to Marmion?"

No gleam of triumph flickered across Nat's innocent face as he glanced up and replied:

"I don't think, Mrs. Razzle, I knows," Nat clamped his lips with bulldog tenacity.

"How do you know?" Barbara wasn't satisfied, and forced the Negro to tell.

"Now, lissen, Miss Barbara, lissen real good. Niggers is powerful hard to fool. Spose in' a young man comes a courtin' you. Dat while the old Negro could sense his breeding by intuition.

Old Nat stood wonderingly, and watched Miss Barbara twisting the lash of her whip, until Mrs. Razzilly got so nervous that she held out the gray mare's bridle and urged,

NOTHING BUT TALK by Berton Braley

In Which the Reader Himself—or Herself—Will Have to Decide on the Relative Merits of Words versus Action.

"SILLY story," said Mildred, throwing down the magazine; "nothing but talk."

"Nothing but talk!" Perrin exclaimed, viciously casting his cigar into the fireplace, though he had only half smoked it.

"Nothing but talk—you burble like an editor—'This little story has a good deal of deft charm, but it is, after all, nothing but talk.'"

"I don't understand this violence," said Mildred, "particularly from a man who comes to call on a girl and sits down in an easy chair before the fireplace and grabs a magazine and reads and smokes and does anything but talk."

"'Nothing but talk,'" Perrin snorted again. "People make me weary with that phrase. 'Nothing but talk'—as if that condemned anything—as if that proved a book or a story or a play or a human being negligible, empty, frivolous. You'd think to hear some people that talk didn't mean anything; you'd get the idea that talk was just a sort of vapor that the wind blows away."

"Well, isn't it?" asked Mildred mildly.

"Some of it," agreed Perrin; "most of it, maybe. But not all of it. It's simply a question of the quality. Real talk is the most important thing in the world."

"I guess that action is perhaps the best medium for my expression."

"As, for instance——"

"What are the Psalms but talk?—and yet we remember them when all the 'red blooded adventure' of Kings and Samuel is blotted out of our memories; and the Song of Solomon—that is only talk, or song, which is talk to music; and the book of Job—mainly talk, such good talk, such true talk that it could be made into a play almost without changing a line—and was.

"Nothing but talk! The orations of Demosthenes were only talk—you'll look in vain for 'vivid action and plot' in the dialogues of Socrates—Cicero drove Catiline from the senate with an oration that was nothing but talk!

"Why, trace most great deeds and stirring adventures and you'll find they started in 'nothing but talk'—speech of table or talk of tavern—brave words of some strolling bard or sounding syllables from the lips of patriarchs or family retainers.

"Plot? Plot piffle! Do you remember the plot of The Gilded Age? But you remember Col. Sellers, who did nothing much but talk. Why, I don't even remember what book Micawber is in—but I remember him by his talk. And what are the Dolly Dialogues? Nothing but talk—but you get deeper into a man's loyal heart and soul in those apparently frivolous conversations than you would with a dozen volumes of Freud. Nothing but talk—why——"

"Just the same," said Mildred, "I like action. I don't like stories where the characters don't do anything. Let 'em talk as much as they like if it's interesting, but it won't stay interesting to me unless they do something, too. Even if they just get up and walk across the room."

"I walked all the way here this afternoon, and that's a good three miles on hard flagging and cement. I'm hanged if I intend to get up and walk across the room just to fulfill your whim for action. I've done enough for you."

"That's rude," said Mildred.

"I was only quoting from a story with which I thought you might be familiar," Perrin replied. "But, honestly, I'm awfully comfortable here in this chair and I'd rather do nothing——"

"But talk," finished Mildred.

"Yes," said Perrin; "there are a whole lot of remarks I haven't yet made on the subject. For example, what is the most beautiful thing in the world—the thing the poets sing about, the writers write about, the actors act——"

"Money," suggested Mildred with a sly smile. "You know—money talks."

"Love," said Perrin, ignoring her innuendo. "And yet half of love is nothing but talk. Whispered words and tender phrases, stumbling sentences—and sometimes rushing, whirling torrents of speech that sweep everything before them."

"Yes," said Mildred, "half of love is nothing but talk. And it isn't even always talk about love. I've heard two people discuss the weather and the high cost of living in such a way and with such glances and tones that every word seems to burn with passion. But—nevertheless and notwithstanding, love doesn't get anywhere till the talk stops."

"As how?" queried Perrin.

"Well, dear old bean," said Mildred, "what I mean to say is, if you get what I mean, and all that sort of thing, talk in love is all very well, and it leads up nicely to delightful situations, and it expresses a lot, but it doesn't get anywhere or achieve any results until it's translated into action."

"And still I don't seem exactly to comprehend the trend of your conversation," Perrin complained.

"I mean that while talk is an effective preliminary, it's action—the clinch, the embrace, and the kiss—that really count in the license clerk's office. You can talk the most wonderful love in conversation in the world, you can search high heaven and broad earth for metaphors and similes to express the height and breadth and depth of your passion, you may thrill the heart and shake the soul of your beloved with words that burn and flame and sparkle—but she won't really believe you until you've put your arms around her and kissed her. All the rest is—nothing but talk."

"Aha!" said Perrin, "I have you there. For what follows the embrace and the kiss—marriage! And what is marriage? Nothing but talk—a few words said by a minister or a magistrate. And if you say that these few words do not constitute marriage, that marriage is the mating of flesh with flesh and soul with soul—you may speak perfect truth, but such mating without those words means disgrace, suffering, tragedy. That's the way the world sees it—and it does no good to say the world is wrong. For custom, tradition, law—these things form the world's opinion, and they are brave indeed who dare flout that opinion. And of what is that opinion, that attitude made? Of talk—nothing but talk. And of the fear or talk. 'What they say or what they may say' is the thing that holds most of us to the path society has laid out for us—and what they say or do dominates fashion, politics, morality. Yet 'what they say' is—nothing but talk."

"That's rude," said Mildred.

"Ah, yes," Mildred said. "Quite so. By the way, they say Sylvia Hearn is engaged to Zack Chaloner."

"Yes," said Perrin, "I've heard that."

"Is it true?"

"I presume so. How should I know?"

"I thought you and Sylvia were pretty close friends."

"O, we ran around a little together last spring. She dances beautifully—and I was lonesome. Then you came home and——"

Mildred smiled. "And Zack came on the scene and cut you out," she offered.

"Zack evidently was in earnest, I wasn't. I left the field."

"But they say——"

Perrin sniffed. "Do you pay any attention to idle gossip, dear girl?"

"'Nothing but talk,' of course," said Mildred, "but you said that was the most important thing in the world——"

"Some kinds of talk are. Not that kind. You shouldn't listen to it. But I'm glad you did."

"Why?"

"Well, it shows you are interested in me. And I want you to be interested in me. I'd even like to think that you were interested enough to be jealous of me."

"You certainly are dedicating a lot from an allusion to your affair with Sylvia Hearn. I'm not jealous, merely curious."

"All right, curiosity itself shows interest. How curious are you?"

"Curious enough to know why you suddenly dropped Sylvia, or Sylvia suddenly dropped you."

"I've already told you. You were away; I was lonesome. Hence, Sylvia. You came back—fini Sylvia. That's all there is to it. No drama, no scandal—a simple problem in subtraction—Sylvia minus Perrin equals Mildred plus Perrin."

"Yes, but apparently Perrin minus Mildred also meant Sylvia plus Perrin."

"You'll notice, however," said Perrin, "that I subtracted myself from Sylvia, while you subtracted yourself from me. But let's get away from this arithmetical dialogue. And let's forget Sylvia and Zack and just talk about ourselves."

"All right," said Mildred, "what shall we say about ourselves?"

"Well, I'll say what I want to say about myself—and then you can say what you think you want to say about yourself."

"Just like a man," said Mildred, "always thinking of himself first."

"Yes, but I'm giving you the woman's privilege—the last word."

"Go on," Mildred urged.

"About myself——" Perrin began, "I shall make only a few brief remarks. I am, as you know, twenty-seven years of age, of sound mind and body, and now earning eight thousand dollars a year. I can show you my income tax blank if you don't believe me. Such is the present status of John Perrin. But that status is threatened. I am aging with doubt, anxiety, and worry at the rate of one year for every day I wait. So I'll be eighty inside of a couple of months unless I stop waiting."

"I don't know what you're waiting for," said Mildred, "but under the circumstances I should think you would stop waiting, whatever it is."

"You know perfectly well what I'm waiting for, and the reason I don't stop is because I'm afraid if I stop waiting and try action I won't want to live at all.

"I am of sound mind and body—but I won't be if this keeps up much longer. And I can't think about my work—and so my income is likely to be affected."

"My criticism of that speech is my criticism of the original story—it's nothing but talk. And it doesn't get anywhere. There's no plot to it."

"The plot is," said Perrin, "the plot is that—that I—well——"

"You are a bad demonstrator of your own theory of the importance of talk," commented Mildred. "You make strange noises, but you don't say anything."

"I guess," said Perrin, suddenly getting to his feet, "that action is perhaps the medium for my expression."

He took two swift steps, reached down into the depths of the chair in which Mildred nestled, gathered her up in his arms, and kissed her.

She struggled for a few seconds—then her arms went about his neck and her lips clung to his.

After a while Perrin spoke.

"This," he said, "convinces me that talk is a most inadequate vehicle of expression. Kiss me again, sweetheart."

Mildred kissed him again.

"However," she conceded, "you haven't yet told me that you love me."

"I'd say," Perrin observed, "that I'd told you about as emphatically and effectively as is possible."

"Perhaps," said Mildred, "but I want to hear it."

"I love you," said Perrin, "I love you. I love you."

Mildred sighed happily. "I don't know, dear," she said, "but I'm inclined to take your original viewpoint. Action is all very well—but I somehow wasn't thoroughly convinced you loved me until you said those three words—and what are they? Why, they're——"

"Nothing but talk," said John Perrin.

Making Kitty Jealous

by Meredith Davis

She Just Had to Be Saved from Herself—So She Did It Herself While Others Were Striving

Ted was plainly nervous, as befitted even a bridegroom in a make-believe affair.

FROM the manner of Ted Maxwell's entrance into the dressing rooms of the country club I judged he'd been beaten at tennis. Not that Ted can't be as good a loser as the rest of them, but there are times in the humors of the gamest of sports when defeat leaves a bad taste.

"How'd you come out today?" I inquired. Ted's locker was next to mine. He struggled out of his sweater before deigning to answer.

"Licked, as usual—and by Kitty," he vouchsafed at length. "Wonder why a fellow dislikes so to be beaten by a girl at a man's game?" he grumbled a moment later.

"But tennis is a woman's game, too, my boy," I reminded him, "and Kitty has won two or three cups here and in Norfolk, so it's no disgrace."

"Who said it was a disgrace?" he burst in, "and don't 'my boy' me just because you're Kitty's uncle! You're only six years older than I am at that!"

I regarded Ted around the corner of my eye as I puttered among my golf sticks. He was in a sorry temper, and I was willing to bet it was over more than just the loss of a set or two of tennis.

"Kitty must have beaten you love sets," I remarked presently, "from the mood you're in." Maybe the mention of "love" would bring results.

It did. Ted laughed sardonically as he repeated the word.

"Love—love sets is right," he cackled. "But love sets is all she knows or cares about any kind of love," he finished with what was intended as fiendish sarcasm at the expense of my sprightly young niece.

"Ye-ah?" I fed him a little more line; he already had swallowed my "love" bait. Ted was getting ready for his splash under the shower, but he paused long enough to accommodate my curiosity.

"I mean it. If it's any news to you, she's broken our engagement again, and this makes the third time!" He turned to go. "Three times is enough for any sane man!"

"I don't see that you should worry, then," I commented, but he ignored it, if, indeed, he heard me at all.

I went up to the clubhouse gallery presently, and almost the first person to greet me was this particular young woman who was bringing nothing but grief into the life of Ted Maxwell. I slid my hand through her arm affectionately and suggested a couple of iced drinks at a nearby table.

Kitty Carruthers was a most discerning young miss, withal she was something of a coquette.

"Now, what do you want to pump me about, Uncle Foster?" she asked impishly, penetrating my assumed nonchalance. I escorted her to the table in dignified silence.

"Kitty," I began, after we had given the waiter our orders, "when are you going to stop regarding men as your legitimate playthings and—and decide——"

O, but what was the use! You can't keep your mind on being solemn and inquisitorial when the subject of your lecture claps her hands gleefully and dissolves into ripples of mirth! Kitty's laughter, by its spontaneity, its bubbling contagion, might easily disarm a whole Supreme court in its most ponderous moment!

"O you're so droll, Uncle Foster!" she chuckled. "You said that just like De Wolf Hopper trying to be serious!"

"No, I'm not doing this to be droll, Kitty. It's for your own good. The first thing you know none of the men will have anything to do with you because you're so—so——"

"So long, I guess you're trying to say, Uncle Mine, aren't you?" and with another of her devastating splurges of merriment she excused herself to join a group of girls just in from the tennis courts. Once, as she twined an arm around the waist of a companion, she darted a look at me over her shoulder as if to apologize for leaving before I had quite finished my limeade. I shook my head at her, uncle-wise, and she rewarded me with a pout that was fit to kiss.

Now something had to be done about Kitty, and clearly it was up to me to do it or see that it was done. Here she was, twenty-two years old and already a veteran of three engagements to Ted Maxwell—three that I knew of and heaven only knew how many others on the side. Reflecting on Ted's confession in the clubhouse, I marveled greatly; darned if I could see how Ted ever had caught Kitty in serious mood long enough to get engaged even once, let alone three times. Maybe I had been underrating young Maxwell, after all.

As Kitty's uncle and nearest of kin I had brought her up—perhaps it would be putting it more exactly to say I had tried to keep pace with her on her own way up!—and, although I was only 35 and prided myself on my celibacy, I could readily understand why eligible young fellows of our set were making fools of themselves over this niece of mine.

A Beauty of Virginia.

KITTY took after her mother in looks. In her day my sister-in-law had been a belle of Richmond's society, and her old beaux, whom my brother had beaten in the quest of her heart, even today spoke of her in the same breath with the Langhorne girls and the incomparable May Handy of the generation before. Higher praise than that no man could give to a Virginia woman, as you may know if you know your Richmond at all. Yes, Kitty was rounding out into the same wholesome type of vivid beauty that her mother had had, but in place of her mother's statuesque height the daughter was of more supple body and lesser stature.

Kitty was blonde, like her mother, too. But constant devotion to tennis in the summer and to golf in the spring and fall, with occasional trips on yachting parties up Chesapeake bay and along the coast, had bronzed her skin to a tint that blended exquisitely with her sun kissed hair. I shudder to think what her mother and father—both dead since Kitty was a wisp of a child—would say today if they could see the way that nature had burnished the once ivory fairness of their baby; for my brother and his wife were of the indoor, almost the hothouse, period of our social evolution. Our parents, remember, flourished in crinoline days.

My sister Fannie and I had undertaken to care for Kitty when a railway wreck had numbered in its casualties, ten or eleven years ago, both her father and mother. Kitty, somehow, always had refused to regard me as an honest-to-goodness uncle, even in those early days when she came to live with Fannie and me. Perhaps it was because I was too near her own age then—twenty-four, I think, to her eleven or twelve. Only my sister's insistence on the proprieties trained Kitty into calling me "uncle" at all; it was the penalty I was paying, I presume, for being far younger than either Kitty's parents or Kitty's Aunt Fannie.

Fannie had been married five years now and was living out west, in Cheyenne, with her wealthy husband, who owned a cow plantation or—or a live stock range, is it? Anyway, Fannie had absolved herself of further responsibility in Kitty's future by this marriage—and now, with Kitty's behavior once more weighing on me, I felt again that resentment I had when Fannie had undertaken her belated romance five years before. Fannie, at her thirty-six years then, should have known better than to—O, well, never mind Fannie and her affairs now, I had enough to do with Kitty's present troubles.

Ted Maxwell brought them to my attention again soon enough, too. The day after the breaking off of his third engagement and our verbal fencing in the clubhouse, Ted poked his head around the edge of my office door and asked if I was busy.

"Yep, up to my ears," I replied, crisply, and I was.

"All right; what I'm going to say will probably go over your head, so it won't bother your ears much," he croaked, trying to be humorous, I suppose, as he slid into a chair that I reserved for clients. "It's about Kitty."

"I thought three times was enough for any sane man," I interrupted maliciously. "But go on, young man. Your story interests me."

Ted eyed me murderously. "Wait; I'm not going to tell you any story, confound you!" he rejoined. "I've come to give you some advice about that niece of yours."

"Why deal through a middle man? He usually gets all the profits," I put in. "Try direct action."

"I'm going to—that is, if you'll help me. But I want to warn you, Foster, that your niece is in a fair way to make a mess of her life if she—if she doesn't——"

"Doesn't marry you?" I shrugged with mock alarm. "Perhaps, but why?"

"No! No!" he exploded. What I'm trying to tell you, you prettifogging old lawyer, is that unless she cuts out her fickleness and flirtations she's going to get into no end of a mess with men shooting each other and—and——"

"Ted, you've been drinking," I announced

BLOUSES ARE BOTH "IN" AND INSIDE

by Corinne Lowe

One of the dominant blouse tendencies of the season is found in the long waisted model of white satin second from the left This is confined by a crush girdle with a touch of turquoise satin and an emphasis of white satin flowers. At the left the growing vogue of the high collar is found in a model of triple voile, also in white, trimmed with double hemstitching in red and with nickel buttons. Far from the military suggestion of this the Pompeian red crepe blouse second from the right has slashed sleeves and red beads. Last, a Cheruit model in jade green crepe reflects the partiality for braid in its metal braid finish.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—For a long time past blouses have been a stepchild in the clothes household. And if you wanted to make any vivid and searching comment on a friend's gloom you said, "Hello, old dear, what's the matter? You look like a blouse saleswoman." Now, however, the poor outcast is really going to be taken back into the family.

It certainly will be reinstated if some of the new suits take effect this spring. For the blouse forms an integral part of these costumes. Take, for example, a stunning model designed by Charlottee. The sleeves of the suit arrange to show the sleeves of the blouse. Consider also several models from Jenny exploiting the peplum of the blouse beneath the edge of the coat. Lanvin, too, makes provision for some of her new suit designs by accompanying them with crepe blouses of definite impulse. These have long, rather narrow sleeves fitted usually into a cuff, and the corsage blouses into a band of self-material placed near the normal waist line.

Yes, our blouse consciousness is growing, and many of the new suits are helpless without exactly the right sort of waist to dress them up. And before leaving this subject of interdependence one must not forget to mention the waistcoat blouse. This will undoubtedly enjoy more favor this spring than ever before, and many are the new forms which it seeks. Among those sponsored by Paris are gilets with mannish peaked front of matelasse combined with back and sleeves of crepe de chine. The matelasse facade registers the growing popularity of this blistered looking fabric, and constitutes a greater novelty than the piques and fancy silks which are so much used in this accessory.

Blouses are not only "in." They are inside—the skirt. If there be indeed any stepchild left it is the steppechild—otherwise, the Russian looking affair that comes way down over the skirt. Of course, there is a certain type of woman to whom nothing else is so becoming; and this tall slender sister will always have a chance of being humored. But the smartest and newest of the silk and crepe blouses of today are belted in, preferably at the hips.

A representative of this type is found second from the left. I have seen lately several blouses like this worn at Pierre's. One stunning brunette who looked as if she must have come from the banks of the Guadalquivir instead of the banks of the Hudson, chose it in a lovely Pompeian red crepe with a black bead ornament at the low waist line. Another, also a brunette, exploited it in pale yellow. Here we show it in white satin with a touch of blue satin at the girdle otherwise emphasized by a cluster of flowers. But in all instances this model is loyal to the characteristic far flung waist line, to the bateau neck line and short sleeves. And always it suggests the master mind of Renee.

You may hesitate now about wearing a short sleeved frock. But no similar fears need darken your association with a short sleeved blouse. Sheared ones are in quite as good standing—if not better—than the long ones. As to neck lines, these prefer the bateau. But the designer is broadminded and lets you have almost anything you want. It must be mentioned here that the standing collar is gaining ground, and is sponsored by a number of Paris houses.

We show it at the left—sanctuary for all runaway chins and first aid to the woman who doesn't want to tell her passport age—in a blouse of white triple voile with double hemstitching in red and with steel buttons. White, by the way, is exceedingly good just now in the crepe and satin blouses, and next come yellow, green, rust, and the various tomato tints. This blouse just described is adapted especially well to the navy blue suit.

In a season when all crepes are commendable, crepe de chine is still in the ascendant as first choice for the elaborate blouse. And in a season when we are beating the wigwams to it, beads are logically part of many of these dressy structures. Both determinations are shown second from the right in a stunning imported model otherwise distinguished by its sleeves.

When you find an over-the-skirt model today, the peplum is usually limited in its activities. Often, in fact, it is merely a penny frill. This restricted use of the peplum is shown last in a jade green crepe model from Cheruit which is extremely low waisted and which is trimmed with metal braid.

Braid is much used on the imported blouses. So are bands of contrasting color, whimsical buttons, and both balls and links of steel. Then there are some interesting combination of materials, such as of satin and crepe, in which the latter fabric is often finely plaited. And before finishing our thesis we must not forget that the yoke, so conspicuous in every other variety of costume, is entrenched in some of the new blouses.

HOW it did rain! It came down in great drops almost big enough to fill a Teenie Weenie bucket, so it would be quite safe to say that the rain came down by the bucketful. It started early in the morning and it fell so hard there was nothing for the Teenie Weenies to do but stay in the house, for one drop would have soaked a Teenie Weenie from head to toe.

It was most tiresome sitting by the fire with nothing to do. Some of the little folks played checkers, some dozed by the fire, and some talked.

"Let's talk about something to eat," suggested the Dunce when the conversation had lagged for a few minutes during the afternoon.

"What's the use talkin' 'bout fings to eat? Dat done do no good," said Gogo. "I'd like to have a big piece of watermillion, but talkin' don't bring no watermillion," and the little fellow wiped the corner of his mouth as he gazed into the blazing fire.

"I'll bet you a grape seed I could eat a whole thimbleful of whipped cream," cried the Dunce, smacking his lips.

"You all can have your whipped cream," said Gogo. "All I asks fo' is jus' watermillion, plenty of watermillion."

For some minutes the little folks sat silently blinking into the tiny fireplace. Some of the little heads nodded, and loud breathing told that several of the little people had reached the land of dreams.

Suddenly the drowsy Teenie Weenies were brought to their feet by loud yells, and Gogo, who had been nodding beside the fireplace, began to shout at the top of his tiny voice.

"Hey! H-H-Hey, let me go! O! O!" shouted the little colored fellow, and, jumping to his feet, he grabbed the poor Dunce about the neck and began to shake him.

"I'll teach you all to go 'roun' foolin' folks what done like watermillion. No old frog can play low down tricks on me." Gogo shook the poor Dunce until the rest of the Teenie Weenies came to his rescue, for the Dunce was scared half out of his wits and could not help himself.

"Here, quit that! What do you mean by such actions?" shouted the Policeman, prying the little colored chap away from the poor Dunce.

"Land sakes!" cried Gogo, rubbing his eyes and looking foolishly about. "I done been dreamin'."

"Well, that shakin' you gave me wasn't any dream," cried the Dunce, backing off to a safe distance.

"O! it was awful, dat dream," sighed Gogo. "I was sittin' right here befo' de fire when there was a knock on de door. I went to de do' and a big frog done stan' dah and smile a great big smile. After he done smile a long time he done tell me to come out in de yard fo' to eat watermillion. I called de Dunce and de Chinamans and we go out and in de front yard we done fine a big piece of watermillion. I done climb up on dat piece of watermillion and jus' get two big han's full when a big han' done come down out of de sky and snatchem me away. I done kick and scratch and de han' done drop me kersplash in de watermillion. I done get up and de frog he say it all joke, and I say it ain't no joke, losin' watermillion jus' when yo' all have it right in yo' mouth, so I done grab dat frog by de throat to give him a good shakin' when I done wake up."

"Well, that was some dream," said the Old Soldier.

"Yas, sir," answered the little colored fellow. "It come near being some dream, and I is goin' right back to sleep and see if I can get a taste of dat million next time."

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

THE MODE SEEKS LARGE PATTERNS.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Flower gardens are beginning to appear on the streets of Paris, but you understand that they are not composed of natural flowers. They are printed into the dresses of smart ladies, and that one wins the highest praise for costuming whose flowers show the greatest improvement over those of nature. It is the thing to have your flowers out of all proportion to your background. That is to say, whereas an artist tries to get a lot of restful space 'round his picture in the way of neutral colored background, the mode seeks to get but a little bit of dull background for most wanton display of large patterns. It is as if you were looking at the patterns through an opera glass, while the background remained life size.

But the first drawing illustrates what I am trying to say. It represents a Riviera frock in white crepe, and the design is especially characteristic of the crepes of the day—and crepes are especially characteristic of the season. The dress is important in other respects for showing the short, tight sleeves that threaten to supplant the queer, unhealthy growths of the past seasons. It has the straight line, relieved by a rippling garnishment, half drape, half sash, which is held in place by a straw girdle of conventionalized leaves like those in the material. You will see this drawing of it in America almost before the original is offered in France. It is from Mr. Molyneux's collection not yet shown.

There is always some variation to the straight line. Every tailleur in town hangs straight as a fishing pole, except one. Mr. Molyneux is responsible for the showing. His offering has little rudders on the sides, as if to keep it steered in the straight path of fashion and away from the passé. The movement of the cuffs is in the same manner as the rudders, and indicates a tendency to center all of the late fullness of the sleeves into one place.

Those little feathers pointing downward on turbans always made me think of Hiawatha, and now along comes this tailored suit coarsely bound in leather, topped by a hat crudely stitched like his moccasins.

When I saw this suit on display I kept repeating a line learned long ago in school, "Bound with sinews of the reindeer."

It is awfully smart to incorporate something from our traditions into French fashions, but they must be against an olden background out of French history.

The skirt of this costume is of black satin and the coat represents a silhouette of one of the Louises. With such a foundation in history, it is smart to decorate yourself with little fantasies out of our young, childish lore.

The third dress represents our present craving for gay, modern embroidery. It is of dull satin with shiny satin cuffs and hem. Like so many of the dresses of the day, the material itself, that is to say the background, is of black, and the embellishment is gay. It is not possible to say what color it is, because every color in or out of the rainbow glimmers in it against a background of grayish blue. This pattern differs from some of the sophisticated art products of the day in that it is crude in pattern, while some of its rivals are almost over conventionalized.

One of the most unusual happenings of all is for a thing bought at a smart house ever to go out of fashion in Paris. But it seems to me those awfully wide panniers of Lanvin and Poiret are on the decline. Those rudders of our second sketch remind me of something in architecture. When a movement reaches its climax it declines. In anatomy, when an organ is no longer useful it sloughs away. I like my first figure better, for side puffs could never be called by the wearer of it exactly useful, especially when entering a taxicab. But, at any rate, it would seem as if the rudders might be the declining reminders of a greater side fullness that has been.

Of course, that fullness found its most free expression in evening dresses. Even these today are for the most part straight. Sometimes they have a concealed fullness about them some place that spreads when you dance. And the umbrella movement continues. Lady Ribblesdale up at St. Moritz was wearing a simple little black evening frock that looked as if it might have been borrowed from her daughter—except that Miss Muriel Astor insists on clothes more mature and grown up.

This dress had an awfully low V-back and front, which was filled in with a fluff of tulle. The waist came at the geographical waist line, and the skirt, consisting of layers of black fluff, was fulled evenly on to the bodice, with not a great deal of gathering at the waist, but with a descending, sloping fullness, something like the circus rider's skirts—except a little longer; though not so long as the prevailing style dictates.

At any rate, this is by way of saying that if you favor fullness, you do not have to practice self-denial. But the straight string of a line's the thing. Worth always did wonders with this line. You can see for yourself that it is graceful. One naturally hurries on from this obvious fact to an elucidation of the strange back to this garment. Joke makers, when uncovered backs were raging, never thought of anything so unusual as this to jest about.

It consists of five strands of red beads, dropping the length of the back at regular spacings from the neck line to the high ceinture, and falling into a slight blouse, after the tendency of present day bodices. At the neck the strands are held in place by a band of the same beads, which serves thereby as necklace.

The artist says it makes an interesting decolletage in the back. I should say it was all of that. Somebody told me that Lady Ribblesdale had the dress, but I did not see her wear it, and nothing could be less like the simple little dresses, almost like jeune fille clothes, in which I have seen her. The dress is of black satin and black crêpe, with a train of each material and a wide ceinture.

I saw one quite similar to it at St. Moritz in purplish velvet with a headdress of grapes.

Princess Mary's Trousseau Patterns

It is thought that Princess Mary's taste in choosing her trousseau will govern the decision of not only many spring and summer brides but many of America's best dressed women. By even her wedding gown it is evidenced that simplicity of line is the keynote throughout.

1408—Then there is the lovely afternoon frock of maple crêpe Romaine made with set-in sleeves and collarless. The sides of the waist have accordion plaited insets extending into the skirt over which a soft crushed belt finishes the waistline. The women's and misses' dress pattern No. 1408 is cut in sizes 16 and 18 years, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure.

1411—This simple little dress consists of a smart blouse of gray georgette embroidered with steel beads and a straight gathered skirt. The women's and misses' dress pattern No. 1411 is cut in sizes 16 and 18 years, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure.

1412—No trousseau is complete without a good looking tailleur like the one illustrated, which is simple to make. It is attractively trimmed with rows of stitching. The women's and misses' coat pattern No. 1412 is cut in sizes 16 and 18 years, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure.

1409—A dress that would look well in crepe de chine, georgette, or voile is shown. The chief attraction is that it is all in one piece and requires little or no fitting. The trimming shown in embroidery, but strips of lace or contrasting material could be used effectively. The women's and misses' dress

SOME BREADS.

THERE is subject for dietetic glorification in the Lenten fast. It is a pity we have not full records of the hygienic effects of living mainly for a period on dry bread, or bread and salt, or bread and water.

The spirit of the Lenten fast is a part of the world's capital of virtues. The fact of it has been hygienic, when it was not fanatic. Religious dietetics has exercised more than a saving grace over multitudes of men.

If the greatest of penitents allows himself anything to eat at this time, it is bread. If we should set out to raise the place of bread to an almost sacred place in the diet, we might make much of this fact. It is a pity that few people have any reverential or hygienic or esthetic feeling about bread. How can they get it? We must begin with the bread maker. Lift his mind above the material fact of bread making, and he or she may then gain some exaltation in the task. I would like to write a pean to bread. The cook who can make fine bread can make anything else if she tries.

The Sugar of Grain.

Let us ask, as a first requisite, that the cook bring out the quality of the wheat. Few do. There is something about the parching of all grains, when it is well done, that flavors the product. We can well understand why men spoke of old of "the sacred fire from heaven" when we get this perfect flavor. Whether you pop corn or get a nice crispy glaze on a thin sheet of corn cake, or a crushy but not dark top on a popover, you have an unsurpassedly delicate flavor more delicate than any essence can give. Science calls the heart of a grain a sugar, and unless we get the sweet out of it we have not done our work well, so that we and all who eat the product are the poorer.

By the way, what a pretty thing some bit of bread is that has a crumb as white as that of angel food and a crisp crust of about the shade of golden oak. The wonderful snow white breads of the Russians, in their happier days, have been credited to the kind of wheat used, but perhaps they were more largely due to skill than is generally conceded.

At any rate, if you want to get a delicious little confection of purest white and brown, try this way of using up a bit of sour cream.

Sour Cream Muffins.

Made of button size and served in little paper cups, these are fit to set before a king. Use a white yolked egg, well beaten, whipped first alone and then with a third of a cup of sour cream and sweet milk enough to make one-half cup. Into what clings to the measuring cup stir one-fourth of a teaspoon of soda, and add it to the batter the last thing. Add to the wet mixture half a cup of sugar or a little less.

Sift into a bowl three-fourths of a cup of flour with a teaspoon of baking powder, a pinch of salt and two or three grates of nutmeg, or some powdered candied orange peel. Pour the wet mixture into this, and stir until you get a velvety smooth batter. Bake in small buttered muffin pans in a hot oven for fifteen minutes. You can easily double this. You can use all sour cream and no milk, but you then get a dainty which breaks almost too easily. These make a perfect tea muffin.

A White Corn Cake.

Put one-fourth of a cup of white corn meal, with one cup of cold water and a pinch of salt, into the top of a small double boiler with the water boiling below. Cook from half an hour to two hours. The formula in which this is to be used is: One egg, one-half cup of milk, one-half teaspoon salt, three tablespoons of sugar or none at all—the sugar helps to give the cake a wonderful brown when correctly baked—one and one-half cups of flour, four teaspoons of baking powder, the cup of cooked white corn meal, and finally two tablespoons of just melted butter.

Beat the egg, add milk and sugar to it, and beat. Sift flour, salt, and baking powder into a bowl, make a little well in it, pour in and stir in the milk mixture, cut in the cup of white corn meal mush, then beat in melted butter and work the batter until it is wonderfully smooth. It should not be thin enough to pour.

Butter tin pie plates well, and put into them a rather thin layer of this dough and bake in a rather hot oven from twenty to twenty-five minutes. Baked in this way, instead of in muffin shapes, we get a great deal of crisp crust with a thin creamy but not soggy layer between. Serve bottom side up, since the bottom should not only be crisp but have a shiny glaze. Cut into pie like triangles. This is good warmed up on the gridiron, turning the pieces as in making toast. Cooked farina or any similar cereal might be used. With the corn meal we do not get any characteristic corn flavor.

Ring Corn Muffins.

Anyone who begins to make the acquaintance of muffins baked on the griddle in muffin rings is almost bound to like them better and better, particularly as compared with griddle cakes. If there are a number of people to serve, it is much easier to cook a batter which might be cooked in the form of griddle cakes in this way. The whole breakfast bread for a small family might be cooked over an electric grill at the table in this fashion.

Use this formula: One cup of corn meal, one-half cup of flour, one teaspoon of baking powder, one-half teaspoon of salt, two eggs, one cup and a half of milk, two tablespoons of melted butter and two or more tablespoons of sugar or none. If you want to serve these with gravy use none. If with maple sirup you can get on without any. If you want to eat them plain buttered you may or may not want the sugar.

Heat griddle slowly, have it evenly hot but not hot enough to burn anything touching it for ten minutes of time, butter inside of rings, put them on griddle, fill about two-thirds full, bake ten minutes on one side and then turn, ring and all, and bake ten minutes on other. The first side should be handsome and even brown. The other side will look a little like an English muffin.

Wheat Ring Muffins.

One egg, one cup of milk, one tablespoon of sugar or a little more, two scant cups of flour, two level teaspoons of baking powder, two or more tablespoons of butter added to the batter last. Butter the griddle, and never while the muffins are cooking have enough fire under it for the butter to smoke. Bake like corn muffins, but do not fill rings more than half full. If too full the batter spreads when the muffins are turned. Let stand in rings a minute or two. When you take them up then they drop out readily. If wiped at once with paper the rings will require no washing. Those of Russian iron are undoubtedly superior to others.

Eggless Corn Bread.

The following, when baked in a thin sheet, gives the maximum of delicious crust: One-half cup of yellow cornmeal, one cup of flour, one generous half teaspoon of soda, one-half teaspoon of salt, one cup of sour milk. Beat sour milk well with egg beater, pour into dry mixture, beat well to perfect batter, pour into baking tin, spread thin, and bake twenty minutes in hot oven.

Sour Cream Biscuits.

One cup of well whipped sour cream, two scant cups of flour, one-half teaspoon of soda, one teaspoon of baking powder, one-half teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon of sugar. Stir the cream into the sifted dry ingredients. This dough may be rolled and cut in biscuits or simply patted into a pie pan, scored, and baked like a scone. In the latter case it needs some glaze, which may be secured by brushing with milk and sprinkling over with sugar. The maximum of crust may be secured in this way, or by cutting the dough, rolled out, into tiny biscuits and arranging them in groups of three or four, in baking tin. Bake in genuinely hot oven.

Cheese Biscuits.

A half cup of grated cheese added to any baking powder biscuit dough, which is then dropped in small rather nicely shaped portions of batter on a buttered baking pan, yields a most agreeable tea biscuit. The formula may read: Two cups of flour, two to four teaspoons of baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, two tablespoons of shortening cut into the flour, two-thirds of a cup of milk or a little more—do not get rocks, so be generous with milk within reason—and one-half cup of cheese.

Yeast Bread with Water.

A successful yeast bread made with water instead of milk is likely to have the most agreeable wheat flavor of any bread made, and this is enhanced by toasting, at which time it gives off an aroma to make one hungry. Weigh out two pounds of flour to be most accurate, which should not be colder than ordinary room temperature, and use half of it for a sponge made with one cup of boiled water, cooled to tepid, poured over one yeast cake. Stir the water and the yeast together thoroughly, and pour the mixture into a crater made in the pound of flour, stirring the flour into the wet gradually until it has all been mixed in.

Set this to rise like any sponge, but it will take longer than the ordinary sponge because no sugar is used. When it has doubled, stir down and let rise again. To make the final dough, add to this sponge another cup of boiled and cooled water, and then stir and knead in the other pound of flour. After kneading this to perfection, set to rise to double, then make up. You may mold it into a long roll, let rise, and score it before putting it into the oven on a long baking tin.

The management of this water dough is considerably different from the management of a milk dough, and must be learned largely by experience. For hot rolls it is unexcelled. Baked in a 500 degree oven they will be nearly all crisp crust. A gas oven is not ideal for baking such bread, but if it is slowly heated and long, you may get perfect effects. If work on the dough is imperfect, the rolls may bake in unexpected shapes.

Yes, Eddie, Yes.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man of 17, having a fair complexion. I have attracted the attention of a young girl where I work, but every time I look at her she blushes. What is the cause? EDDIE."

You, Eddie, undoubtedly. You cause the blushes!

One of the Elusive Ones.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of twenty, and have kept company with a fellow of the same age for two years. Six months ago this fellow left me. Recently I met him at a dance, and he spoke to me. He calls me up often and has taken me out a few times. Do you think it is proper to go with this fellow, as I do not know what his intentions are? I still love him. Your answer is the only thing that will settle my mind.

"B. H. T."

Go out with him, but if you feel he is apt to flit away again suddenly, suppose you have him on your staff as one and not the only one. It is as well to be prepared for another departure.

Men Are Selfish.

"Dear Miss Blake: My sweetheart is out of town just at present, and I have had invitations from other boy friends to go out for a good time. Now, my sweetheart has no consideration. He thinks I ought to stay at home. Don't you think he shows a selfish attitude?

"PEEVED."

Most sweethearts are just like that, peeved. They're jealous! The question is whether you love him or the jaunts with the other boys the better. Yes, it's selfish, but men in love are selfish—often.

LUNCHEON SET WITH CROCHETED EDGE.

EITHER natural colored linen or pure white would make up beautifully with this crocheted edging. The sizes of the doilies, as well as the number of each, must depend on each woman's idea of what she will need, but the sizes and number given with the directions are what are usually required.

The edge of each doily may be rolled, or a better way is to run a thread in small running stitches on the uncut linen, outlining the exact size of each doily. Cut these out, allowing about one inch of the material beyond the outlining, and have them picoted. This edge makes a firm, smooth edge to crochet to and will be much less work than rolling.

Materials required for one 18 inch centerpiece, six 10 inch, and six 7 inch doilies will be 12 balls of cotton, size 20, and the necessary quantity of linen.

After the edge is rolled or picoted work a row of single crochet all around.

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. 15c and 30c.

What's your hurry?

asks Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Everybody's doing it. Doing what?
Hurrying!
Scurrying!
Rushing madly somewhere!
Rushing madly nowhere!
But rushing, rushing, rushing right along!
"Haven't time! Haven't time!"
'Tis the chorus they're all singing.
Haven't time to go to bed!
Haven't time to rest my head!
Haven't time for any play.
No. Not today! No. Not today!
Have an offul lot to do.
Keep me going the whole day, too.
Haven't time to read or write,
Hardly time to take a bite.
I've got so terribly much to do
Don't know how I'll ever get through.
Every day it's the same old story.

AND every day it's the same tomorry! But what's all the hurry about? Why the hurry? Why the worry? Why the strained and pained expressions? Faces were not designed to look like that! Bodies were not intended to run on high every day and all day!

How about turning this into inventory day? Taking stock of energy expended, energy saved, and the debit and credit after these days and days of rushing madly hither and yon?

How about talking business—straight, hard headed business—to yourself? Make out a report for your own benefit as to just what you have lost in this scatter brained, unsystematic process of life of yours, what you have gained, if anything. Figure it out like a sane business man, subtracting fully for deterioration. Figure further what the end of one year, five, or ten years will be at this rapid rate of deterioration.

And then add it all up—and face yourself in the mirror as you are or as you will be at the end of a given time!

Put down on the debit side: Wrinkles due to the unrelentless hurry demon; irritation over trifling incidents en route; loss of temper, account insufficient sleep; worries over ridiculously petty things; set, tense expression due to lack of play in your life; gradually lowering vitality, due to the entire combination of foolishness—and what have you got?

If a business man had as many deficits as that he'd shut up shop and walk out!

Well, suppose you do that today. Walk a couple of miles and walk back in again, willing to start this health and beauty business of yours all over again, from an entirely different standpoint.

Early to Bed.

First, you must let yourself down. How to do that? Sleep more. Get to bed earlier at night. Force yourself to do it, if necessary. If you've been a singer in the "hurry up" chorus you'll need a whole lot of sleep. Take one whole day off a month for no other purpose than to lie abed. Make it Sunday, if no other day is available. Go to church, if that is your most excellent habit. Come home, and the rest of the day is yours. Use it for sleep and rest.

The whole trouble with the hurrier is lack of system in her life. The difference between the people who really accomplish big things and hold to their youth and beauty is in the system in their lives. Here's where we women fail; why more of us are not done in oils for the halls of fame.

Every big woman who has attained success has done it by conserving her energy for the big things and wasting nothing on fruitless, footless rushing about. Not that she excludes play! No, indeed. She provides for that as a necessary part of her upkeep. When you seek an interview with her, she has the time to give it and give it leisurely. She does not greet you with: "O, I haven't time!" Why?

And Early to Rise.

She begins her day in the morning. Not at 10:30, nor at 12. She begins it the night before, in fact, by getting a full quota of sleep. And I'm not speaking of the woman out in the business world alone. The successful home woman applies the same business tactics to her life. She is the woman with a whole brood of children, perhaps, with time for their care and outside interests as well who mayhap lives next door to the mother of one or none and who never has time for anything.

"It's all in getting up in the morning," said one of these lovely women. "It's planning your day and beginning it right. Then there's no need for hurry or worry. It's the only way to keep up with yourself. Then you have time for your friends, and what would life be without them? You have time to read. You have time for pleasure. If it is true you get out of life what you put into it, you must put system into it to get success back."

The whole thing boils itself down to taking life more easily. Only by systematizing the day can this be done. The hurried, tense, nervous, irritable woman with a face to match has no system. The placid, well poised, amiable, attractive woman has. If you get a system you naturally do what you can that day and let the rest go over until the next, eliminating the unnecessaries as you go along.

It's All in the System.

Into this systematic day you must inject the observance of health and beauty rules. Just take the morning bath, as an example. This habit alone will do wonders toward getting you into a perfect frame of mind and body for the day ahead. At the same time it is beautifying and, after all, this whole system idea of mine is more healthy and beauty success for you than financial. Brushing the teeth after each meal, brushing the hair at night before retiring—nothing will keep it more beautiful and healthy—getting some form of exercise daily—these things all belong in the day of the woman who is systematic.

The woman who is always rushing and hurrying never has time to cold cream her face at night; more often than not she slides into bed without washing her face, much less taking a bath; she brushes her hair just before it is shampooed to get the snarls out. She hasn't time for any of the nice details that distinguish her prettier sister, she hasn't time to improve her mind by reading, she hasn't time to cultivate interests that give her a fresh outlook and keep youth in her heart.

It's all in the system, I repeat, all in the system!

You have the same twenty-four hours to establish as fine a living system as the next woman. And you have no more reason to be time tied than she has.

MUSTARD: WHY THE TALK about bulky foods? Well, food is the best means of keeping the bowels in regular habits. Bowels do not move frequently because the food is not filling enough and does not provide enough bulk. That is why you need foods like cabbage, beets, onions, parsnips, etc. Other foods which assist elimination are figs, fruits, brans, oil, vegetables, butter, cream, and fruit juices. Drink water, before breakfast particularly.

Patterns for Trousseau of Princess Mary

Pattern No. 1409 is cut in sizes 16 and 18 years, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure.

1410—Most any American bride would be proud to boast of an informal afternoon dress made like this one piece model. The sleeves are set into deep shaped armholes and the neckline is square. The panels falling below the tunic lend a graceful note to the skirt. The women's and misses' dress pattern No. 1410 is cut in sizes 16 and 18 years, 34, 36, and 40 inches bust measure.

1413—A wedding gown that is suitable for the young spring and summer brides is shown in the illustration. Made of net embroidered with pearls which is draped over a slip of silver cloth. The sleeves are kimono style and the drapings on each side of the front are of fine lace. The women's and misses' dress pattern No. 1413 is cut in size 16 years, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure.

Any or all of the above patterns may be had by sending 10 cents for each and giving the number of pattern and size desired. Address Clotilde, Chicago Tribune.

HERE is the ideal laxative for elderly people who find themselves chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will give you daily elimination in a mild, gentle way without griping, and soon medicines of all kinds can be dispensed with. It is much better than drastic cathartics, salts, mineralo, pills, etc.

WHY I TOLD MY LAST LIE

Why did you tell your last lie? Was that the "easiest way" out or did it get you into a worse fix? Tell what happened and how you felt about it. Perhaps you told what wasn't true to help somebody else out of a difficulty. Tell what impelled you to do it. Address your letter to Lie Contest Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

Same Old Alibi.

Ananias, wise old bird,
Lived in happy days gone by;
Said he: "Truth's o. f., absurd,
Lemme show you how to lie."

Many years have passed since then,
His disciples now are rife;
But I ask you, fellow men,
Did old A. possess a wife?

Tother night I phoned my mate,
Sprung that same old alibi;
"Won't be home, m' dear, till late,
Business session, hon'—Goo' by."

Ananias, I'm in doubt,
Wives! How can men lie to them,
When the poker chips fall out
On the floor at 2 a. m.?

M. E. S.

Two of a Kind.

My friend Maude is so boastful I have fallen into the habit of meeting every one of her big stories with one of my own.

Recently she bragged about a rich cousin who was to entertain her downtown at lunch on a certain day. I declared a wealthy friend was to show me like attention the same day. When that day came I went downtown shopping. Wanting an inexpensive lunch, I went to a cafeteria, and it chanced that I carried my tray to a table where sat—Maude.

We had lied to each other.

C. K. M.

Too Many Suitors.

My younger sister had many admirers and was perhaps a little selfish in consequence of so much attention. On one occasion she had promised to attend a good play on a certain night with Dick, who called frequently. Unexpectedly a young man she had met the summer before had business in our city and looked her up.

His time was limited and sister, taking him into the library, whispered to me, "Tell Dick when he comes that I'm ill."

When the bell rang I nerved myself for the ordeal. Dick expressed his regrets and then remembering that he had left a book he needed, offered to get it himself. Before I could intervene he opened the door of the library. It's hard to say who felt worse.

He thoughtfully moved to the street entrance and, pausing for a moment, said to me, "I wonder if you are in the habit of treating every one in this way?"

He never gave my sister an opportunity to exonerate me to any extent and she said she would not write to him, as the situation was bad enough without putting it in black and white.

I will try anything once, and I'll admit I am now truthful from choice.

T. A. R.

The Kinder Way.

I despise a mean lie, but there are instances when one's good judgment tells us the kinder way is to evade the truth. Many times, too, we profit less by so doing, which proves the motive an unselfish one. For instance:

I received a Christmas gift by parcel post, a beautiful ornament, broken in fifty pieces. The package was not insured, marked fragile, or properly wrapped to insure against breakage, which surprised me. But I thought these details might have been left to the care of a maid, who had overlooked them.

I was puzzled what to say when acknowledging the gift, as the sender was a woman of considerable means and would, if I told her its condition, perhaps feel that she should send me a duplicate at once; and, too, a feeling of rebuke might rankle in her mind. So I evaded the truth, as she would be so much happier. I decided if she visited my home before next Christmas and missed the gift, I wouldn't feel such a hesitancy of telling her.

So I wrote and acknowledged the lovely gift. "I had always wanted one like it, and was so delighted." I didn't tell her how I fairly groaned and almost cried over it.

I think I followed the right course. Do you?

HEALING CREAM QUICKEST RELIEF FOR HEAD COLDS

Colds and catarrh yield like magic to soothing, healing, antiseptic cream that penetrates through every air passage and relieves swollen, inflamed membranes of nose and throat. Your clogged nostrils open right up and you can breathe freely. Hawking and snuffling stop. Don't stay stuffed up and miserable.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist. Apply a little in the nostrils and get instant relief. Millions endorse this remedy known for more than fifty years.

Cream Balm Co., New York City

If Hair is Turning Gray, use Sage Tea

YOU can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

There's Real Economy in Electric Vacuum Cleaning

THERE are few household possessions in which the housewife takes greater pride and pleasure than in her rugs or carpets.

Her investment in them is frequently very considerable and in itself sufficient to dictate their careful preservation.

The fact that germ-laden dust, dirt and litter finds its way first into these floor coverings, to shorten their life and create unsanitary, unhealthy conditions, makes imperative their frequent, thorough cleaning.

Beating, sweeping or shaking the old way cannot remove more than the surface dirt, while it may break the warp and crush the nap.

Only electric cleaning removes all the deeply imbedded germ-bearing dirt, while whisking away all surface lint and litter.

Because it actually prolongs the life of prized possessions, it is true economy to buy an electric vacuum cleaner. And it costs but a few pennies a week to use it.

A convincing demonstration can be made in your own home by your dealer or lighting company.

Take any rug that has been "thoroughly broom swept" and then go over it with the electric vacuum cleaner. You'll be astonished at the amount of grit, dirt and foreign matter brought to light and delighted to see how electric cleaning restores the crushed nap and brings out fresh and clean the original colorings.

Savings, not earnings, are the measure of financial success. Time and labor saved are money saved. Proper care of rugs and draperies means money saved. 16,000,000 people throughout the country have found it to be a real investment to have electricity in their homes. Your savings with an electric vacuum cleaner will help you join this army of investors, and the money you save will pay or help to pay your light and power bills.

Banish Dirt and Dust the Electric Vacuum Cleaner Way

The electric vacuum cleaner enables you to clean prized hangings, curtains, drapes without removing them—saving money, time and disagreeable labor.

He won't try to see your face if your hair is gray

Keep Its Color Natural

Gray hair prevents interest and does you an injustice, for it adds 10 years to your age. It is a handicap, socially or in business, for this is the age of youth.

But—graying hair can be restored, easily, safely and surely—restored to its original becoming color. The process is simple, the method reliable. Results are certain.

You be the judge

Mail the coupon for the free patented trial kit of Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer offered in this advertisement. Test as directed on a single lock of hair. Watch the gray disappear and the natural color return.

Note how simple and easy the process—no skill required. You are independent of hair dressers or beauty specialists and can keep your own secret.

In from 4 to 8 days restoration will be complete. All gray streaks vanished—color beautifully even and natural. Then, restore all your hair without delay. You know positively and beyond doubt how to keep your hair its own becoming youthful color the rest of your life. Positively nothing to wash off or rub off.

Don't risk results

Mary T. Goldman's is a tested laboratory product, efficient and reliable. Results are certain. Don't risk the future of your hair experimenting with unknown products, for the result is all too often streaked, discolored hair with no remedy but the slow process of natural growth.

Use Mary T. Goldman's and your natural, evenly colored hair will be a lifelong delight. Test it first—know for yourself that success is certain.

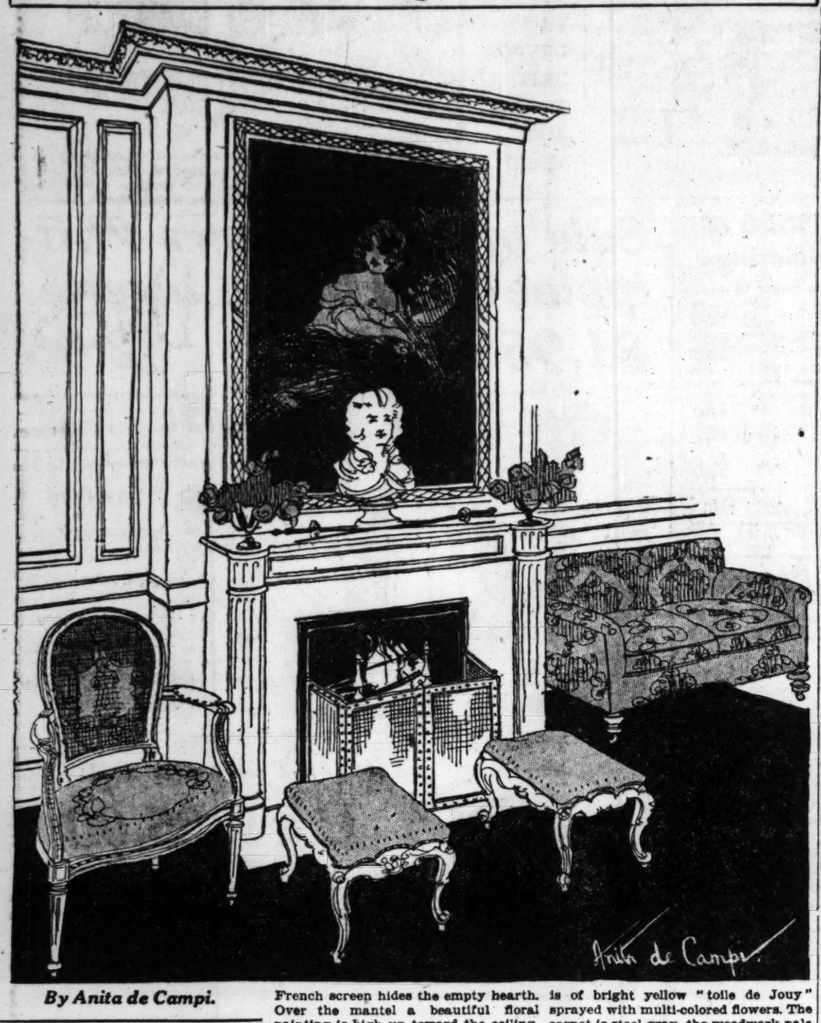
The Boudoir Plays a Double Role



By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

COMES a letter from Paris: "The bedrooms in our small apartments are being furnished more like boudoirs than like sleeping rooms only."

The plan of using the bedroom as a proper place in which to receive chosen friends, both men and women, is gaining in favor, particularly in families who have but one living room and who wish to entertain groups of older and younger people at the same time. Mother may have a little dinner party which may adjourn into her room after dinner while the table is being cleared, and daughter may receive a little crowd of dancers who will not be sorry to have the living room to themselves.

The living room-bedroom must not have the discomfort of seeming so intimate that guests will feel intrusively out of place in it. The secret of successfully equipping it is simple. Furnish it as a small living room should be furnished, with easy chairs, several tables, a bookcase, magazine stand, a sofa (if there is room for it), plenty of lamps at convenient points—and when this is all done introduce an unobtrusive looking daybed. The bed, of whatever sort, absolutely must not be decked in white.

It is surprising to find how well a bedroom can perform its double function without such distinctively bedroom articles as vanity tables, chiffoniers, and bureaus. A commodious closet disposes of the wearing apparel, a little writing table with wall mirror suspended above it gives ample concealment in its upper drawer to toilet perquisites.

Photographs of some modern French living room-bedrooms are attractive enough to be translated into verbal pictures. One that is particularly charming is a paneled room, with a low marble mantel on one side. It contains a real fireplace, not a gas log. When the fire is not burning a little French screen hides the empty hearth. Over the mantel a beautiful floral painting is high up toward the ceiling, and below the painting is a mirror. Both are framed in one simple old ivory molding, flat against the wall. A little strip of molding curved slightly upward at the center separates the painting from the mirror. The remainder of the wall is divided into panels. These are filled in with silk in wide bands of light blue and ivory, brocaded with bunches of flowers, after an antique pattern.

In place of a dressing table is an old fashioned wig powdering stand. The lid lifts up and a mirror is on the under side of this. The lights are in the form of silver candlesticks, shaded with rose silk and trimmed with silver lace. A five branch candlestick, fitted for electricity, takes the place of a table lamp. The lights are encircled with a shirred silk shade, open at top and bottom. The silver finial at the center of the candlestick may be seen through the top opening.

Louis XVI. chairs, painted in old ivory and upholstered in dull blue damask, are varied in shape, from the bergère style to the chaise longue, and little armless upright chairs. The floor covering is mole color and the silk gauze curtains are of blue edged with a little quilling of rose. The bed is enameled like the chairs and covered—pillows and all—with blue damask.

Upholstered beds—a trifle wider than ordinary daybeds—are among the French novelties. A bed with walnut frame—Louis XV.—in curved detail has the head and foot board of equal height, upholstered with taut padding of old velour. The boards forming sides are also covered with velour, leaving just a margin of the woodwork uncovered all around. The day cover is of blue velour, and a blue velour down filled bolster crosses the head and foot. The bed is placed sideways to the wall. Thrown carelessly across it is a great square of gray chinchilla fur, lined with blue silk, and a half dozen little silk pillows, in light colors, are tossed on the bed.

The wall covering is striking. It is of bright yellow "toile de Jouy" sprayed with multi-colored flowers. The carpet is steel gray, the woodwork pale yellow, the curtains old gold.

Wall coverings are much more elaborate in France than they are in this country. In an exquisite French room the entire wall is covered with blue faille. A deep cornice of ivory wood connects the ceiling and side wall, and below the cornice, clear around the room, is a ruffle of silver lace. The center chandelier, which is close up to the ceiling, is of crystal beads and prisms.

The double closet has French doors fitted with mirrors cut in small panes. On the floor is an Aubusson carpet. The bed, with low head and foot, has the surface of wood (excepting a narrow outside edge) covered with a padding of blue brocade. The bed is dressed without pillows and has a blue brocade cover with scalloped edge, spread smoothly over, falling almost to the ground.

In another room, all of the angles of the wall are trimmed with upright wood molding. This gives a modified panel effect. A narrow horizontal mirror over the mantel has a delicate painting above it, paneled into the wall. The bed is made exactly the shape of a wood framed davenport, excepting that it is of three-quarter depth. It is upholstered in rust colored velvet, with day cover and bolster pillows to match. At one side is a low threefold screen of ashes-of-roses linen, patterned with flowers and little Japanese figures. The rust color is repeated in a Persian shawl that is thrown over a small table. The chairs, of conventional Louis XVI. shape, are supplemented with several period stools, with little brocaded puffs. Upright, against the back of the daybed, are two dull saffron satin pillows, hand embroidered in silk and chenille.

The accessories of these rooms are feminine and charming. In one is a Watteau fan, framed under glass, in a fan shaped walnut frame. Little triple tables, so convenient to have close at hand and light to lift about, are used. In nearly all of the rooms the coiffure table is identical. It is a small table with the top in three parts, the center part lifting and having a mirror on its under side. The whole thing is much smaller than the dressing table with which we are familiar.

Parisian women may be called extravagant, but they certainly understand the luxury of elegance, and their idea of making the bedroom respond cheerfully to their waking hours, bringing its action into a double rôle, instead of abandoning its beauty to the unconscious hours only, of its occupant, seems to me a practical one, even though carried out in a prodigal fashion. The scheme itself is adaptable to our more conservative handling.

One day Mary and her playmate were coming home from kindergarten.

When they reached Mary's home the playmate said, "Mrs. Smith, I brought Mary home."

Mary replied, "No, she didn't either, mother. She just walked along beside me." M. L. W.

Mary and her mother went to a theater for the first time. When coming downstairs from the balcony mother was a few steps ahead, so Mary remarked, "Mamma, don't hurry so. Can't you see my feet don't know these steps yet?" D. L. A.

Ruth's mother had several visitors for dinner. Consequently the child did not receive as much attention as she liked. She was quiet for a little while, then got up from her chair, rang the bell for the maid, and when she appeared upon the scene she said, "Della bing me everything that's toming at once. I's not doeing to be fordotten adain. I's dot dood manners, but I tan't starve." F. R. D.

My three small neighbors were so dressed up on Sunday I failed to recognize them. I was passing them unnoticed when Jimmie, the youngest, piped: "O, hello, Mr. M.! You didn't know we was us, did you?" I. B. M.

A baby had just arrived at the neighbor's and little sister had been told a beautiful bird had flown up to heaven and brought the baby down to them. She didn't like not being the baby any more and I was trying to tell her how much I'd like to have one, when she exclaimed emphatically, "Well, why don't you let your canary out so he could fly up and get you one?" Margaret had been requested to keep her dog, Rags, from making any noise on account of her grandmother, who was suffering with a headache. When the dog gave a ferocious bark the little girl looked up to the invalid's window and said: "Please excuse Rags, for he saw a cat." E. S.

"And I thought above all things, my skin was clean!"

Occlusia—Banished now, in sixty minutes!

Discovery of a Skin Physic Gives Adults the Clear, Clean Complexion of a Child

SIXTY women in 100 have occlusia (occluded or clogged skin pores). People of scrupulous bodily cleanliness with facial pores swollen with waste matter. Not a pleasant condition to contemplate! Thanks to science it need no longer be tolerated. An element that purges every pore it touches has been found. An English scientist, M. J. McGowan, discovered it.

A magnified view of the human skin before and after a thorough movement of the pores would cause any dainty woman to write this specialist posthaste. If you saw just one of the fifty or more demonstrations I witnessed, you would realize the folly of any effort toward smooth skin texture and colorful complexion without first attending to this thorough cleansing underneath. It all happens in an hour. The newly-found skin laxative acts swiftly. The scientific term for it is Terradermalax. Its action is almost immediate; evacuation of every tiny opening in the skin structure is complete. Indescribable impurities are expelled—all matter—soft or hard—is passed by the pores. Skin is left relieved, relaxed, and glowing pink. The resultant natural color lasts for days.

Any skin specialist will tell you why every youngster's skin is downy-soft and fair—the pores do not become irregular except with years. Occlusia rarely sets in until one is of age. In other words, complexion at 50 can be as perfect as it was at 16 or 18 now that an unfailing aid to evacuation of pores is known.

Another important result from Terradermalax: it makes powdering perfectly harmless. The fine particles which work down into delicate facial pores are carried away with the rest.

Terradermalax is compounded in a clay of exquisite smoothness. Spreading it starts laxation. Put it on face and neck—in a short hour wipe off—and behold a skin and complexion transformed. Clear and colorful to the eye; clean and wholesome beneath. Not a trace of occlusia remains, not a blackhead, pimple, or other unclean accumulation. I have seen positive proof of this at the laboratory where McGowan made his amazing discovery.

Stores cannot handle Terradermalax because the active ingredient is of limited life. The laboratory supplies enough for two months, shipped the day compounded, the label dated. The laboratory fee is only $2.50, and even this small sum may be had back if you are not delighted and astonished with results from but one application. You pay the postman when he brings your jar (unless you prefer to send it in advance). Use the handy form printed here:

Dermatological Laboratories

CASCARETS

For Constipated Bowels, Sick Headache, Upset Stomach, Colds, Bilious Liver

The nicest cathartic-laxative in the world for grown-ups or children is candy-like "Cascarets." One or two tonight will clean your bowels right. By morning all the constipation poison and sour bile will move out—thoroughly! "They work while you sleep." Cascarets will not sicken you like salts, oil, calomel or harsh pills. They physic fully, but never gripe or inconvenience. Ten, twenty-five, fifty-cent boxes at any drug store.

INSPIRED by the keen interest which has been manifested in names, I thought you would be interested in a fortune telling method in which your name is incorporated—and so I devised the following original method for your further entertainment:

Take the full pack of fifty-two cards; select inquisitor's cards according to complexion and sex, as heretofore described, and place same in center of the board. Shuffle and cut with left hand. Spell out inquirer's first name, counting off one card for each letter in it, and place them face up in a row to the right of the inquirer's representative. Then, after shuffling and cutting again, spell out the last name the same way, placing cards in a row to left of inquirer's card.

Should the letters in inquirer's first and last names combined number less than fifteen (Mary Smith, for instance), you are to shuffle the remaining pack and spell out inquirer's mother's first name, a card to a letter, and lay them on table to right, adding them to inquirer's first name cards. If this again is not enough to bring the exposed cards up to fifteen (counting the representative card as one, of course), count out the father's first name, and place to left.

Complete the spelling of a name even if the number goes over fifteen. Ignore middle names entirely. If first and last name equal fifteen or more cards let them stand, as many as are necessary to spell it out complete and read from left to right. But you must have fifteen cards, including representative card, for a reading.

We might take an example: Mary Brown. Mary is fair; therefore, her representative card would be the queen of diamonds. This she lays in center of table. There are four letters in her first name—M-a-r-y—which are spelled out in four cards and placed on right of queen of diamonds. The five letters in her last name—B-r-o-w-n—are spelled, beginning with B placed immediately to left of queen of diamonds. This leaves altogether ten cards on the board. Mary Brown's mother's name is also Mary. Spell that out the same way, placing cards to right of first M-a-r-y cards laid out. This totals fourteen only, so she will have to add her father's first name which we will say is Patrick (once the name is begun it must be spelled out in its entirety).

These cards are laid out in order to the left of inquirer's own last name cards. In this particular instance, there are twenty-one cards laid out after spelling father's name out in full. Then the reading is begun from left to right.

The number of cards exposed for reading will vary with almost every inquirer, which will add considerable zest to the feature. And, naturally, a more intimate connection between the inquirer and her fortune is gained by way of her name.

Use the following meanings of cards for the reading:

HEARTS:
Ace—A letter from one you think highly of.
King—A fair man comes to woo; if woman inquirer. A fair man friend will marry, if man is inquirer.
Queen—A blonde woman is on mischief bent.
Jack—A fair man brings a gift.
Ten—You're going to be made happy by news.
Nine—Money coming.
Eight—Going to be in jolly company.
Seven—Watch out for false friend.
Six—You are going to be asked to lend money.
Five—You are going to have jealous pangs.
Four—You are going to meet hard hearted person.
Three—Disappointment, for which you have yourself to blame.
Two—Success, if you use great judgment at the moment.

CLUBS:
Ace—You will stop worrying over that anxiety of yours.
King—A dark man who brings an honest affection.
Queen—A dark woman of whom you must be suspicious.
Jack—A jealous rival or suitor.
Ten—The loss of some one near and dear.
Nine—You are going to hurt some one deeply.
Eight—Beware of that speculation.
Seven—Debts are going to confront you.
Six—You are going to be sorely tempted.
Five—Temporary financial embarrassment.
Four—A marriage.
Three—Disappointment.
Two—A second marriage.

DIAMONDS:
Ace—A letter bearing news that is disappointing.
King—A fair man, amorous and jealous.
Queen—You will become infatuated with a light person.
Jack—An imposition by friend or relative.
Ten—Financial gain.
Nine—Warning to be constant.
Eight—Get mixed up in gossip.
Seven—Trouble with mate or sweetheart.
Six—A late in life marriage.
Five—Hear about an old sweetheart.
Four—False friend.
Three—Legal difficulties; quarrels.
Two—An elopement which perturbs you.

SPADES:
Ace—Victim of unhappy circumstances.
King—A dark man with a proposition.
Queen—Beware a dark woman.
Jack—A dark man is thinking about you.
Ten—Tears; sorrow.
Nine—A trip; change.
Eight—Short illness.
Seven—Trouble; worries.
Six—Return of money loaned.
Five—Reputation in jeopardy.
Four—Travels.
Three—News of a birth.
Two—A quarrel with your loved one.

An Ill-Timed Plea.

It was our custom to take tea each Sunday evening with father and mother, who lived in the same town, a short car ride distance from us. To amuse the children, Billy and Dorothy, and also because the evenings were sometimes a little chilly on our return home, we occasionally suggested a little race from the end of the street, where the car stopped, to our house, half a block away.

Father would take Billy's hand and I would take Dot's, and then we would run. Sometimes Dot and I would win if we could manage a good start, but usually daddy and Billy were the winners. This fact seemed to worry Dorothy quite a bit, not so much on her own account as on mine. She seemed to feel that I was hurt, if not disgraced, in some way, by being so frequently beaten in our little game, and evidently decided to take things into her own hands.

Imagine therefore my surprise when, as we stepped into a crowded car one Sunday evening, she piped up in the clearest and yet the most pleading voice possible, "O, daddy, please don't beat mother tonight when we get home like you did last Sunday night."

G. F. C.

Via the Freight Route.

My husband is away from home a great deal, and I am always anxious for his return and meet him at the station. One afternoon I started for the station, walking down the track. A long freight train came along and obstructed my way. As it moved slowly I decided to catch a free ride. I had just scrambled up when the train began to speed and when we reached the station I was unable to alight.

Several people who knew me were standing there and laughed when they saw me. I was carried a mile out into the country, then the freight began to back into town again.

In the meantime the passenger train had arrived and the bus man informed my husband that I had left town on the last freight. As we passed the station the second time we were going so fast I could just wave to hubby. This time I was taken a mile the other side of town, and as the walking was good I decided to walk home, arriving long after John's arrival. I had to submit to a lot of teasing about my escapade.

J. M.

He Hates to Get Up.

Mine happened in a Pullman down in Virginia. I got on the train late at night, and slept so late that all the other sections of the car were made up while I was still soundly sleeping, facing the aisle, my head resting on my hand. Incidentally, I wish to say I weigh 280 pounds.

A woman occupied the upper. Evidently she was unaccustomed to the ways of travel, for when she was ready to rise, instead of calling the porter and having him bring the ladder, she came down inside the curtain, waking me so suddenly that I made a grab and caught her by the ankle.

She screamed and fell into the aisle, taking the curtains with her, and there my fairy form lay exposed. I grabbed my belongings, draped a blanket over my shoulders, and went to the dressing room as fast as I could, the woman going the other way with the curtain around her.

Spring Fashion Exhibit on Living Models

Two Performances Daily
10:30 A. M. and 2:00 P. M.—Music accompanying

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, March 13, 14, 15, 16

Authoritative styles for women, misses and children

The L. Klein Fashion Exhibit is looked upon by hundreds of well-dressed women as an occasion presenting the most opportune time for laying aside the heavier things of winter's fashioning for the lighter, lovelier modes of spring. The new season has its beginning in this important fashion show, so it will be well worth attending, whether one is interested to the extent of choosing, or merely for the purpose of being informed.

Dresses—Wraps—Coats—Suits—Blouses—Millinery

Ninety different models will be displayed at morning and afternoon performances—each one including those pictured above, a master creation from our own regular stock. Typical of the styles to be presented are the following numbers from our program:

Callot afternoon frock of white canton crepe with broad stripe of beautifully designed braid running from throat to hem line and caught at the waist by a girdle of heavy jet. 49.50.

A striking dinner frock of beaded Roshanara crepe in apricot. 89.50.

Milgrim suit of navy Poiret twill elaborately braided, with a tuxedo closing; embellished with wide silk fringed sash. $65.

Lanvin dinner gown of coral canton crepe with heavy gold beading and beaded girdle. $115.

Voluminous cape of chiffon broadcloth in black, with an allover motif of tinsel embroidery. Lined with gray canton crepe. $125.

Handsome reversible cape of gold and black crepe knit weave, with silk fringed hem and tie sash. 79.50.

Large Italian Milan braid hat, combined with taffeta and trimmed with glycerine ostrich. $20.

Medium and large size hats of maline and taffeta, smartly trimmed with flowers. $18.

There are modes for every occasion—for the street, for afternoon, for sports—garments of such attractive style that they achieve distinction in dress.

MEN'S FASHIONS

Stout Man Dressed with Good Judgment. The Correctly Dressed Thin Man. Notice How Broad This Man Looks. His Clothes Make Him Look Taller.

By A. T. Gallico.

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

IT'S A QUESTION OF LINES.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Why is it that when you look at the two men in the foreground of the illustration they give you the appearance of using better judgment in their dressing than those in the background? The figures in the drawing represent two short, stout and two tall, thin men. The two men in the foreground, one short and one tall, realizing that their size is out of proportion, according to the standard of the perfect men, have successfully offset their defects, while those in the back have either not put a thought to it or have tried and failed.

An analysis of the right and wrong in the dress of these four men may prove interesting and useful. I take a short fat man and a tall thin man because they are the two extremes and will more clearly illustrate the points to be brought out. A tall fat man and a short thin man are more in proportion, and have, therefore, an easier problem.

The whole question is mostly a matter of lines. In the case of the stout man long, vertical lines should be sought, while with the thin man the reverse is true. If the two men in the background of the drawing could change clothes the result would be, imagining that the suits were their respective sizes, correct for both of them, for what is wrong for the stout is usually right for the thin.

Looking carefully at the picture, we see that the short man in the back has on a double breasted sack coat with a long lapel and that he wears it buttoned. Why is this wrong? In the first place, a double breasted coat means a double row of buttons, which seems to accentuate the width of the man's chest. If he wears a single breasted coat and leaves it unbuttoned the mass of the front is broken up. You will notice that the coat on the stout man I call correctly dressed has short lapels. This makes a long line from the bottom of the lapel to the bottom of the coat, and as long lines are what we are after in this man's case the long roll collar is not as good. Also, a short lapel enables the coat to have three or four buttons, which lengthens the line, for the eye, traveling from one button to another, finds more distance than there actually is.

The stout man should pay attention to the fit of his suit and avoid baggishness by wearing it snug. A dark color does much to increase the effect of slightness. Also, as in the case of the suit on the well dressed stout, a striped material—narrow stripes, of course—is extremely helpful in producing vertical lines and making one appear taller. The worst thing to do is to wear a suit with a checked pattern.

The thin man, on the other hand, should assume that which our friend the stout is to discard. Instead of a tight fitting coat like the tall chap in the background he should wear a loose one and avoid a waist line. The fuller coat will tend to fill him out. In place of the short lapel recommended for his corpulent companion let him have a long roll to break up the lankiness of his figure and give him a squattier appearance. Two buttons are quite sufficient, or at the most three. He can wear the double breasted model to great advantage in order to widen his chest. He should avoid striped materials, but checked patterns are good. For the thin man whose length is more in his legs than from the waist up a longer coat is suggested.

Let us return to the fat man and see what collar and tie and shirt he is wearing. Since he has a rather thick neck, the man in the foreground is wearing rightly a wing collar. If he wears a turnover collar it must be low, as a high collar sets off the heavy neck too much and a low collar usually has a wide spread. But if he gets a turnover which closes in front, and with quite long points, he can wear it all right. A wing collar for him should have a generous opening to leave the neck free. A narrow four in hand tie is recommended, as a bow tie adds to the wide proportions. A four-in-hand offsets the straight across line.

As for the thin man, we find the incorrectly dressed one in too loose a collar, which is low and with straight point. He ought to have a close fitting one, a high turnover with a wide front spread. If he wants especially to wear a wing, and in fact he has to when he is in evening dress, he should wear one with a small opening. For him a bow tie is best, as it lends width. Should he wish a four-in-hand, it should be quite full.

Shirts for the stout man should never be horizontally striped, for this increases his squattiness. Vertical stripes or a solid color or plain white will suit him best. The thin man can wear a figured shirt and horizontal stripes if he wishes, but should keep away from vertical stripes.

That First Love Affair

"Puppy love, calf love"—
That is what the older folk unfeelingly call the first golden love affair of the boy and the girl. But to youth it is a serious matter. Sometimes it shapes lives. Sometimes it deepens into tragedy. But most of the time it is just a roaring comedy of the teens—a comedy that will bear telling now that its principal actors are older, with perhaps a bit of frost in the hair.

What was your "puppy love" affair? Can you tell it now without a wrench of the heart—with a laugh, say? If so—

The Tribune will pay $5 for each story published on "My 'Puppy Love' Story." Write on one side of the paper and make your story brief. Address Puppy Love Editor The Tribune, Chicago.

PLANS OF CHILDHOOD.

AT the tender age of 5 the object of my affection was the little boy next door. Because I was too young to go to school and because Joe was delicate, and being kept out of school, we sought each other's society. My sister's pet cat, Ione, was the third party in our plays, and furnished the daily game of funeral. Ione was put into a shoe box, for a coffin, and buried in Joe's sand pile, while Joe and I, as chief mourners, wept imaginary tears over the burial of our beloved child. Then the box was taken out of the sand pile and Ione liberated from prison for that day. Every morning, with the black cat under my arm, I went across the driveway into Joe's yard to play. True, our yard was larger, but his sand pile was much more interesting.

So completely blissful were we in our companionship that we thought it would be nice to get married and have a house all of our own. But our elders discouraged us in our plans, so we had to content ourselves with just playing with each other and the cat.

As time went on I attended a private school for girls, and Joe went to public school. But we still were boon companions, and told each other all our joys and sorrows. I think I was about 10 when Joe's parents moved into an entirely different part of the city, which put an end to the daily companionship. Gradually we lost sight of each other, but neither of us ever forgot our early plans to get married and have a house of our own.

When Joe was about 16 his family moved back into the old neighborhood. Of course, we saw each other more or less frequently, but we had reached the years of self-consciousness and were inclined to be shy in each other's presence, so we really didn't see much of each other.

One day when I was passing his home some one tapped on the window. 'Twas Joe, looking pale and weak, all bundled up in blankets, sitting propped up in a big chair. I went in to see what was the matter, and found him recovering from a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism, anxious to be entertained.

I made frequent visits to him after that, trying to bring a little of the outside world in to cheer him up. But in about three weeks he had a relapse and never recovered. Then I visited him daily so long as they allowed him to have company, and it was during my last visit that he took off a ring he was wearing and gave it to me as a keepsake.

He died in less than a week.

THE POTTERS

ILLUSTRATIONS —BY— J.H.STRIEBEL

By J. P. McEvoy

PROLOGUE.

Ma Potter isn't feeling so chipper these days . . . she has had a hard winter, what with Mamie's love affair and Red Miller around the house and underfoot all hours of the day and night . . . and Bill rigging up his wireless outfits in the living room and Pa groaning and moaning around with his gymnasium exercises and the Baby being just plain baby all over the place . . . yes, Ma has had a hard winter, and the family doctor has just told her that what she should do is go to some nice quiet hospital for a good rest . . . he didn't laugh when he said it, either, which shows what wonderful self-control these doctors have.

Scene I.—Private Room, St. Anaesthetic's Hospital.

The modern city hospital should be strategically located on at least one boulevard—if possible at the intersection of two busy ones. The ideal site, however, is one with boulevards on at least two sides, a street car line on the third side, and an interurban railroad in the rear . . . this gives an opportunity to erect "Silence—Hospital Zone" signs along the boulevard, to the huge amusement of the motorists . . . by rare good fortune Ma Potter was given a nice room on the corner of the two busiest streets in the city. . . .

NURSE (coming in and turning off light):
Turn right over and have a good sleep. Don't let anything disturb you.

AUTO: WA-HOO, WA-HOO, WA-HOO!

STREET CAR (flat wheel):
BLAM-BLAM-BLAM-BLAM-BLAM-BLAM!

MA (timidly . . . all these stiffly starched nurses have her scared to death):
Isn't it just a bit noisy here?

NURSE (hollowly):
O, not at all . . . you imagine it, dear.

VOICES (on street):
Hey, where d'ye t'ink yer goin', huh?
'Smatter wi' yu?
'Smatter wi' me? 'Smatter wi' yu?
Doncha gi' me none o' yer lip.
G'wan, g'wan!
An' I says to him, ya don't get away wi' enny o' that stuff wi' me, see? An' he says, I don't, eh? An' I says jus' like that, I says, no yu don't, see?
An' then wat did he say then?
An' then he says, well . . .

MA (several hours later . . . to herself):
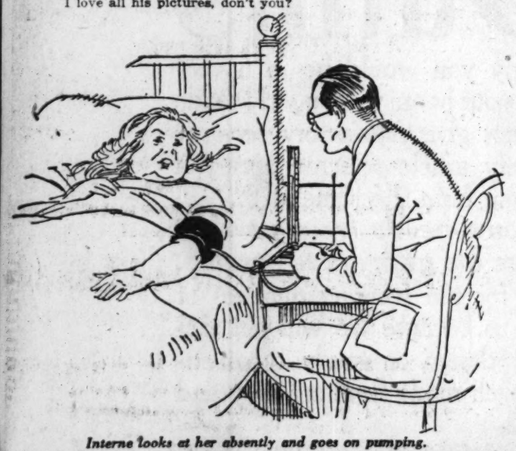
I wish to goodness I could sleep.

FROM THE STREET:
CLANG! CLANG! CLANG! HEY, GET OFF THA TRACK, WILL YA? GET OFF YOURSELF! HOW D'YE GET THAT WAY? CLANG! CLANG! CLANG! BAMMMMMM! I TOLD YA, DIDN'T I? SEE WHAT YA DONE? YA BLUB-BLUB-BLANK-BLANK!
Wasn't that just wonderful?
Isn't he precious? So masterful!
I love all his pictures, don't you?



Interne looks at her absently and goes on pumping.

Didn't you just adore him in "The Sheik"? . . . so . . . so masterful . . .
Say, if Clarence was only like that . . . O girl!

MA (tossing and tumbling):
When am I going to get some sleep?

ADJOINING ROOM (an accident case just brought in):
Oh-h-h-h-h-h, Oh-h-h-h-h!
Looks like we'd have to operate him.
Yeh, that leg'll have to come off.
How about the other one?
Maybe we can save it . . . I don't know . . . we'll see.

FROM THE STREET (one of those lads who believe that home is the place where, when everything else is closed, they've got to take you in—singing):
Tuck me to sleep in my old Tucky home.

(Stops outside of window and serenades Ma.)

MA (about to perish for lack of sleep):
How am I going to get some sleep?

FROM THE STREET (singing but not off the key, much):
I ain't had a bit of rest
Since I left my mammy's nest . . .
Tra la la (forgot the words)
In my mammy's arms.

MA (wildly, to her pillow):
O, if I could only get some sleep!

(And so, as they say in the movies, night creeps across the sky, and lo! in the east the rosy fingered dawn tears aside the veil of a new day . . . at sunrise every soul is born again.)

Scene II.—Same Room.

(It is 5 a. m., and Ma has just succeeded in dosing off . . . enter Interne, the first of an interminable series of Internes.)

INTERNE (shaking Ma):
Wake up . . . wake up . . . open your mouth.

(Ma, stupefied, opens her mouth, and Interne jams thermometer into it.)

INTERNE:
Hold it.

(Goes out and leaves Ma with mouth full of thermometer, afraid to breathe . . . meanwhile hears Interne telling story to nurse in hall . . . a long story, during which he apparently forgets all about Ma . . . finally comes in laughing hilariously, takes thermometer out of Ma's mouth, looks at it rather absently, and goes away still laughing . . . by tremendous effort Ma dozes off again, just in time to be awakened by crisp, businesslike nurse with huge pad of paper and enormous fountain pen . . . makes out clinical history of case, together with complete history of all of Ma's past and present ailments, which Ma gives with great detail . . . Ma especially eloquent on the last illnesses of her family . . . nurse finally runs out of questions or paper or ink or something and goes away . . . Ma dozes off again for a few minutes, when a new nurse enters, this time with a tray.)

NURSE: Hope you had a pleasant night—
Brought you up a little bite.

(Little is good . . . glass of weak tea and a roll . . . one of those test breakfasts . . . they needn't have got up so early to get that ready.)

INTERNE (bustling in with needle and Tallquist scale):
A little blood for the blood test;
A little blood for the blood test.

(Sticks needle into Ma's ear . . . blots up drop of blood and hurries out with immense activity . . . almost runs into another interne coming in with blood pressure machine . . . gay Interne sets it up with great glee, wraps band around Ma's arm, and starts pumping madly, humming under his breath, "Granny, You Are My Mammy's Mammy.")

MA (piteously):
Ouch, you hurt . . . go on away . . .
I want to get some sleep today.

(Interne looks at her absently and goes on pumping . . . changes tune to "Ain't We Got Fun" and pumps still faster . . . finally stops, reads scale hurriedly, wipes up his machine, and goes away: "In the meantime, in between time, ain't we got fun?")

MA (resolutely puts pillow over her head and tries to go back to sleep):
Maybe the nurses know what's best.
But gosh, I wish they'd let me rest.

"I only came here for a rest, you know."

1ST VOICE IN HALL:
How long ago did you give her the test breakfast?

2D VOICE IN HALL:
About an hour ago.

1ST VOICE IN HALL:
Good. We'll go in and take it back again. . . .
Ha! Ha!

(Enter Nurse and Interne . . . shake Ma until she wakes up, ram tube down her throat, and pump out test breakfast . . . exit laughingly.)

MA (all the sleep shaken out of her):
I wish to the world they'd let me be.
What are they trying to do to me?

(Enter Attending Physician, with admiring retinue of assistants, nurses, internes, et cetera . . . asks Ma all the questions on chart and a whole lot more he thinks up on the spot . . . orders nurses and internes around . . . calls in Eye Specialist, Nose and Throat Specialist, Heart Specialist . . . have group consultation over Ma, accompanied by thorough examination . . . shine lights into her nose and ears, poke her in the back, thump her on the chest . . . maul her generally and then go out shaking their heads.)

Scene III.—The Plot Thickens.

1ST VOICE IN HALL:
Where did you put her?

2D VOICE IN HALL:
In there.

1ST VOICE IN HALL:
She hadn't orter go in there. Snake her out and put her in a six bed ward until there's another room empty.

2D VOICE IN HALL:
Gee, why don't they tell a feller right the first time?

(Enter two internes with trick truck—transfer Ma from bed on to it and kite down the hall with her, barely escaping collision with one coming opposite way . . . Ma finds herself in six bed ward . . . young man about to become a father dashes in, wringing hands.)

YOUNG MAN:
Wattle I do! Wattle I do!

INTERNE (gravely):
Calm yourself. You're in good hands. We haven't lost a father yet.

(Patient in bed next to Ma is served an enormous breakfast . . . Ma's digestive organs hold a massmeeting to protest . . . O, for the good old bacon and eggs at home, and the oatmeal with cream, and the buttered toast! . . . Ma's eyes fill with tears as she thinks of it.)

1ST VOICE IN HALL:
Where did you put her?

2D VOICE IN HALL:
In there.

1ST VOICE IN HALL:
Well, snake her out. They're going to operate her down in the clinic.

(Enter two internes and a couple of nurses . . . nurses back Ma into short jacket, wrap her in blanket and sheet, put her on trick truck, and off they go to the clinic.)

MA (thoroughly aroused):
Is this the way to treat a guest?
I came in here to get a rest.

NURSE (with professional calm . . . she should worry; they're not going to do anything to her):
Don't you worry . . . they'll soon be through.
And you'll be all right in a week or two.

MA (desperately):
I'm all right now . . . I'm only a guest.
All I need is a little rest.

(Internes roll Ma into operating room . . . seats rise on all sides like amphitheater around operating table on which Ma is laid . . . hundreds—it seems to Ma—of gaping young men are sitting there watching to see what the doctors are going to do to her.)

MA (struggling):
There's some mistake . . . here, let me go.
I only came here for a rest, you know.

NURSE: Come, come, it's over in a minute or so.

MA (despairingly):
But I'm all right . . . I wanna go!

(Starts to blubber . . . Doctor soothes her . . . well, well, there must be some mistake . . . sure enough, there is . . . Ma is taken back to her bed in the ward . . . demands her clothes, and finally gets them . . . has her temperature and blood pressure taken again, however, before she can get out . . . calls taxi at door, falls into it, and remains in semi-comatose state until she reaches home . . . barely able to crawl out of cab, creep up to her flat, and stagger into bed, where she stays for three days to recover from her rest in the hospital.)

"O, for the good old bacon and eggs at home."

MA (wearily):
Home sweet home is certainly best—
And I went to that place to get a rest!

(And that's that—until next Sunday.)

Is Marriage a Failure?

Why do so many marriages go wrong? What are the underlying causes of happy marriages? Are there any happy marriages? What is the matter, if anything, with marriage, the institution?

W. L. George, the English novelist, investigated 150 marriages. One hundred and sixteen cases he eliminated as unsuccessful; in five cases the husband was unfaithful; in ten it was the wife; the husband disliked the wife in three cases and in seven it was the wife who did the disliking. Only nine marriages, Mr. George says, were "apparently successful." "Marriage," he adds, "is on its trial before a hesitating jury."

Look over the marriages you know yourself. How many are successes; how many are failures? And why?

The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published on the question: Marriage—what do you think of it? Address Marriage Editor The Sunday Tribune.

Says Forbearance Pays.

Here's one who says it isn't. And after fifteen years of married life I think it is true. In the first place my husband and I when we married violated several of the rules laid down for happiness—namely: I married him in the face of great family opposition; secondly, I retained my position for five years after that; and third, during those five years I maintained a regular home, not a kitchenette one. Each of these objections has been surmounted and we are still able to say we are happily married, and mean it. We have no difficulty with the money question for we have joint accounts and I think this leads each one to play fair. We have a lovely home and I am proud to look back and think I had a hand in helping to pay for it. It takes a little forebearance on the part of each to bring all this about, but it is worth while. S. A. S.

Where Her Time Goes.

"Don't be a slacker," says G. B. I want to argue about that, and over the oft told advice to wives about dolling up.

Mornings for mothers are one grand rush getting the youngsters out to school. Friend Husband often stays in bed; he doesn't have to help in the daily operation of tucking underwear into stocking legs, brushing gundry rebellious locks, or scrubbing Willie's neck. "Go to mother," says he, "I want to sleep."

Mother hasn't much time to marcel her hair or powder her nose until the troop of future citizens is off to school, duly inspected. Then baby gets his bath; he may stay clean for ten minutes after he's dressed, but you never can tell. He may spill the ink into his lap or crawl into the coal bin.

The dishes and beds now await mother; she hasn't even time to look into a mirror. She pinned her hair in a knot at the back of her head when she jumped out of bed, and she's been jumping ever since. I'll wager, too, that she isn't over-supplied with afternoon gowns or hats. There are too many shoes and mittens to buy; the children are always taken care of first.

And now father's home for dinner. Mother must be immaculate and in the best of humor; the roast should be done to a turn, and dinner served one minute after daddy's arrival. No, mother can't compete with the flapper's looks. She looked like sweet sixteen once, before she signed the life lease with hubby. She took him for better or for worse, and doesn't complain if he needs a shave or if he begins to get bald or gray.

Did you ever hear of father dolling up for mother? He jumps into a smoking jacket and slippers and into the evening paper as soon as dinner is over. Mother begins to quell the riot and escort the children to bed; she may have time later to darn stockings—who knows? She probably wishes she could take tomorrow off and spend it in a beauty parlor; go to a matinee perhaps, and out to dinner. Just for a change. But no such luck. M. H.

"PIGTAILS"—By Mildred Burleigh.

"Scrap of Paper" Attitude.

Happiness in marriage depends upon the state of mind of either husband or wife. A recognition of the fundamental proposition that "all men" (and women are supposedly included in this category) "are created free and equal" throughout the marital relation, will do much to obviate the altogether too frequently present animosities and altercations between man and wife. A marriage license and a vow now enjoy much the same reputation that the famous scrap of paper of great war origin enjoys. It is growing to be human nature to violate treaties and vows. Why? Because the one or the other party to the compact forgets that marriage aims at equality.

Either the man thinks: "I am too good for her," or she thinks: "I don't get enough out of him," and so forth ad infinitum.

Instead of turning differences between man and wife into despair, gloom, and rancor, why not try to reach an understanding; it does not need a quarrel or harsh language to do that. It requires neither pen nor sword to come to terms, to common sense. Let men and women practice a little more of faith, hope, and charity, and watch them emerge from their errors. R. S.

They Must Be Comrades.

I think the dominant cause of failure in marriage is too much difference in habits, tastes, and character. When I was 16 I married a man of 35. We loved each other, and were happy for a little while.

But I liked to read; he thought books a waste of time. I liked concerts, plays, an occasional movie; he had a mania for burlesque shows. I had been accustomed to some formality in my home life; his people never entertained and he insisted upon visiting them almost every Sunday.

We got on each other's nerves terribly. Finally, after four years of this unhappiness, we separated. In three months he remarried—a girl more his own type—and they seem to be ideally happy. I am making a fair success in business.

The only real happiness in marriage comes from comradeship. Where two people are utterly unsuited to each other, the only remedy is divorce. R. E.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Doris Blake, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

WHEN UNDERSTANDING COMES.

DEAREST: I wish you could have come with me into this garden last night; it lay a shimmering glow of silver in the moonlight, and there was only the fragrance of roses and the sleepy chant of the leaves as they rustled in the caressing winds to tell me of you. And then, it seemed suddenly as if there was nothing in all the world but my dream of you!

Sally, dearest, that other starlit night so long ago came rushing back to me—that night when it seemed our lives had reached their highest, most wonderful summit of existence—when love came to us with outstretched hands. And how we planned our journey together into the mountains; how we planned, dear, that we should find in the heart of the hills the peace we both craved as the contentment of deep, fine, lasting love.

But it was only a dream—and all that is left to me now. The little house in the mountains is alone, and your sweet presence never came there to make it more lovely; its charms have never been complete. Always, when I am there, seeking the peace my heart hungers for—everything seems to mock me, to tell me how I needed you. Dear pal, best that a man ever had, let me come back to you. Tell me that you've understood—that you need me, and tell me you didn't want to send me away! I can still hear the gentle closing of the door, that afternoon—and your whispered last good-by; it was the most tragic gesture in our lives—we did not try to understand.

And now I know much I have need of you. I have forgiven, for love is not love that does not see past the broken gateway to the flowers just beyond; and in forgiving you, my own, has come this great, unfulfilled longing. I have hoped that your days have been filled with as much sunshine as you always radiated, and I have hoped that I might write this, and come to you again. And the garden, with its loveliness, will be ours together; and the sunsets, and starshines, and the little house, and love!

Mother! Your Sick Child is Bilious, Constipated.

Give "California Fig Syrup"

Harmless Laxative for Your Child's Liver and Bowels

Hurry mother! A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If your child is constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, remember a good "physic-laxative" is often all that is necessary.

Children love the "fruity" taste of genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children printed on bottle. Say "California" or you may get an imitation.

SPIEGEL'S SPIEGEL'S

Home Outfits

Can you imagine how unhappy you would be in a very short time if the furnishings of your home were poorly made of inferior materials and did not give satisfactory service? You would want to return every article selected and you would never again buy anything from the same store.

If you purchase your Home-needs from us that will never happen because we guarantee service.

We assume the responsibility for the wearing qualities of the pieces you purchase from us because we will not sacrifice quality construction for design or gaudy ornamentation. We have on display well made furniture only and guarantee every article we sell.

If a home was a temporary affair the quality of its furnishings would not be of such great importance—but a home is a permanent investment created not only with a thought for the immediate present but for the future as well and quality must be considered first. In fact we advise that fewer Home-needs of good quality be bought rather than to fill your home with inferior furniture.

TRULY—WE ARE THE HOME OF HOME OUTFITS

We can furnish a four room home, in any of the popular period designs for $575.

The HOOVER
It BEATS... as it Sweeps as it Cleans

The Hoover has many exclusive features, which one can obtain in no other cleaner. The Hoover cleans by three different processes — beating, electric sweeping, suction. All three are necessary to clean thoroughly. Only the Hoover beats—as it sweeps—as it cleans. There are many other reasons why the Hoover is better.

Announcing Spring Fashions

The new Spring Season of 1922 will be formally ushered in here tomorrow with an unusually comprehensive display of the authentic fashions. The garments on display are the result of a most painstaking search of the Eastern Style markets, and represent, in our judgment, the most desirable merchandise obtainable at the reasonable prices asked.

The very essence of the spring seems to be in these youthful, lovely modes on display. There is Spring in the air, in the grace of flowing lines, in the soft-toned colorings, in the light-heartedness that pervades the store. Both French and American designers are represented. Their creations express the handiwork of the true artist, and they deserve study. It is a real joy even in the mere viewing of such modes.

The Three-Piece Dress

Notable and charming is the three piece dress. Practical as both a dress and complete garment, the combined frock and cape, chic and smart appearing with its long flowing lines in contrasting colors of bodice and skirt and cape is a splendid investment for our present day crowded social engagements. Priced from

29.75 to $175

The Trimmings

Many of the gowns are handsomely beaded with steel or iridescent beads, according to the color of the gown. Some are simply finished with fine silk embroidery or silk braid, many are trimmed with self-material and in contrasting colors. Every garment has its own individual style and charm in the trimmings.

Fashion Opening for 1922

The very essence of the spring seems to be reflected in youthful, lovely models here for this opening display. There is Spring in the air, of soft-toned color, in the mood of flowing lines, in the spirit of life and motion and gay heartedness that pervades the store. Both from French and American designers come creations expressing the work of the true artist; they deserve study, there is real joy even in the mere viewing of such modes.

Even if you are not quite ready to select your new costume, you must be anxious to know just what is new for Spring; just what you will have to choose from; and here in charming and chic models will be found the latest dictates of fashion. These new styles accentuate the attractiveness of American women, as they are a revelation of loveliness and radiant charm.

Millinery Modes

Beautiful indeed, in their variety and charm, are the millinery modes of the springtime season. There are hats for women, hats for every occasion, hats of every shape, cleverly designed and carefully selected, and the most interesting note of all is the use of color in trimmings. There is the large hat, but not exaggeratedly so, the chic hat, and hundreds of shapes, designed by the foremost modistes of Paris and America, to meet every individual requirement. They present a beautiful collection and will undoubtedly delight the eyes of all who see them. Priced from

4.75 to 17.50

For Sport Wear

Many have sports apparel received with prominence from Dame Fashion as the season's vogue. Among the newest and smartest models is that of the 3-piece combination sweater-dress and skirt, a garment for hiking, riding—or golf, with the convenience of making the third piece if desired. The sports dresses in combination of wool and serge are chic and practical. Nor has the two-piece suit, suitable for street or business, lost its place in vogue. Its practicability and economy of line always sway. A unique display is found here, priced from

19.85 to $85

The Evening Gown

Of soft, supple crepe, trimmed throughout with glass and metal beads of unique colorings, some with pleated side draperies which hang in graceful, uneven lengths that accentuate the straight lines and lower waist effects give the formal frock a charming and beautiful appearance. Priced from

29.75 to $195

The Materials

For the suits, tricotine, poiret twill, picotine, tweeds and homespuns command the most attention, while the frocks of georgette, crepe de Chine, the new romaine crepe, and crepe-knit are the season's most popular fabrics.

The Afternoon Frock

For faithful, excellent and versatile service, the afternoon frock with its straight line effects and flowing sleeves is unsurpassed. Trimmed with beads and panel draperies, in charming, fascinating colors, it meets the most fastidious requirements of the smartly attired woman for all informal occasions. The beautiful and decorative under dress of georgette, mostly overshadowed with an overdress of sheen lace and plain georgette gives a most unusual effective grace to these frocks. A display of charming models priced from

24.75 to $125

The Colors

In all the Spring garments a fascinating array of colors and color combinations may be found. The latest subtle shades of periwinkle, rust, canna, henna, navy, tan, sands, brown and the ever popular irresistible black.

SEVEN GOOD REASONS WHY OUR MARCH SALES OF HOUSEFURNISHINGS ARE FAMOUS

Patterns by Clotilde

1273—Woman's house dress. Sizes 36 to 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 36 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

1292—Boy's suit. Sizes 2, 4, and 6 years. Size 4 requires 1 yard of 36 inch material for separate trousers and 1 yard of 36 inch material for a separate long sleeved waist.

1264—Woman's and misses' slip on dress. Sizes 16 years and 36 to 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4½ yards of 32 or 42 inch material or 2⅞ yards of 54 inch material.

How to Use the Patterns

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

THE bib front of pattern No. 1273 is a good feature, and relieves the otherwise plain effect of the dress.

Mercerized cotton poplin is a satisfactory material for an afternoon dress to wear at home, and it comes in many beautiful colors and shades. There are blues, dark and light, tans and greens. Pearl shank buttons that may be removed when the dress is laundered are attractive. Removing them before having the dress laundered will keep them like new.

The pocket laps, cuffs, and collar would look well made from chintz, fine cretonne, or poplin embroidered.

The vest is attached to the right side of the waist and the opening is on the left side of the front.

The skirt is in two pieces, gored on the sides, and waist and skirt are set into the same band. Overcasting is the best finishing for the seams of poplin, and after they are stitched and overcast, turn them towards the front or back, as you prefer, and stitch from the right side, one-quarter or three-eighths of an inch from the seam stitching. This gives a rather tailored finish, and holds the seam edges well in place.

The boy's suit, pattern 1292, is cunning, with the trousers in overall style and the separate waist. There will be ample room for the small boy to stoop, reach up, run, or do anything he may wish—a most important consideration in making children's clothes.

The separate waist buttons down the front; the sleeves may be long or short; the trousers are in two pieces. Two slits are cut on the front and two on the back for the belt, and these should be bound with the suit material, marking for the slits, and basting a strip of the material in place over it, with right sides together, and stitching each side of the marking, about one-eighth inch away, before cutting. Then the cutting is done through the two thicknesses and the material pushed through to the wrong side, letting it show on the right side like a binding. Tiny clips may be necessary where the stitching goes across the ends, so there won't be any puckers. Hem the binding down on the wrong side.

Cotton crêpe or gabardine would be good materials for this suit, and the neck and side openings may be finished with the blanket stitch, and a small squirrel done in outline stitch on each pocket—using, of course, the same colored floss as for the blanket stitch.

One of the silk crêpes would make up attractively by pattern No. 1264. Taffeta is also fashionable, and a little later foulard will be seen a great deal. It is used now for cape linings, sleeves, facings, etc., and is satisfactory and attractive.

The dress is in two pieces—front and back—cut with deep armholes. The pattern shows sleeves in two lengths, also in two widths.

The dress is to be slipped on over the head, and a string sash confines the fullness at a low waist line.

A new idea is to bind the edge of the skirt, and if this is done, two rows of the same braid may be set on around the bottom of the skirt above the binding. Gold or silver braid, or black or colored silk braids are used. The sleeve edges would be treated in the same manner.

There are all sorts of girdles shown, made of beads, metals, etc., and some women will doubtless prefer one of these to the sash made of the dress material. The neck of the dress will be pretty if finished with a wrong side facing.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Seven Children Fatherless.

"I trust you will pardon this intrusion when I tell you the motive which prompts me to write to you. I have been asked by the supervisor of our township to intercede for a poor family of seven children who have been made county charges through illness and misfortune. They are sorely in need of clothing. Will you kindly help the children and their poor mother, who is struggling to keep them together? I have with the aid of neighbors done the bit I could, but my supply of things is exhausted. I will gladly make over any garment that could be used, and it would be much appreciated. N. M. N."

I hope friends as kind as you may be found for this mother and her seven little ones.

Never Thinks of Himself.

"Will you try to get an overcoat for my husband? He keeps the children and me dressed and never thinks of himself. His coat is ten years old and is almost in tatters. I am in the county hospital and would want the coat sent to the house. He does not know I am asking, but I do so want him to have a coat. Mrs. J. P. B."

This request will send some good reader rummaging through his clothes closet for an overcoat he has outgrown, I feel sure.

Prairie Life Is Lonely.

"My husband is an ex-soldier and was wounded. We live in a little shack in the prairie and are lonely and often shut in on account of the bad weather. We have no music. That is why I would be glad if you would send me the address of Mrs. W. S. B., who has a phonograph to give. Mrs. L. G."

If one of my readers has a discarded talking machine, won't she be the happy one to be able to brighten the lives of Mrs. L. G. and her husband?

Book Out of Print.

"I hope you can assist me. I have tried everywhere to find the book "Beyond the Stars," but it is out of print, and I thought perhaps you might be successful in finding a copy for me. E. P."

Will any one who can furnish the book write to me for Mrs. E. P.'s address?

Their Need Is Urgent.

"My husband has been ill for a year and one-half. He did not improve when he came home from the hospital, so he had to go back. I had to sell my furniture. I have six children ranging from 10 years down to a 6 weeks old baby. I would like to know if one of your readers has a baby carriage to give. My little girl next to the baby is only 18 months old and it is hard to take the two out for a little airing. I would also like to know if I could get a dresser or anything to hold clothes in. I would be thankful if I could get those articles. "Mrs. F. D."

I hope assistance may be given this family; their need is urgent.

Instrument for Study.

"Is there some one who has an old phonograph with producer and reproducer. A certain firm about ten years ago manufactured a phonograph so that you could produce your own records, and by using a reproducer needle you could play such records. I am a poor young inventor who needs such an instrument in my study. F. G."

I have registered your request, and will send your address to any one who writes that he can supply the article asked for.

Must Work at Home.

"I am a married man and a rheumatic cripple. I cannot go out to work, but would be able to do some work at home. I wonder if some one among your readers has a small printing outfit I could have? E. W. H."

If I have the good fortune to hear of an available printing outfit, my friend, I shall communicate with you immediately.

To Cheer Invalid.

"My only sister is ill with tuberculosis and has not much longer to live. I want to make her as comfortable as possible and would like to get a back rest and bed table. These gifts would be greatly appreciated. "Mrs. M. M."

It is blessed work to bring cheer to invalids, and I look for a prompt response to Mrs. M. M.'s appeal.

Appeals from Homestead.

"We live on a homestead and this has been such a severe winter I hoped something I could sell would furnish our great need. We expect a baby about March 25. We have two boys, 10 and 12 years. I would be thankful for any little worn garment that some other mother could spare. We live fifteen miles from town and the boys go five miles to school. Thank you. "Mother in Need."

Some one will be only too happy, I know, to respond to this appeal from the homestead for assistance and to provide the needed articles for the little newcomer.

Must Sleep in Tent.

"I am the father of seven children and have had to stop work on account of ill health. I am being treated at a clinic for tuberculosis. The nurse called at my home to make arrangements for sending me to the sanitarium, but after looking over the premises decided I could remain at home if I slept out of doors. I live in the country and have an ideal place to put up a tent, but cannot afford to buy one. My wife is trying to help make the living by taking in washing. I hope I am not asking too much, but a tent would surely be a godsend to me. "A. F. D."

So much reckless spending these days—and necessities far out of the reach of the other half. A little thought, and out of one man's plenty may come a tent for this deserving man. I know it will. We spend recklessly, but are willing to spend sanely when our attention is attracted and our sympathy enlisted.

Mother's Fight Is Brave.

"I am a widow and the mother of four children. I have been in the hospital for the last six months, and had to put the children in a home. I want to bring them home now, and wish that I could get some clothing for them, as they are all greatly in need. I can make things over. The boys' ages are 13, 11, and 9; the little girl is 6. Mrs. L. H."

As brave a fight as this mother is putting up caring for her four children deserves encouragement and help. I hope to be asked for her address.

Request Is Modest.

"Will you please ask in your column if some one of your many kind readers could send me a bath robe? I am in a sanitarium. E. W. B."

This request comes from the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium. I do hope that some one will respond to it soon.

Heat of Red Peppers Stops Rheumatic Pain

Rub on Sore, Stiff Joints and Muscles, and Rheumatism, Lumbago and Pain Vanish—Try It and see!

The penetrating heat of "Red Pepper Rub" will bring almost instant relief from the pains of rheumatism, pleurisy, colds, lumbago, neuritis, backache, strains, sprains, sore muscles and stiff, aching joints.

Penetrating heat immediately frees the blood circulation that carries off the congestion and pain is gone.

Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers. The moment you apply Red Pepper Rub you feel the tingling heat. In three minutes it warms the congested spot through and through.

When you are suffering so you can hardly get around, just get a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub, made from red peppers. It costs little at any drug store. The quickest relief known awaits you. Use it always for cold in chest.

Corns

Lift Right Off with Fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit! A drop of "Freezone" on a sore, touchy corn stops that corn from hurting, then shortly you lift that bothersome corn right out, root and all. No pain, no soreness.

"Freezone" removes hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes and painful calluses on bottom of feet. Truly magic! You'll laugh!

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

HIS LAST VOYAGE.

NEARLY everybody has heard of the unusual superstitions existing among seafaring people—and although the world at large generally smiles at what is often termed "one of those sea yarns," I can vouch for the following story as being bona fide, as it occurred in my own family.

My mother's people, having been seafarers for generations, would not allow any of their family to forego the trade of their forefathers—all were expected to ply the deep. It was a sort of unwritten law existing among them.

My mother had four brothers, all following in the footsteps of their father, except the youngest one, John, who had always refrained from voicing his feelings and stating his abhorrence of the sea, until he became acquainted with Seena, the daughter of an old sea captain, who, singularly, also had a dislike for water. She always sensed danger whenever near the sea.

The two became engaged in due time, and it was not long ere they confessed their mutual dislike of the water, and it was decided to tell their parents. They were finally persuaded to acquiesce in the wishes of the young couple, and plans were laid to set John up in business after one more trip to Brazil. The young people were elated, and it was in the highest of spirits that John set out on his last voyage, which was indeed destined to be his last.

Several weeks later Seena awoke in the middle of the night exclaiming that she saw John drowning and calling for her. Of course everybody claimed that she had a nightmare, but Seena insisted that John was dead.

In due time a dispatch was received that the Albatros, the ship John sailed on, had foundered off the Brazilian coast, and there were no survivors. It had gone down on the same night that Seena had the vision of John calling for her.

She became extremely melancholy, contracted tuberculosis, and survived her betrothed by less than a year.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, and after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in

they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being sweetened to be smooth and palatable.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

Many physicians advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat. Charcoal is also believed to greatly benefit the liver. These lozenges cost but thirty cents a box at drug stores, and you get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets.

KIND: Simple country drama, I reckon.
CLASS: About second. Longer on production than on story.
PHOTOGRAPHY: Fine.
DIRECTION: Plenty good enough for the yarn.
ACTING: Ditto.
STORY: Cinderella theme. Pair of stingy uncles make their niece drudge for them. They want her to marry a fat country jokel. She probably would, only an injured author falls at her doorstep and she drags him in and cares for him until dawn. Her uncles are in town buying her bridal outfit of scrub buckets, brooms, wash tubs, etc., and she is alone with him.

KATHLEEN KIRKHAM.

Looks bad to the town folk.
"Gotta marry her," say the uncles.
Uncles win. Wedding takes place.
"Now that you're an honest woman, you can stay and go on with your work," perpetrate uncles. Husband has idea.
"Not so," says husband. "My wife's nobody's servant."
He takes her home, faithfully promising to annul her—which is the last thing she wants to happen. Beautiful girl who had expected to marry him sort of eggs things on. Wife uses gray matter.
Happy ending.
REMARK: Darrel Foss is sort of limp. Looks like Kathleen Kirkham has changed the color of her hair. Subtitles are stupid. Charles Ogle and Guy Oliver were never meant for cruel relatives. May McAvoy is a sight for sore eyes and, given a chance, can act.
Happy Sunday!

CLOSEUPS

Frank Mayo spent several hours in town last week on his way from coast to coast. He wasn't a bit happy. He says he was misquoted in a certain newspaper, and as a result the world's down on him.

He was quoted as saying that Hollywood should be cleaned up—or burned up—or something, WHICH, he says, he never asserted. There may have been wild parties, he admits, but he never was in any of 'em and never saw anything of the kind. But the picture people think he's done 'em dirt, and they haven't hesitated to let him know it.

FRANK MAYO.
[Freubel Photo.]

Moreover, deplored poor Mr. Mayo, he got in bad with the navy, they having read that he had said the Hollywood folk spent their money "like drunken sailors."

"I've been writing lots of letters," Mr. Mayo said mournfully, "and I'm beginning to get myself squared. I wrote to—" (I forgot who it was, some navy chieftain)—"and got a kind reply in which he said it didn't matter."

This husky star has been in New York. We supposed because he wanted the trip. Circumstances sound like maybe a little birdie told him he'd better hie him to the woods and keep real still for a long, long time!

Here's a query to turn over in your mind:
Would movies be as popular in the United States if, as in Turkey, husband and wife were not permitted to attend them together?
This estimable department would like letters on the subject.

The Hollywood chamber of commerce, in conjunction with the Los Angeles chamber of commerce, plans a motion picture which shall show the world some of the interesting spots of Hollywood. Among these will NOT be the spot where Mabel ate peanuts or the house where Mr. Taylor encountered his mysterious guide to heaven. The object of the film is to reflect some of the sensational printed stories, representing Hollywood as a sink of iniquity."

Yoo hoo, scenario writers! Here's a word of cheer:
Lasky wants good stories suitable for Betty Compson, Gloria Swanson, Dorothy Dalton, Thomas Meighan, Wallace Reid, etc.;
Christie wants stories for two reel comedies containing as much action as five reeler needs;
Campbell Comedies are in the market for two reel comedies featuring children and animals;
Metro wants out of door stories for Bert Lytell and light comedies or comedy dramas for Viola Dana;
Chester Barnett Productions would like stories for Jane Novak. Put some out of doors stuff and plenty of snow scenes in these;
C. L. Chester Productions wants ideas for domestic one reel comedies;
The R. D. Film corporation would like northwest mounted police stuff or other out of door material for all star casts;
Jackie Coogan needs help;
Winther-Reynolds Productions is in the market for two reel comedy dramas with a western atmosphere.
Your humble scribe, upon application and a stamped and self addressed envelope, will furnish the addresses of these companies and stick in the envelope a little tip on scenario writing.

KICK KORNER

Its Object—Objection

C. C. H.: For your Kick Korner may I submit a few "I Wants"?
I want to see a revival of Charlie Chaplin's "Shoulder Arms." The funny ones are coming back to life from time to time, but not this one. I was shouldering arms myself when 'twas first issued and came out after I was retired.

CHARLES CHAPLIN.

I want to see more of that grand old man of the screen, Theodore Roberts.
I want Rex Beach to let somebody produce his stories who knows how, and not have vaseline haired heroes performing Alaskan feats in the sunshiny wilds of New Jersey. Some of them think all they have to do to be a hero engineer is to smoke a pipe.
I want somebody somewhere, sometime, to present a university or college picture without the customary pranks, prevalent, if at all, in Siwash or Podunk academy.
I want orchestra leaders to forget that "Rustiana" and the "Poet and Peasant" ever existed. My neighborhood theater used these at regular intervals with "Variations of Dixie" to fill in and make it worse, cornet solos with all the runs and trills.
I want no distractions when listening to overtures, especially those spotlights on the leader.
I wanted you to quit press agenting Conway Tearle, but Rodolf seems to have supplanted him. Every time you raved about Tearle, that picture was on my black list.

J. A. FAN: There is undoubtedly more than a suspicion extant that the combination in control of the movies is engaged in an attempt to break down law and order; and in this suspicion there is some confirmation in the fact that nearly every comedy and many of the features are based on the infidelity to the marriage contract of one or both parties thereto, or on an illicit relationship between unmarried persons. Also, the fans cannot help but note the efforts made through the movies to nullify the eighteenth amendment. The movies are educational, all right, but what sort of an education is it? And what will it be worth to our children after they get it? Why have so much

BEST SELLERS OF THE AGES

By Eye Witness.

Fourteenth paper—The Autobiography of Benvenuto Cellini.

BENVENUTO IN THE BOOKSHOP.

Mr. SOLLE, on the telephone—(Mr. Solle being the general manager at Kroch's and ever wishful to know a week in advance what next Sunday's book will be. His reason is pure but commercial—purely commercial, as it were.)—And the book for next week? if you please.

EYE W.—The autobiography of Benvenuto Cellini, Mr. Solle.

MR. SOLLE—O, dee-lightful! You know, it's astonishing how that book sells after three and a half centuries. Yes, the average sale with us is three copies a week right through the year. And not in a cheap edition either—the $3.50 one and some of the $8.50. The old villain would be pleased, wouldn't he!

EYE W.—Yes, and wouldn't he brag about it.

AND BENVENUTO IN THE STUDY.

From the pages of this book the Genius of the Renaissance, incarnate in a single personality, beams forth and speaks to us.

JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS.

And metal, under thy hand, O Benvenuto, becomes lace.

PAUL HUBERE.

("Visions et Reflets.")

TALKING once of autobiographies, Mark Twain checked off, as to credibility, four of the great ones and said that "one believes St. Simon and Benvenuto and partly believes the Margravine of Bayreuth" (Frederick the Great's sister), and added there are things in the confession of Rousseau that one must believe.

Thus does Benvenuto Cellini all but head the list made by a perspicacious man—a searching man.

Benvenuto himself said you could believe him—said it in as ingratiating a half page of introduction as you will find in that kind of literature of which his book is a preëminent specimen—"one of the most singular and fascinating books in existence" some very sober speaking authorities on both the Renaissance and literature call it. From the first lines of his book Benvenuto cozens us, just as he cozened popes and an emperor and a king, and whole colleges of cardinals, and trustful women without end.

How sedately Benvenuto begins. On his first page he might be a blessed bishop, or a president emeritus, laying down the burden at 58 with the consciousness of life's work well done. How suave, yet how scrupulous, he is—"All men of whatsoever quality"—but first take a sentence of him in the melodious Tuscan, just to get the music of a work that lay 200 years forgotten in the Florentine archives before it was given to the world—and then came out of dusty oblivion alive and laughing and cozening and piqueing—so alive that it fulfills that first office of a great book: it imparts the sense of life: and so fraught with wild laughter and gusto and joy of achievement that men smile when they revert to it.

"All men of whatsoever quality"—

Tutti gli uomini d'ogni sorte, che hanno fatto qualche cosa che sia virtuosa o si veramente che le virtù somigli, doverieno, essendo veritieri e da bene, di lor propia mano descrivere la loro vita; ma non si doverrebbe cominciare una tal bella impresa prima che passato l'età de' quarant' anni.

And now anglice:

All men of whatsoever quality they be, who have done anything of excellence, or which may properly resemble excellence, ought, if they are persons of truth and honesty, to describe their life with their own hand; but they ought not to attempt so fine an enterprise till they have passed the age of forty. This duty occurs to my own mind, now that I am traveling beyond the term of fifty-eight years, and am in Florence, the city of my birth. Many untoward things I can remember, such as happen to be who live upon our earth; and from those adversities I am now more free than at any previous period of my career—nay, it seems to me that I enjoy greater content of soul and health of body than ever I did in bygone years. I can also bring to mind some pleasant goods and some inestimable evils, which, when I turn my thoughts backward, strike terror in me, and astonishment that I should have reached this age of fifty-eight, wherein, thanks be to God, I am still traveling prosperously forward.

Altogether disarming, is it not. A grave, sweet soul, you would say, a shade garrulous, more than a little vain, but so tender, as witness this about his coming into the world, when his mother, feeling precisely as she did on a similarly interesting occasion, was confident that the child would be a girl:

. . . The midwife, who knew that they were expecting a girl, after she had washed the baby and wrapped it in the fairest white linen, came softly to my Father Giovanni and said: "I am bringing you a fine present such as you did not anticipate." My father, who was a true philosopher, was walking up and down, and answered: "What God gives me is always dear to me"; and when he opened the swaddling clothes he saw with his own eyes the unexpected male child. Joining together the palms of his old hands, he raised them with his eyes to God and said: "Lord, I thank thee with my whole heart; this gift is very dear to me; let him be Welcome." All the persons who were there asked him joyfully what name the child should bear. Giovanni would make no other answer than "Let him be Welcome—Benvenuto"; and so they resolved, and this name was given me at holy baptism, and by it I still am living with the grace of God.

Thus with the benediction of "the old hands" were seventy-one lively years released upon a world that quailed before Benvenuto Cellini when he passed by. Cross him, speak ill of his craftsmanship, choose the wrong word in converse with him, and he became a foaming Mercutio—"And but one word with one of us? Couple it with something; make it a word and a blow." It needs only Benvenuto's book to prove how veritable are Shakespeare's Italian scenes.

Pompeo, a Milanese jeweler, had crossed Benvenuto in some negotiations over work to be done for Pope Clement VII. Let Benvenuto tell it:

When Pompeo had stood there time enough to say two Ave Marias he laughed derisively in my direction; and going off, his fellows also laughed and wagged their heads, with many other insolent gestures. My companions wanted to begin the fray at once; but I told them hotly that I was quite able to conduct my quarrels to an end by myself, and that I had no need of stouter fighters than I was; so that each of them might mind his business.

Left alone, Benvenuto overtakes his man—and that is the end of Pompeo, the Milanese:

Some business or other made him enter the apothecary's shop which stood at the corner of Chiavica, and there he stayed a while transacting it. I had just been told that he had boasted of the insult which he fancied he had put upon me; but be that as it may, it was to his misfortune; for precisely when I came up to the corner, he was leaving the shop, and his bravi had opened their ranks and received him in their midst. I drew a little dagger with a sharpened edge, and breaking the line of his defenders, laid my hands upon his breast so quickly and coolly, that none of them were able to prevent me. Then I aimed to strike him in the face; but fright made him turn his head round; and I stabbed him just beneath the ear. I only gave two blows, for he fell stone dead at the second. I had not meant to kill him; but as the saying goes, blows are not dealt by measure.

Thus in two typical bits from his book you have Benvenuto from the cradle to—other men's graves.

There is no more fantastic and contradictory great man in human annals. He had the tongue of a scorpion and the vanity of a child. He could do almost everything, and he did nothing ill. He was jeweler, engraver, poet, musician, soldier, sculptor, writer, and lover, "and in all," somebody once added, "so truly admirable!" Well, he at least succeeded to admiration in all the rôles, if that is to be admirable. He could make popes laugh and kings listen. He could direct the resistance to a storming party, as he did from the walls of St. Angelo, and he could fabricate ornamental dishes so opulent and so exquisite in their decoration, and so ingenious in their equipment of secret springs which released unsuspected compartments and panels that they are the despair of modern artificers. He excelled in everything he touched, and he tells you so. Sword handles, dies, rings, medals, medallions, buttons, busts, heroic statues, plaques, crucifixes, ewers, coffers, candelarba—he attempted them all and in every attempt he evolved the new, the wonderful, and the exquisite. To this day one of his works gives distinction to the collection of any palace, any museum, so lucky as to possess it. It is so from the Escorial to Windsor castle, from the Palazzo Bargello in Florence to the remote and sequestered Skokloster far to the northwest of Stockholm. To that chateau in the woodland men make a half day's sail to see the shield he fabricated for Charles V., and having seen it account themselves well rewarded. In the Metropolitan museum of New York they have given the center of a noble room to an authentic and resplendent specimen of his work, and it glistens there within a casket of crystal. In our Art institute you may see on the first floor, to the left of the grand staircase as you face it, a copy of the wax model of his Perseus. 'Tis only a copy—in plaster colored to represent bronze—but because it reproduces the first sketch for what ultimately became one of the wonder works of the world, it has a place of honor.

Now the glory of Cellini's book is of another glory than the glory of his triumphs in bronze and gold and gems, but the first is equal to the second. He gives you the whole man—all he devised, thought, suffered—all the splendors he wrought, all the evil he did. These nearly 500 octavo pages are the passionate self-revelation of a bad great man in his loves, broils, intrigues, machinations, murders, sieges, imprisonments, banishments, and journeys, in his fights at inns, in his visions in fever, and in supper parties with "the divine Michael Angelo." He knew papal chambers and kings' cabinets. He could talk at his ease with the emperor of half the world and joke sedately with Francis I. He tells you everything—from how he beat his doxy and model, Caterina, to how he severely admonished the pope in the presence of his nobles. He is brave, shameless, amusing, sapient, and comprehensive. If there is any commandment he did not break it was not for lack of enterprise.

Now, what is the spell of his book? That spell is in its enormous and unflagging vivacity and vividness; in its joy in achievement and in existence. Better, says the world, a whole rogue than half a man. And so it takes Benvenuto to its heart, extenuates everything, chuckles over everything, because here was a puissant and blazing personality.

Next Sunday—Shakespeare's "Hamlet, Prince of Denmark."

Mr. Cohan Thinks the Movies Funny, but He Does Not Think Them Bad

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK, March 11.—[Special.]—Only once in his "Madeleine and the Movies," is George Cohan unkind to the shadow actors. He names one of his characters Violet Hollywood, and the starved Cohan fans in the Gaiety theater give the lady who plays her a laugh she has not acted for. It has not escaped Mr. Cohan, during the period of his exile from the American stage, that the movies have been getting funny. But it does not seem to him that they have been getting bad.

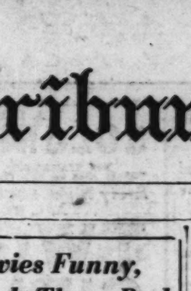
I judge that Mr. Cohan while in London, planning anything from a royal command performance of a Bronx Irish jig to British citizenship papers, did not forget to read his American papers nor how to read them with a pinch of salt. The movies, as he dramatizes them, nearly ruined his little Madeleine, but, gosh, how she still loved them.

GEORGE M. COHAN.
[Bangs Photo.]

In the wide and worshiping eyes of Georgette Cohan, Madeleine's love for them glistened solemnly. It served, throbbing, a personal meeting with Garry Paige after it had suffered ten thousand silent anguishes in the contemplation of Garry Paige's stills. It survived father's stern interdictions when father found Garry's photograph beneath Madeleine's mattress and Garry's photograph tucked into Madeleine's shirtwaist. It survived menace from the law.

It survived, burning, until Garry himself (not a movie) took lowly Madeleine into his arms, scrunching her in a final closeup with a vim he had never quite attained before the camera's eye. Don't tell me this man Cohan does not know how to be popular. After "Madeleine and the Movies" any Jenny of the department stores can marry any Douglas of the films. Mr. Cohan shows her how.

It is not for me to be a movie pest and tell this plot out loud. There is not a reel of it could be divulged without in some way hinting the trick which tells it all. Mr. James Rennie, handsome and unbelievably juvenile as the great Garry, walks quietly into his princely Park avenue apartments after a hard day holding Fort Lee and finds a little shop girl in brown napping unconsciously, albeit becomingly, on his parlor sofa, and the adventures—for which you will have to go back to "The Seven Keys to Baldpate" to find an equal—are on.



GEORGETTE COHAN.
[Apeda Photo.]

Georgette is not what might be called a tried and proven artist by this, her first major venture in theatricals. But she is gentle and average and is up there on the boards, a good practical symbol of the movie lovesick maidenhood of the land. Mr. Cohan's daughter is no brighter nor prettier than your own. I believe he planned her that way.

Three Weeks of Words at the Garrick.

The showing up of Blanco Shaw goes on relentlessly in the Garrick theater, where the Theater guild, having embarked on the five plays of "Back to Methuselah," can do nothing but hang on, like the seasick passenger on the roller coaster, until the darn thing stops. The hero of this second week of the guild's orgiac three weeks of words is Mr. Albert Brunning, who played last week the part of the Elderly Gentleman.

The joke in the Garrick is not primarily on the actors. It is, more hurtfully, on Shaw. There was always the suspicion that that famous expounder rose to his eminence, like a lighter than air machine, by gas. Now, with a dreadful hissing sound of escaping language, he comes down to earth. Our idol has not clay feet. But how uncommonly light he seems about the head!

"Back to Methuselah" is depressing. It is symptomatic of advanced age, which even the doctors recognize as a disease. Behind the vapor of Shaw's garrulity, between the thick and serried lines of his prose, one catches a note of senility, growing ever more audible as the plays progress. Shaw has reached that stage of the sixties where vanity is the last of serving passions. Philosophy has become maudlin and cackling. The tongue has become loose and unashamed; be still, children, while grandpa tells us long tales of the battle that started the bull run.

ALBERT BRUNNING.
[Moffett Photo.]

Shaw is expounding panaceas. There was some disposition to take him at his word in the first third of his play, when, last week, he told us that, some time, we shall all live as long as Methuselah and not go to the grave with the double burden of the sins of the things we have done and the sin of the things we have left undone, as the Anglican ritual admirably compresses it.

But now that he has begun working out the implications of such longevities one perceives that he has sugar-coated one more pill. All that Mr. Shaw or you or I could do with two more centuries of life is talk another billion words. The heavens would be disgusted. There would come another deluge—of words. None would escape. Not even a Noah Webster in a Hark.

Young John Shows the Billionaire the Door.

Owen Davis has his say about the American family in his new play in the Playhouse. He takes it as he found it when, in the last century, he wrote "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl," and before jazz, divorce, and Freud had complicated it.

The Smiths of "up the ladder" are a group of stalwart American types, or daguerreotypes. Papa is poor but proud and a compendium of valuable advice to the uppish generation. If, in his homely honesty, he ventures to point the analogies between marriage and castor oil in the midst of our swellest house party in our new suburban villa shall we be snobs and ashamed? You bet your life we shall.

And mother, dear, old buxom mother, in her taffeta, yawning in the earliest hours of the same festivities—shall we caddishly shove her upstairs into the spare bedroom? Enthusiastically we shall.

And should a bold, bad millionaire neighbor seek to tempt us into a slightly off color but perfectly safe split in the half million profits of a business deal, shall we weakly accept? As weakly as possible.

But we misrepresent Mr. Davis, whose worthy Smiths do none of these things. For a moment in the Smiths' third act it seemed that young John Allen, who had married the Miss Smith who worked the typewriter in his boss' office and had become the Smithiest of them all—for a moment, I say, it seemed that he might take old man Henley's filthy dollars.

What with the mortgage due and that wonderful little secret that his young wife might impart to him almost any day now and a few other bothers, the dollars would be handy. Paul Kelly, playing John, clenched his fists until the knuckles went white.

What, we wondered, could Owen Davis do in a crisis like this?

Easy.

Papa put his arm on young John's shoulder and bade him remember the moral of the castor oil. Mamma, who had not gone to bed after all, came in smiling bravely through her tears. And young John pointed the base billionaire sternly to the door.

Joe Henley, there are things you cannot buy with all your millions!

Banzai.

They Suffer Too Much in "The First Man."

In Eugene O'Neill's "The First Man," which is presented with local pride in the lower east side's Neighborhood playhouse, O'Neill's pessimism is rampant and arrogant. I suspect that O'Neill resents the fairly general criticism that his preference is for murky subjects and that, in "The First Man," he has allowed his gorge to rise. Whatever his personal reasons, gorge does rise in an unseemly flood on the Neighborhood playhouse stage. Augustin Duncan and his repertory players are not so much employed as engulfed in their production of "The First Man."

MARGARET MOWER.

If we seek for the symbol which his play title seems to imply, "The First Man" may be called a treatise on nature's apparent dislike of the phenomenon of birth. Life is unwelcome to life, and reproduction is discouraged by the unwillingness of the reproducer. To push his point, O'Neill has one scene of caustic comment—even holocaustic comment—on the discomforts of child bed, during which Miss Margaret Mower, as a wife, is invisible but audible in the throes of an offstage travail while Mr. Duncan, an unwilling father, paces the boards with his unusual hair tangling with horror on his head.

In the stress of his theme O'Neill has foregone his homely poetic asset of

Why Not a Standardized Time to Start the Play?

By Sheppard Butler.

A CITIZEN whose letterhead indicates that he is a person of some consequence has written to the producer of "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" making strenuous protest because he was not permitted to go to his seat after the curtain had risen. He admits having reached the theater after the announced time for beginning the performance, but claims the right to seek his place when it suits him. This privilege, he intimates, was paid for, war tax included; moreover, no warning was given that he must be prompt. His letter concludes with the declaration that he will no longer countenance a playhouse where such violence is done to the inalienable rights of the people.

MISS FRANCES STARR, in "The Easiest Way," at Powers'.
[Campbell Photo.]

To this Mr. Harris, the entrepreneur in question, replies that the rule was made in the interest of those who desire an uninterrupted view and hearing of the plays they patronize—a boon to which he thinks they are entitled. As for an admonitory notice, he has not thought this necessary, he says, any more than a specific request to women to take off their hats. However, he is in the hands of his friends. If the majority of his patrons want such a rule, it will remain. If not, it will be rescinded. He would like to be set right in the matter.

Therein arises a perplexing problem. If you are on time at the play you do not enjoy being routed out of your seat in the middle of the first act by late comers who trample your toes, disarrange your wraps, and wreck your tranquillity. On the other hand, if you are detained, unavoidably or otherwise, it is not consoling to stand in the lobby clutching a pair of $3.50 tickets and missing a third of the performance. Which experience do you like the least? Shall your toes be protected, or your right to be late? You cannot, it seems, have both blessings in this most fallible of worlds.

Various experiments have been tried hereabouts in regulating the ways of theater patrons. The owners of a group of spacious moving picture houses have established a stern and unyielding regimen, posting militant ushers at strategic points to poke recalcitrant folk with swagger sticks and see that they do not interrupt the latest gems of wit from the Literary Digest. Not until what is deemed the proper moment are they permitted to enter the sacred inner portals. This is fine for those who are inside, but it has made many worthy people vow that they will attend the —— theaters no more. Perhaps the managers in question are carrying it too far. Or perhaps they might find more tactful ushers.

In any case, two things may be said for the protestant who has spoken his mind to Mr. Harris.

First, if late comers are not to be seated during the progress of the play, it seems fair that some notice to this effect should be given. The removing of hats is hardly a parallel case; this is an established custom, and the barring of tardy arrivals is not.

Second, getting to the theater on time is a gamble. If you arrive at eight, you may wait forty minutes for the rise of the curtain, with nothing more to divert you than the advertisements of snappy clothes and face lotions in the program. If you make it 8:30 the next time, you are pretty sure to blunder into the heroine's most sprightly scene. You may guess, but you seldom know precisely when the ceremonies are to start.

Why not agree upon a standardized time for starting the play, tell the world that it must be in its seat or take the consequences, and stick to it?

Actors' Fund, 40 Years Old Today, Plans Another "Benefit."

The time approaches for contributing to the most orthodox and patrician of the players' charities. On Friday afternoon of next week, at the Auditorium, there will be staged the gay and impromptu annual performance known as the Actors' Fund benefit. This is the project that is nearest the showmen's hearts, and for it they lay aside all differences of "syndicate" and "opposition," Equity and Fidelity, closed and open shop, and pool their resources in an effort to do as much as possible for the needy of their profession.

MISS RUTH MERO, in "Only Thirty-eight," at the Olympic.
[Lewis-Smith Photo.]

Much has been written—and believed—regarding fabulous salaries and spendthrift ways among the players. Less publicity had credence is given to the other side of the story—the record of thousands of workaday men and women for whom the stage furnishes a precarious livelihood, but the only one possible.

"The tragic difficulty with the dramatic profession," says the fund's announcement of activities for 1922, "is that the rank and file of the theater have no fixed period of employment, and so no regular income. Sometimes they rehearse for weeks in plays whose life is a few nights only; then comes an uncertain and often long wait for other engagements. So a whole season may pass in practical unemployment, in which time may come illness or other disabilities. But, possessed of their own peculiar quality of the artistic temperament, they are unfit for any other work but the theater."

It is for these that the fund is now spending more than $100,000 yearly in a fourfold purpose—to bring home the stranded actor, to relieve the sick and destitute, to operate its home on Staten island, and to reserve for needy players "the last dignity of burial side by side with their comrades."

The Actors' Fund is exactly forty years old today. It was organized March 12, 1882, at a meeting held in the old Union Square theater in New York. Its first board of trustees included such names as those of Lester Wallack, Edwin Booth, P. T. Barnum, A. M. Palmer, Joseph Jefferson, Lawrence Barrett, and J. K. Emmett, and during its long career its affairs have always been administered by the foremost people of the stage.

The Actors' home, which represents its most picturesque activity, is a fine Elizabethan house, dedicated in 1902. It is surrounded by fourteen wooded acres, and here thirty-one men and women of the theater are spending their declining years, secure in the knowledge that they have no more engagements to seek and no further specters of unemployment to face.

News and Views (Mostly News) of the Stage and Its People.

Miss Francine Larrimore approaches the end of her long and prosperous run in "Nice People" at the Cort. She will depart either on the first day of next month or a week thereafter, making way for Miss Pauline Lord and the fine company of players who are acting Eugene O'Neill's "Anna Christie," a grim drama of the underworld and the water fronts. Miss Lord's acting in the piece has been so good that it has made her a star, and the performances of Miss Eugenie Blair, George Marion, and others in the cast have been greeted with high acclaim.

MISS LOUISE DOSE, in "Lady Billy," at the Illinois.
[Apeda Photo.]

Walker Whiteside, too, prepares to say farewell. He will leave at the end of this week, having come upon a long awaited opportunity to act in New York, which Elysium of the theatrically blest he has not seen for three years. He will take "The Hindu" with him, of course; also he plans special matinee performances of "The Master of Ballantrae," familiar to this hinterland, but barred from Broadway hitherto by the whims of the booking offices.

To the list of prospective arrivals in Chicago theaters are newly added the names of two players of widely varying gifts—William Gillette and Ed Wynn. Gillette hovers in the nearby cities with "The Dream Maker," a play of his own authorship, waiting until Miss Billie Burke shall complete her forthcoming engagement at Powers'. Wynn will bring his annual entertainment, "The Perfect Fool," from New York, taking the Illinois, perhaps, when Mitzi is through with it.

When a Cohan returns to the stage, he returns with a vengeance. Therefore an addendum is necessary to the report of "Madeleine and the Movies" which appears in an adjoining column. Since Mr. Whittaker saw the play the indomitable George M. has taken the leading rôle to himself, and he is now playing the love scenes with his daughter as he thinks they should be played. James Rennie, husband of the illustrious Miss Dorothy Gish, is thus ousted from the cast, virtually without warning, but it is said that there are no hard feelings, and that there may be another play for Rennie in the not too distant future.

Miss Grace George's new play, "The Exquisite Hour," is not an adaptation from the French of Paul Geraldy, according to the bellringer for her approaching visit to the Princess. Miss George did, he explains, transcribe a Geraldy opus, but this is now on view in New York as "The Nest." Confusion of the two dramas threatened for a time to rob Margaret Wright, author of "The Exquisite Hour," of the honor due her in the public prints.

Only three more American cities—Boston, Philadelphia, and San Francisco—are to see Frank Bacon in "Lightnin'." Then, according to plans made last week, he will take the comedy to London, where they think he may have to stay five years. Meanwhile, the company headed by Milton Nobles is playing "Lightnin'" here and there and having its adventures. In Pittsburgh recently Nobles found three venturesome souls producing a pirated version of the play. The unfortunates were promptly haled before a United States commissioner and charged with violating the copyright laws.

Chicago is not, after all, to see George Arliss in "The Green Goddess." His coming has been frequently promised, but other arrangements have intervened, and now arrangements are under way to take the prosperous melodrama to London within a few weeks. Arliss is a native of London, though he has not acted there in many years, and his play is by one of the most illustrious of London critics, the veteran William Archer.

Ben-Ami, whose acting of Peretz Hirschbein's "The Idle Inn" interested the intelligenzia in New York, but was not a box office success, is in Chicago for four performances of the play in Yiddish. Reverting to the old "visiting star" custom, he is joining the resident company at Glickman's Palace theater on the west side, where he began his four days' engagement on Friday.

When Fanchon and Marco brought their California-bred "Satires of 1920" to the Olympic a year ago, it was predicted that several of the invaders would be quickly snapped up by the eastern managers. And so they were. Eddie Nelson, the comedian, went into "The Last Waltz"; Miss Muriel Stryker took to dancing in the New York roof gardens, and now comes Miss Eva Clark, the pleasantly austere prima donna, singing her way through the "Ziegfeld Frolic"—next week at the Colonial.

What sounds like the most distinguished "road company" ever assembled is being formed to play Somerset Maugham's "The Circle" in parts of the country not to be visited by John Drew, Mrs. Leslie Carter, and others of the original cast. The barnstormers will include Wilton Lackaye, Miss Amelia Bingham, Henry E. Dixey, Thomas Ross, Robert Edeson, Miss Charlotte Walker, and Miss Maude Fealey. At least, so they say.

Maurice Browne and Miss Ellen Van Volkenburg, long identified with various "little theater" activities in Chicago, will launch their first venture as New York managers next week, when they will produce Strindberg's "Creditors" at the Greenwich Village theater. The piece is to run four weeks, if it prospers, and to be followed thereafter by other productions.

Negotiations are under way for the reproduction of the musical comedy, "Sally," in the movies, with Miss Marilyn Miller, Leon Errol, and others in their original rôles. This is something new. It is said an experiment will be made in synchronizing the music of the play with the progress of the film, so that the performance will be virtually a duplication of that behind the footlights.

In common with various other burlesque theaters throughout the country, the Columbia will undergo a radical change of policy today. Burlesque performances will be given at the usual hours, but in addition there will be hereafter enough vaudeville and films to provide a continuous program from 1 to 10:30 p. m. All for one price of admission, and smoke if you like.

Leo Carrillo, last seen here in "The Love Chef," is to appear soon in a new play by the Hattons.

The governors of the Memorial theater, Stratford-on-Avon, have again made arrangements with the Shakespeare joint committee for the annual birthday festival. "All's Well That Ends Well" has been selected for the birthday play, and the program will include "Julius Cæsar," "Twelfth Night," "Othello," "The Taming of the Shrew," and "Much Ado About Nothing." The festival will this year occupy four weeks, beginning Monday, April 17.

Arnold Daly, having tried his hand at this and that with indifferent success, proposes to tempt fate next with a drama having to do with twenty-four hours in the life of François Marie de Voltaire. "Voltaire" is its title, and the authors are Leila M. Taylor and Gertrude M. Purcell.

Fred Hillebrand, left to his own devices by the closing of "The Rose Girl," is cutting up in Shubert vaudeville.

Impending Joys

Attractions Scheduled for Arrival in Chicago Theaters During the Coming Weeks.

"The Exquisite Hour" (Princess, March 19)—Miss Grace George's new play, announced as the work of one Margaret Wright, a dramatist concerning whose identity no information is vouchsafed. Miss George's company will include Norman Trevor, Curtis Cooksie, and various others.

MISS GRACE GEORGE
[White Photo]

"The Ziegfeld Frolic" (Colonial, March 19)—A spacious entertainment in the manner of Mr. Ziegfeld's midnight shows in New York. Will Rogers is the featured performer and others involved are Brandon Tynan, Lotta Miles, Eva Clark, Annette Bade, Arthur West, and June Roberts.

"The Intimate Strangers" (Powers', March 20)—Miss Billie Burke in a whimsical comedy by Booth Tarkington. Alfred Lunt, Charles Abbe, and Glenn Hunter will be among those present.

"Ladies' Night" (Woods, March 20)—A farce by Avery Hopwood and Charlton Andrews, having to do with comic adventures in a Turkish bath. Charles Ruggles and Allyn King will play the leading rôles.

Russian Grand Opera (Olympic, March 20)—Something new and exotic from the land of the Muscovites. More about this in Mr. Moore's music column.

"Lola" (La Salle, April 2)—Miss Helen Shipman, newly risen to the dignity of a star, in a musical comedy by George E. Stoddard, Ballard MacDonald, and James F. Hanley.

"Anna Christie" (Cort, April 2 or 9)—Miss Pauline Lord and other good players in a grisly and highly effective bit of realism by Eugene O'Neill.

"The O'Brien Girl" (Cohan's Grand, April 3)—One of George M. Cohan's most successful plays with music.

"Red Pepper"—A musical extravaganza with McIntyre and Heath as its chief performers. Due about April 16 at one of the Shubert theaters.

"The Dream Maker"—William Gillette, in a play of his own authorship, vaguely reminiscent of his "Sherlock Holmes." Coming to Powers' when Miss Burke departs.

"The Perfect Fool"—Ed Wynn's annual show. Listed for arrival next month at the Illinois.

She May of Been Homespun, But She Knew Her Way About

adverse criticism of the puppets and so little for the men who pull the strings? A perfectly immoral man, if there can be such, might enact the rôle of a perfectly moral gentleman, if the producer or director, or both, should insist on it and tell him how to do it, or hire some one to tell him who knew how.

F. C.: You have given to us that make up the group "the constant reader" the privilege of kicking. For that I thank you. So here goes:

I would make this a constructive kick—isn't every kick supposed to boost?—so I wish you would suggest a plan whereby the motion picture man would be compelled to print with each notice of the picture the number of death scenes, the number and sort of murders, the number and brand of crimes, and, as a personal matter, I would like to have listed the number of close-ups in each picture (just imagine enduring a face so contorted with emotion thrust as close to your own in real life), and any other unpleasantness that could be avoided.

There must be hundreds of mothers in Chicago and elsewhere who find in the movies rest after strenuous days caring for little children. So, taking my own case as an example, I present it.

My day ends with the baths of two small children and the bottle for babe, the tucking in and saying good night to each. That is generally over by 8. Leaving dad with the children, I am at liberty to go outside to find in new pictures the rest I need to keep on good terms with my brood.

The last picture I saw began with a kitchen scene and an accusing pan ful of dirty dishes. Then followed a family quarrel (no treat), a neglected baby, a desertion, the death of the father, and later came more dirty dishes and an attempted suicide, a rebellious wife and some shooting, the brutal quizzing of an old woman at the police station, and—I went out! There was nothing to suggest all this misery on the outside. Furthermore, I have had that experience many times, and all without a chance to dodge. "I am sorry, because I really like to go to the movies, and it is one of the few recreations I have. That is why I miss the happy sort of things that Miss Clark used to give us and those most enjoyable sketches that the Drews were so clever about.

As a last resort, may we ask you to consider the tired mother as well as the t. b. m., and as you view the pictures mark them for or agin the t. m.?

SLEW: I have something on my mind:

Why is it that a certain picture that one has set one's mind upon seeing will appear in outlying movie houses about the same time and generally within a period of two weeks, when circumstances make it impossible to attend? When one can go, one's pet picture is not advertised for appearance anywhere in Chicago.

One instance: "Over the Hill" was booked in dozens of theaters for one solid week. I could not attend any night that week. Do you suppose I have been able to find "Over the Hill" showing at any theater since then? With one exception, and that was far removed from our side of the city.

ASK ME! ASK ME!

WEE FORR BAE: That was SOME pome! All right—watch the rote. Before long thou shalt see the picture thou yearnest for! In the meantime, keep on rhyming—I like your style.

JUNE S.: Little Charles Eaton was Gogo in "Forever." Yes, wasn't he the darling!

PAY ME: Your letter sounds so wild! Heving knows, nobody in this department had any wish to see you flouted "before the whole world in handcuffs," nor would we wish you in a bull fight, or place you "in a dungeon," or watch you "foil the lions." I'm glad the heart of the tree still stands, and if you leave it to me I don't care which you take—blonde or brunette.

ALICE: Conway Tearle. No, he's no relation to Mr. Valentino. I had not heard that either of the gentlemen was "consumed with jealousy." Lots of things I DON'T hear, though!

MISS INA CLAIRE,
in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," at the Garrick.
[Lewis-Smith Photo.]

Similar experiences happen time and time again.

Time, tide, death, and the movies wait for no man, so I suppose the moral to be gained is, drop everything else and go when the going's good.

BROWSING BACKWARD

Browse backward, fans,
Over the long years;
Conjure up the films
That brought you smiles or tears.

L. D. B.: Hope springs eternal in the human heart—he also serves who only stands and waits—the first shall be last and the last first.

There was once a time when the world was young, and no one had to worry about where his next drink was coming from; when there was honor abroad in the land, and film actors were worthy of the name; when men appreciated a hasty glimpse of crêpe de chine teddys; when there were pictures produced which, unheralded, untrumpeted, were worth sitting through two shows to see.

It has been my good fortune to have witnessed one of those films. I have looked over billings and advance programs in hopes of seeing something which I might believe would hold me from the first flicker at 7 p. m. until the "Good Night," and cause me to change my route and work two towns on the interrurban so that I might come back the following night and see the same picture. It was some time between eight and ten years ago. The picture was "An American Citizen." The star was John Barrymore.

Hope springs eternal—I have hoped, wished, and even longed to see the name of that picture blazed out again from some worthy showhouse, or the name of that actor, that I might see one who could really act. He also serves. I have mentioned that picture to friends, to people connected with distribution agencies, hoping that some little word might cause sufficient interest to dig the film out and run it. The first shall be last. Just as the small boy learns that the castor oil two days after Thanksgiving day will make it possible for him to be at the table for Christmas dinner—so will the producers rectify the diet—we are in the midst of the castor oil now, and it isn't particularly pleasant—but we'll be able to be standing in line when the real stuff comes on; the old fashioned stuff that did not rely on the sex idea to put it over, or the lingerie display to draw the flappers.

IRENE: No picture has gripped me like "The Queen of Sheba." Its sincerity, depth, and sweetness were the reflection of life itself, and not a mere sacrifice of common sense on the altar of screen and stage.

Mothers like those represented in "Over the Hill" and "The Home Nest" do not rear the brutal children that make those stories scenarios. The string of coincidences connected with the villain in "Way Down East" proves it a "frameup" for fans who have been fed on hypocrasies all their lives. Norma Talmadge's three cornered stuff, as in "The Sign on the Door," is a disgrace to womanly intelligence, but is on a par with most triangle plays.

Your characterization of "the female in the fight" in "Lady Letty" is great. I was once attacked by a ruffian, and a hired girl I had known for two days was on his back in a minute; moron was yellow.

Mr. Cohan Thinks the Movies Funny, but He Does Not Think Them Bad

quiet, veritistic dialogue and ascends to the pomp of the melodramatic manner. Even O'Neill's fine, recognizable folk, when they suffer too much, can fall into the pose of italicized prose.

"Your Woman and Mine," in Cleaves Kinkead's play of that name in the Klaw theater, is chivalrously defended from a peril to her good name the like of which has not menaced her since Madame X faced her son in the courtroom.

Up in the state capital, affirms Mr. Kinkead, a situation has arisen in which the proposed provender bill can pass only over the dead reputation of one of our commonwealth's fairest flowers. A bloc of paladins has formed. A filibuster of chivalry is to be attempted. With the help of Mr. Kinkead's stage carpenters, who have erected a vista of the state legislature hall on the stage of the Klaw, we shall see what happens to the provender crowd when they try to drag a fair name in the mire of politics.

With the iron grayed governor, the important speaker of the house, the lady, the eloquent young man, the jowled lobbyist of the sinister opposition all present and primed for the moment, it is plain that this is to be the proudest scene of "Your Woman and Mine" and its most eloquent plea for public favor. "Punch," that lapsed element of the native drama, is revived, as heavyweight as the blow which crushed the boudoir door in "Bought and Paid For." "Punch" did not revive three months ago when "Bought and Paid For" was revived. But Kinkead keeps the old faith. He puts it on trial for its life in the Klaw.

Spare neither the child nor the rod is the message to parents delivered somewhat heavily by Emil Nyitray and Herbert Hall Winslow in their play, "Broken Branches," in the Thirty-ninth Street theater.

James Barton of the funny feet is the hero of the new musical event in the Century theater. In the joy of his return the miseries of Leo Fall's Viennese music, trampled under Barton's burlesque shoes, are forgotten. For Mr. Barton, Leo Fall is just another name for a new comic contortion. I recommend it as a trade title for the Russian dance he commits among the revels of "The Rose of Stamboul's" second act.

Surrounding Mr. Barton in regal adulation is an alarmingly costly production, on which the Messrs. Shubert have lavished their most tremendous fancies in fast colors and their most expensive employés. Miss Tessa Kosta sings graciously the several melodies which survive from the original Fall score.

There is something merrier than this sort of tune when Sigmund Romberg's jazz, with which the score is seasoned to American consumption, is chuckled by the joyous Mabel Withee. But the greatest joy is joyous Barton's withers.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Down Manhattan Way They Ride Far for 5 Cents

By Mme. X.

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—The traveler along life's highway finds compensations at every step. New York lacks the taxicab service which places Chicago at the head of the world in this direction. But in New York you can ride far and comfortably, except at the morning and evening hours, on clean and decent street cars for only a nickel.

It may be only imagination, but to this observer the wayfaring public in Manhattanville has a smarter, more sophisticated air than ours in dear, disheveled old Chicago. New York abounds in severe and chic looking elderly people who are always either standing on street corners waiting to get across or are walking in a sort of majestic fashion up the side streets as if work and any remunerative activity were utterly unknown in their lives, leisure being writ in large letters all over them. No New Yorkers walk in 5th avenue; they leave that meretricious highway to us country folk. We like it.

By all this you may know that this column has become a peripatetic piece of architecture. In fact it is on its way to see whether Vesuvius is smokier than a Chicago river tug, and to compare the Coliseum at Rome with our own as a temple wherein to nominate presidents.

The Highest Bridge in the World.

Coming to New York we crossed what is said to be the biggest, highest cement bridge in the world, the Tunkanhauc (pronounced Tunk'nic) at Nicholson, Pa. It is 280 feet high and half a mile long. Its long and beautiful legs stride across a deep valley and unite two mountains. It's something to see; it prepares one for the Roman aqueducts.

One thing we have learned since coming to New York: Opera is no longer smart here. The Metropolitan is crowded and popular. Its boxes all seemed full, but it is crowded with many people not in the social register. The names of the occupants of the bathtub shaped boxes would not interest a society reporter.

Did you ever think, by the way, how entirely the so-called smart set is the creation of that little, deprecatory girl who softly inquires the names of the guests at a party or at the opera? When she drops a name off her list it is usually a sign that the bearer of that name is no longer to be counted as in the swim.

It is inevitable that a Chicagoan who has watched the development of our grand opera and now waits with intense eagerness its further growth, should study with interest the Metropolitan and its setting. It may spur those working for the permanent establishment of our opera to know that Gothamites are counting on our not succeeding. They take it for granted that we are not going to be able to pull it off. Are we down hearted? No!

Famous Horseshoe Is Impressive.

The Metropolitan was built twenty-six years ago. It holds 3,200 people. It is probably one of the worst auditoriums, acoustically speaking, in the world. Most of its main floor is almost level, with the seats so low that the spectator feels as if he or she were sinking out of sight. It is, however, an imposing house from the point of view of serving as a setting for the audiences. That oblong ring of red velvet hung boxes, with the tier above tier of overhanging balconies rising to the vaulted roof, is an impressive spectacle when filled with the bejeweled, well coiffed women and the dapper men who frequent it.

But, as I said in the beginning of this discourse, opera is no longer smart. No one talks about it or is much interested in its supremacy. New operas and new singers are not a matter of much moment. Even the new Viennese artist, Jeritza, of whom we have heard so much, is not considered by the real old opera goer as anything especially interesting. "Too fat," "too heavy," "too loud," and so forth is the verdict.

And yet the house is always well filled, nor are the boxes bulging with the relatives and friends of the chorus. If they are, the relatives and friends of the chorus wear remarkably good clothes and many sparkling jewels.

Modern Ideas of Comfort.

New Yorkers are rediscovering out of the way residences in New York which they are remodelling and making over to suit their modern ideas of what is comfortable and attractive. On the far east side, overlooking the East river, with the soaring Queensborough bridge striding overhead, is a collection of quaint and unpretentious little houses, several blocks of them, conceived and built in the days of man's innocency, which are the especial delight of such sophisticated authorities on house building and furnishing as Miss Elsie DeWolf, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, and Miss Elizabeth Marbury. This neighborhood lies between East 57th street, Sutton place, and East 58th street.

Among the original pioneers thereabouts was a Chicago couple, the Rosecrans Baldwins. When they rebuilt a narrow red brick house in East 58th, making of it a charming nest, they were the first to make the experiment in that block. They foresaw the possibilities of the garden back of the house which hangs directly over the gleaming river.

Then came Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, who took two or three humble dwellings and gave them the unmistakable Vanderbilt cast of countenance. Followed swiftly the famous muses, the Misses DeWolf and Marbury.

And now comes still another well known, single woman, perhaps the best known in the country, Miss Anne Morgan, youngest daughter of the late J. P. Morgan, and herself a conspicuous personality, known from Maine to California for the energetic way in which she carries on the work of the committee interested in rehabilitating devastated France. She is becoming a competent orator through much practice in addressing large audiences in the cause which she advocates.

She is putting up in Sutton place what she calls "a simple, little house." Two ordinary city houses are being torn down to make way for it. Miss DeWolf is to furnish it. Nature has furnished its back windows with a delicious view of river and distant shore—Miss DeWolf can't compete with that—while far above the reborn neighborhood Queensborough bridge bears a brisk traffic and at night suspends from end to end strings of diamonds brighter than any at a jeweler's.

Coming Back Into Their Own.

In Chicago we are on the threshold of a similar rediscovery of old houses and their possibilities. Every street running westward from the drive is blossoming forth with new painted fronts and modern basement entrances. Lucky is the mortal who owns some of that formerly unproductive and undesirable property, for the widened Michigan avenue and the Boulevard Link bridge have doubled and tripled the value of his holdings in three years. It is prophesied that the search for homes within walking distance of the loop will in time bring Dearborn avenue and even remote La Salle avenue back into their former repute.

Both were once among the most fashionable residence districts of the north side. On the former named street lived such well known social leaders as the George Dunlaps, the J. J. P. Odells, the W. H. Hoyts, the Francis H. Peabodys, the William Houghtelings, the B. F. Campbells, the Potter Palmers, and many others.

In La Salle avenue dwelt the E. W. Blatchfords, the Hjortsbergs, the Robert Colliers, the McEwens, and the Rozets. The last named family is the only one of all the original inhabitants that has remained true to its neighborhood. The two daughters of the original owners, Mrs. William Prescott Hunt and Miss M. J. Rozet, have never forsaken the home their father built.

Their house is full of old family treasures, such as furniture, china, portraits, and other heirlooms. It has a quality not found in many houses. It suggests a past of gentlefolk who lived among and loved beautiful things. So many of our interiors have the air of intense modernity. Everything which recalls other times and other periods of esthetic expression is banished from these homes, which gives their owners a curiously unrelated air. They seem the product of the immediate moment, not the heirs to all the ages.

The Stage in New York.

The Theater guild in New York is an enterprise which has lately taken a new lease of life. It put that entertaining "Mr. Pim Passes By" on its road to glory. It is presenting here in New York George Bernard Shaw's "Methusaleh," in three numbers; that is, if you have a weekly subscription, say on Monday evenings, for three consecutive Mondays you will have in correct order the trilogy which composes this latest achievement of the Irish satirist. The first deals with the past, the second with the present, and the third installment with the human race one or two thousand years hence when it shall come to pass, etc., etc.

The most popular piece among the intelligentsia which is now on the boards in New York is the "Chauve Souris," originally a Moscow production. When one sees it one understands why the bolshevik regime exempted the performers at the Moscow theater from the customary oppressive rules they inflicted on the rest of their unhappy countrymen and why, according to report, they suspended their official massacres during the hours when the shows were going on.

To Laugh Away Years.

Once more out of Russia comes something fresh, new, charming and with that naïve humor with which this infant among nations makes the rest of us laugh. The Russians are as far as we know the only entirely original people today. Untrammeled by traditions, utterly indifferent to what has been handed down to us by the Greeks and Romans, they delight in the brilliant, the incredible, the preposterous, the grotesque. They paint their scenery with houses and landscape aslant. They make of themselves jerky puppets which perform antics to watch which make the aged young with laughter, a laughter in which the young chime in enthusiastically. Balieff is an actor of the Chaliapine school, getting tremendous effects with not a movement or gesture, simply from the changing expressions of his massive, rather repulsive face.

Like Prokofieff's "Love for Three Oranges," it is an entertainment which it would be impossible for an American imagination to evolve. Be sure to go to see it when it comes to Cook county, but leave at home your preconceived ideas of what constitutes a vaudeville. Wash your slate clean of traditions. Become as a little child, and then you will revel in the toy soldiers, the puppet show, Katinka, and the quartet.

In saying farewell to the finest, most desirable country on God's footstool, we wish here to record that among all the friends we leave behind there are we that we shall miss more than the Gumps, Andy, Min, Chester and Uncle Bim. As we shove off from the coast we leave behind the solution for the Zander complication: Andy should elope with her.

Mary Hannah Gift Frees the Junior School from Debt

By Kate Webber

THE annual dinner of the Chicago Junior School association will be held on Tuesday evening at the Hotel Sherman. Mrs. Hugh A. Cole, Mrs. Byrd Nevius, Mrs. Carrie Balaban, and Mrs. Harriet Wile are on the committe in charge of arrangements. There will be several speakers, including Peter Mortenson, superintendent of schools; former Gov. E. O. Eberhart of Minnesota, Jacob Loeb, F. Emory Lyon, Miss Harriet E. Vittum, and Judge Harry Fisher. Announcement also will be made of a recent gift from Mrs. Mary A. Hannah, one of the founders of the association, which will free the school from debt. Following the dinner motion pictures presenting the work of the organization will be shown.

The purpose for which the association was formed several years ago was to give boys of from 5 to 15 years of age accredited educations. The association at present maintains a farm and school near St. Joseph, Mich., where some fifty boys are cared for, whose homes are temporarily incapable of giving them the best care and education.

Special emphasis is laid on the value of proper schooling and home life, and each department has the best equipment for its particular needs. Equal emphasis is given to impressing the boys with opportunities of attaining their goal irrespective of their difficulties. No child is pauperized, parents being required to contribute a certain amount to their children's support. No child knows the amount of his or any playfellow's status, and complete democracy is the aim and in a large measure the attainment of the organization.

A little more than nine years ago the organization was formed and has been pushed forward by clubwomen interested in improving home conditions, in helping these less fortunate youngsters, and in working for the "formation rather than the reformation" of boys' characters.

A building fund of $250,000 is being raised, pledges having been secured for more than one-third the amount. There are several kinds of memberships.

The officers of the association are Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, honorary president; Isaiah T. Kahn, president; Mrs. Harriet A. Wile and Mrs. Mary H. Hannah, vice presidents; Robert Cousin, secretary; and William L. Bennett, treasurer. The advisory board includes Miss Jane Addams, Miss Mary Barteime, Mrs. Lambert O. Wile, Mrs. Mary Hoxie, Mrs. Charles E. Frankenthal, Lorado Taft, and Judge Harry Fisher.

MRS. MARY H. HANNAH.
[Lewis-Smith Photo.]

Mrs. Mary H. Hannah is the second vice president of the Chicago Junior School association, which is holding its annual dinner on Tuesday evening at the Sherman hotel. Mrs. Hannah has been active among the club women of the city who have worked for the organization's success since its inception nine years ago, and has given of her time and means to make the farm and school at St. Joseph, Mich., a successful institution for the education of boys from 5 to 15 years of age.

The reinforced panel flattens the diaphragm and the reducing wings confine the under-arm flesh, producing a continuous flat line around the body.

"Flatter-U"
The Brassiere for Stout Figures

(Patent applied for)

THE REDUCING WINGS HOLD THE FLESH DOWN AND FLAT

The Kabo "Flatter-U" Brassiere reduces:

The Diaphragm A reinforced front panel flattens and confines the heavy flesh at top of the low-bust corset.

The Bust Flesh drops naturally into side sections held down by wide elastic; cannot push up.

Under-arm Flesh The reducing wings are drawn snugly to hold the surplus flesh down and flat.

The Back Brassiere is cut low, and shaped to allow the back flesh to drop in—not bulge over.

The Kabo "Flatter-U" is, in every way, a comfort brassiere, effecting a straight, youthful figure line.

There are several other Kabo "Flatter-U" Models for stout and full figures, sizes 40 to 56 Prices range from

Decided Savings in a Successful Sale of Spring Coats and Wraps

Fifth Floor—Dearborn Street

The charm of the new Spring coats and wraps lies largely in the new sleeves.

Accepted fashions offered to us by a prominent New York maker—the price was right, so we secured his entire made-up stock. Discriminating women were quick to respond, making this sale successful from every standpoint. Of so much importance to our customers do we consider this selling that we are continuing it, enabling women planning to buy a spring coat to take advantage of very liberal savings. Do not delay—when you can buy garments that are all new and different, correct of line, with fashionable straight, flowing and wrap sleeves—for Monday in two splendid groups.

Sports coats, capes and wraps, the coats are half and full silk lined. Beautifully embroidered, some trimmed with fringe and braid. Some styles are illustrated. Corsets and Their Relation To Bodily Health, the Prof. Lorenz (of Vienna) Theories Demonstrated in a Lecture Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday At 10:30 A. M. and 2:30 P. M.

Third Floor—Dearborn Street

Tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday, twice daily at 10:30 A. M. and 2:30 P. M. in our Corset Section an intensely interesting lecture by a noted Corset Hygienist on Corsets and Their Relations to Bodily Health—a lecture arranged because of the many inquiries we have had regarding the Prof. Lorenz indorsements of Nemo corsets—his theories will be fully demonstrated and at your request any Nemo corset will be demonstrated on a living model.

Give your figure every chance. Don't hamper it with a make-shift corset, or worse yet—none at all—clothe it in the correct Nemo Corset and watch it grow into healthy, stylish, graceful lines.

Why did Prof. Adolph Lorenz indorse Nemo corsets?—because they give the anatomically correct support which is so necessary to woman's health. We fit each corset according to latest hygienic methods without extra charge.

The Wonderlift corset as illustrated does just what Doctor Lorenz had in mind, it has the bandlet that supports the abdominal wall and keeps the kidneys, intestines, stomach, and liver from sagging. It is well named the Nemo Wonderlift—it helps women to help themselves to conserve their health, and in many instances regain it when lost. Made in five models for every type of figure, fitted carefully by our scientific corsetieres without extra charge. Sizes 21 to 40, at..... 6.50, 7.25 to $13

Nemo self-reducing corsets with relief bands simply gather up a large spready abdomen, support and reduce it with greater comfort to the wearer than she ever experienced before. Sizes 24 to 44, at..... 7.75

Nemo self-reducing corsets are the corsets that take care of adipose tissue, supporting it and massaging it away, especially when it is over the abdomen; seventeen distinct styles for every type of figure. Sizes from 24 to 44, at..... $4, $5 up to $9

OPERA, CHORUS, BAND, AND BALLET DUE SOON :

By EDWARD MOORE

MUCH music of a kind not concerned with the customary song, piano, or violin recital is headed in this direction. One learns of the approach of the Chicago Opera association for a single performance tonight, followed by the Winnipeg male voice choir tomorrow night; John Philip Sousa and his band for a pair of concerts Saturday; the Russian Grand Opera company beginning a three week's visit on the night following, and finally Pavlowa and her lovely Russian dancers.

ROSA RAISA.
[Atwell Photo.]

Here is a list from which all tastes may make a selection. The recital specialists will of course be with us as usual. Being specialists, they appeal to a specialized and therefore limited audience. Something else is being offered for the rest of us. The justly famous tired business man and his fellow among sociological symbols, the average citizen, are hereby invited to scrutinize other attractions.

Opera in English.

The Chicago Opera association will drop in at the Auditorium today, making its home city a one night stand as an item in its coast to coast tour. It will come into town from Pittsburgh today, set up its scenery, and sing "Lohengrin" tonight, pack up and leave after the performance, and be ready to appear in Milwaukee tomorrow night. That is the nimble manner with which the ponderous organization gets about the country when it is on the road.

"Lohengrin" will be sung in English, as it was the season before last, and by nearly the same cast. It was not given in any language during the season just closed. Edward Johnson will be the Lohengrin; Rosa Raisa the Elsa, Cyrena Van Gordon the Ortrud, Georges Baklanoff the Telramund, Edouard Cotreuil the king, and Desiré Defrere the herald.

It was a good cast formerly, and there is reason to suspect from past events that the addition of Mr. Baklanoff to the cast will be a notable one. He is new in the part here, though he sang it frequently on the road last year.

Another addition is sure to add glamour to the performance. The conductor will be Giorgio Polacco, an enthusiastic wielder of a mighty baton over all kinds of music, and particularly that from the pen of Richard Wagner.

Inquiries at the Auditorium bring the response that whether from a desire to hear Wagner's music or to hear opera in English, or a combination of both, there has been considerable interest manifested at the ticket window.

A Choir from the North.

The Winnipeg Male Voice choir will make its first Chicago visit at Orchestra hall. In the strict sense of the word it is an amateur organization, being composed of some sixty business men of Winnipeg. But the members have spent much time in the last few years in choral training, and are said to sing as though music was a vocation and not an avocation. Its friends rate it as the foremost male chorus of Canada.

MABEL LYONS.
[De Gueldre Photo.]

H. C. M. Ross, B. A., F. R. C. O., A. R. C. M., and perhaps a bit more of the alphabet, is the conductor, with a record in both war and music. Percy Grainger, always a highly entertaining pianist, will be the assisting artist. Two unpublished part songs of his composition will be sung by the choir.

The event would seem to have a civic and international as well as musical interest.

"Only One Sousa."

"I wish there were more bands like Sousa's," said a Chicago music lover the other day in the course of a discussion as to why music was not reaching more people.

But there is only one Sousa, just as there is only one Galli-Curci, one Kreisler, and one McCormack. That fact in itself is enough to make the news of his approach good news.

Mr. Sousa and his band—there are eighty-five players this season, more than he has ever had before—were booked at the Auditorium earlier in the season. A physical injury from a severe fall kept him from filling his engagement at that time. Since then he has been round and about the country, out to the Pacific coast, down into Mexico and Cuba, and back through Florida, playing 200 concerts to receipts of something like $700,000, another record.

His reception at Havana became what amounted to an event of state, including a formal presentation to President Zayas, the gift of the freedom of the city, and various other ceremonies. One occurred while he was approaching the city. The leading band of Havana lined up and played "The Stars and Stripes Forever" for an hour and fifty-five minutes while his steamship was docking. This march, by the way, was composed at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war.

One reads of many new features in his two concerts at the Auditorium next Saturday, of a popular music review consisting of the ten best known pieces of the last decade, of a march, "On the Campus," which the University of Illinois band played here a short time ago, of another, "Keeping Step with the Union," dedicated to Mrs. Harding, which has not been heard here at all, of older pieces that are still new in their vitality and snap.

JOHN PHILIP SOUSA.

Mr. Sousa has done a great work in his long career. It is much better to have composed his marches and to play them with his own infectious stir than to have put together a set of mediocre symphonies.

Visitors from Abroad.

The Russian Grand Opera company has had a history that, in the words of Ko-Ko, would rank with most romances. It was organized by Kerensky, when that strange figure was a power in Russia, out of singers from the opera companies in Moscow, Petrograd, Odessa, and Kieff, and sent out to tour eastern Russia, the idea being to show the people that though Russian government had changed, Russian art had not.

Then Kerensky fell, and Petrograd seemed to the singers a highly undesirable place to which to return. They fled across Siberia in box cars, failing better transportation, and managed to get into Japan. Reorganizing there, they started touring again.

INA BOURSKAYA.

Above is shown one of the members of the Russian Grand Opera company, soon to visit Chicago, after a romantic history of flight, escape, and travel in the orient. She is Ina Bourskaya, mezzo-soprano, and she sings the name part of "Carmen" in Russian, as well as many other works that have originated in her native land.

They sang in Japan, in China, and as far away as Java and India. They made large sums of money and spent it again, mostly on thousands of miles of transportation. Finally, having played the orient as thoroughly as they could, and with not much left except their courage and lack of knowledge of conditions in the United States, they took ship for Seattle last fall, arriving there in debt to the steamship company for part of their fares, and to the express company for carrying their music.

Since then they have been touring the Pacific coast and working eastward, and, it would seem, making friends because of their performances. There are ninety-six in the organization, all of whom are employed on a profit sharing basis. What money is received is divided among the members in accordance with the number of shares held by each, first depositing a certain amount in a sinking fund for the sake of possible lean weeks.

They have a répertoire of some fifteen Russian operas, practically all of which will be new here, such as Rubinstein's "The Demon," Rimsky-Korsakoff's "The Tsar's Bride," Napravnik's "Dubrovsky," and other works like "Pique Dame," "The Mermaid," "Eugene Onegin," "Sadko," "Boris Godounoff," and "The Snow Maiden."

They will come to the Olympic March 19 and stay three weeks.

As for Pavlowa and her ballet, they are due at the Auditorium March 26 for a week's visit. Further news of them must await a later issue.

With the Melody Makers.

"My dear Mr. Moore: Ever since Feb. 26 I have wanted to write you how thoroughly I agree with you in regard to what you said about program making, etc. I have lived up to my conviction as far as I dared. Your and my colleagues are the reason why programs are often as you describe them. It takes a great deal of courage to fly in the faces of such judges and to be ridiculed and sneered at by one's colleagues, even if the audiences back you up. Such programs as you mention are, like many others, made to be seen but not heard. I, for one, wish you would keep on hammering on this subject. Thank you.

"FANNIE BLOOMFIELD ZEISLER."

The reverse side of Mrs. Zeisler's subject—that is to say, a program meant to be both heard and seen—came out in an interesting fashion not long ago. The search for musical material led to the Chicago theater in one of its Sunday noon concerts.

Here was a symphony orchestra, of full size as symphony orchestras go, about 100 players under the baton of Nathaniel Finston. The program, an hour long, took in one full length symphony, Tschaikowsky's fourth, and a lighter work, Luigini's "Egyptian Ballet." Later in the afternoon Moissaye Boguslawski appeared, a pianist well versed in the art of playing music liked by the public in a way they like it.

Perhaps the orchestra did not play with perfect finish. Perhaps, through lack of time for rehearsals, there was a rough bit here, a tempo too fast for the players to negotiate with complete ease there. But it played with enormous spirit. Encores are not permitted in this theater, but there would have been plenty of chance for them.

The audience was quite as interesting as the music. Middle aged married couples seldom seen at other musical events made up a large part. Groups of school children hastened in—the Chicago theater sends 250 free tickets to the schools each week. Most astonishing of all, other groups of unattached men appeared, brought there evidently by their own volition and not by their women folk. In all there were 3,500 or more in the audience, which is about the average for each concert.

The moral is fairly plain.

The Young American Artists' series, founded in 1916 by Glenn Dillard Gunn and continued during the last three years by Jessie B. Hall, will enter its sixth season next Thursday night at Fine Arts recital hall, and continue for ten weeks. Coming toward the end of the year, this list of attractions classifies in most cases as debut recitals, and former seasons have uncovered an encouraging amount of promising talent. In all cases the young artists are fully American trained, the majority Chicago trained. This season's list will be led off by Cooper Lawley, tenor, and Parthenia Vogelback, pianist, in a joint recital.

For the first time since 1914, or since Geraldine Farrar took the rôle into her exclusive charge, the Metropolitan is engaging a contralto to sing Carmen next season. She is Mme. Hofmann-Onégin, (accent the middle syllable and pronounce Oh-nay-gin), and she comes from Germany. She and the Italian tenor, Volpi, are looked upon by experts as about all that are left of ripe opera singers in Europe.

Eugene Goossens, the London composer, has been putting together a new score for the flickering films of "The Three Musketeers," and he will conduct it when it is assembled. The American score was considered too light in weight, so in England D'Artagnan will do his swashbuckling to music from Tschaikowsky's symphonies, with reinforcements from Massenet, Bizet, and others.

William Carver Williams, Chicago cellist, will be the soloist with the Northwestern School of Music symphony orchestra at Evanston Wednesday night. He will play the Golterman Concerto. The orchestra, conducted by Harold Everard Knapp, will play Schumann's Fourth Symphony, Saint-Saëns' "Danse Macabre," and other numbers.

SULPHUR CLEARS ROUGH, RED SKIN

Face, Neck and Arms Easily Made Smooth, Says Specialist

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation begins at once to soothe irritated skin and heal eruptions such as rash, pimples and ring worm.

It seldom fails to remove the torment and disfigurement, and you do not have to wait for relief from embarrassment. Improvement quickly shows. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

NEWS OF ART AND THE ARTISTS : : : : : : :

By ELEANOR JEWETT

ONE of the most difficult subjects, so it is said, for an artist to paint, is a child. Children are restless, and change in mood and expression with the abandon of a weather cock in a west wind, having neither rhyme nor reason for their change except the passing mood that is upon them. Few artists care to portray children. In spite of this, we have a number of famous child paintings, not least among them the "Blue Boy" by Gainsborough, now creating a stir of excitement in the east before being sent to its owner in California.

At the Art institute, in the print room, there is at present an exhibit of etchings and dry points by Margery Ryerson, which deal entirely with the period of childhood. The greater number of the portraits are of little children—children just out of that stage when a rattle and a bottle of milk make up the world. She has caught the winsome charm of that age to perfection. The children burble with laughter. Their fat sides are tightly wedged in high chairs; the silver spoon beats a rapid march on the porridge section. The children bubble with sleep on the worn rug by the fire. Scarcely an event of the day that has not been chronicled in these sketches.

With all the beauty of infancy to carry it, one hardly cares that so many of the etchings are apparently unfinished. Most of them seem just minutes in the life of the baby, minutes that stop with a smile or a sneeze, and are not to be set down in any other but the transient state. Whether it is a good method for the artist to pursue always, is a question. Sketches are attractive, but a finished portrait, such as Elizabeth Telling gives in her child work, is undoubtedly in the long run more satisfactory. Miss Telling gives you the child itself; Miss Ryerson gives you a glimpse in the development of the child. It would be amusing to view a simultaneous exhibit of work by these two etchers. One wonders which would touch closest the heart of the public.

At the Chicago Camera club an exhibition of prints by George M. High will open on Wednesday. Mr. High is one of the most active members in the club, and one who has exhibited here and abroad with the greatest success. Several of his pictures were awarded prizes in the London show last year, and at present three prints are hung in the Pittsburgh exhibit.

Mr. High does not restrict himself to one form of expression. His pictures are of many and varied subjects. One of the most beautiful prints is from the golf course at Hot Springs. The golfer is playing off from a tee pitched at the crest of a steep hill that looks over the valley, where is the enormous hotel, to the wooded slope of the mountain beyond. The effect of distance is remarkable and the hazy beauty of the woods entrancing.

"The Start" is another picture of interest. Groups of horses are gathered in an open space waiting for the riders to mount. A background similar to that in the golfing picture throws the animals in relief. For atmosphere and composition, the print stands out conspicuously among its confrères.

Poses of a dancing girl have a charm of their own, and the several figure studies are important. It is difficult with so much good work to chose a part for further mention. Probably the wisest court is to give a few of the titles and suggest that the exhibit will well repay a visit.

Among the pictures are "Rock-a-Bye," "The Call of the Sea," "Dolores," "Odd Moments in Brittany," "A Modern Pharos Daughter," "The Preacher," "Japanese Tea Garden" and "Her Portrait."

The Municipal Art league announces a competition in design for a small bronze tablet or panel to be awarded the most artistic dwelling erected in Chicago this year. Information and more specific details concerning the panel may be secured by addressing the Municipal Art league competition committee, Art institute, Chicago, before April 1.

"The Zephyr Dance," by George H. High, one of the attractive prints in the exhibition of pictures by Mr. High, which opens Wednesday at the Chicago Camera club.

Most of us have been brought up in the firm belief that figures do not lie. For those who enjoy statistics, and for those who perhaps have but little faith in the powers of art as a drawing card for crowds, the following estimates, compiled by the Art institute, of its visitors during the last year, are of interest.

In 1921 the Art institute surpassed all former great records of attendance by over 50,000. The number of visitors to the museum during the twelve months totalled 1,071,422, exceeding the record of 1918, the best year previous to 1921, by 52,552, and an increase of 68,825 over last year's attendance. The daily attendance of students at the art school for the year totalled 158,742, which, added to the museum registration, gives a grand total of 1,224,894.

Figures given out by the Metropolitan Museum of New York announce an attendance of 1,073,905. Whether or not this includes the school admission is not stated. At all events the two art centers seem to run each other close seconds in the race of popular approval.

The opening reception of the thirty-fifth annual Chicago architectural exhibition took place yesterday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock. Those who were hosts were the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Architects, the Illinois Society of Architects, and the Chicago Architectural club. The exhibit, held in the east wing of the Art institute, is open to the public this morning and will remain open until April 9.

The American academy in Rome announces that Barry Faulkner and Paul Manship have been appointed annual professors for the academic year 1922-1923 in the School of Fine Arts of the academy.

The portrait of Leo Ornstein, painted by Leon Kroll, has been loaned by the Chicago Art institute to be hung in an exhibit of paintings by Mr. Kroll in the Maryland institute at Baltimore.

In connection with this exhibit the Woman's National Farm and Garden association is exhibiting models of house and garden arrangements, terraces, fountains, and gardens.

George Elmer Browne is arranging to take a party of art students abroad this summer to study in France and Spain. They will sail May 11 from New York. For further information concerning the proposed trip address Jane Freeman, Carnegie hall, New York.

Harriet Blackstone, a former Chicago artist, has recently completed a portrait of Mme. Galli-Curci, in her favorite rôle of Violetta (Verdi's "Traviata"), that is exciting much favorable comment in New York.

The Architectural institute of London is represented in the exhibit by many fine examples of work by its pupils. Among the architects from eastern states exhibiting are Lewis C. Albro, Donn Barber, Dwight James Baum, Cass Gilbert, and Bertram Goodhue. All of the local architects are represented, and a number of the important Philadelphia architects are exhibiting.

"One Man Show," by Miss Grace Ravlin. Mural paintings and room motives by the National Society of Mural Painters. Annual exhibition of the National Farm and Garden association.

Assistant Director J. Arthur MacLean of the Art institute will lecture in Fullerton hall on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock on Japanese art and at the same hour in Fullerton hall, March 21, on Chinese art. This afternoon at 5:30 Mrs. Dorothy M. Campbell will speak on "Good and Bad Wall Papers," Miss Elizabeth Browning on "Good and Bad Chintzes," and Miss Margaret Field on "Good and Bad Lamp Shades."

MEETINGS TODAY

This morning at 11 o'clock "The Unknown Meet" will be the subject of an address by the Rev. Alice R. Ritchie before the Chicago Divine Science Center, room 1007 Hartford building.

"A Life Preserver for Foods"

"I Use Less Ice"

Alaska "cubed cork" insulation makes every pound last longer

NO wonder an Alaska consumes so little ice, even in hottest weather. It has for its main heat deflecting material "cubed cork," the most efficient refrigerator insulating material known.

Alaska "cubed cork" keeps heat from entering the food compartments; helps maintain a very low temperature throughout the interior, with a very small consumption of ice.

Because of this, and the Alaska patented circulation system, a constant current of cold and dry air passes through the food compartments, chilling and preserving foods in the hottest weather.

Main Office and Factory: Muskegon, Mich. Minneapolis Office: 515 Lumber Exchange
Detroit Office: 939 Majestic Building New York Office: 513 N. Y. Furniture Exchange
Philadelphia Office: 16th and Chestnut Sts.

By these features you can tell an Alaska Refrigerator:

Alaska "cubed cork" insulation, with its myriads of confined air cells which act as a barrier to the passage of heat and cold. "Cubed cork" insulation, specified by the Government for its refrigerators, has long been a distinctive feature of Alaska Refrigerators, the main insulating material of its seven insulating walls.

Alaska patented circulation system by which the warm air rises from food compartment to ice chamber, where it is chilled and the moisture condensed. The dry, cold air drops back into food compartment to circulate about the food and thoroughly chill it.

Linings of seamless porcelain with rounded corners, or of white enamel; easily cleaned.

Shelves of heavily tinned, non-rusting woven wire, easily removable for cleaning.

Ice rack of galvanized steel, heavily coated, removable.

Special drain pipe with patent trap to keep warm air from entering refrigerator; easily cleaned.

Tight-fitting doors. Handsome finish of several coats of finest white enamel or varnish.

Insist on seeing the name Alaska on the front of the refrigerator before you buy. Don't accept a substitute.

Storage Gas Water Heater

The Royal Automatic and Marvel Non-Automatic are the only gas water heaters in the world which spread water into a thin, flowing sheet so that it can be heated with a small amount of gas. They do this by means of the B-M Water Spreader—the most ingenious element ever devised for heating water. This patented device is found exclusively in the Royal and Marvel and is not to be confused with open discs used in other heaters. Besides giving superior hot water service, Bastian-Morley heaters cost less to buy, to install and to operate. See one in actual operation at:

FOR SKIN IRRITATIONS

It's simply awful—our warehouses are groaning under the load and still our Government, represented by the Army and Navy, is shooting in car after car of merchandise to us. We started in three weeks ago to try to unload, but we evidently didn't try hard enough. Hardly a ripple has been made in this stock we have on hand. So we're actually up against it—got to either unload and unload right, or we'll be compelled to carry thousands of dollars in good Government merchandise on the street. Come in tomorrow. If we're not offering you real honest to goodness bargains it's because we don't know bargains when we see them.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

Time to Go.

A man visiting a friend in the hospital began to take an interest in the other patients.

"What are you in here for?" he asked one.

"I've got tonsilitis and I've got to have my tonsils cut out," was the answer.

"And you?" he asked another.

"I've got blood poisoning in my arm and they're going to cut it off," was the reply.

"Heavens!" said he in horror. "This is no place for me. I've got a cold in my head." W. S.

Declined with Thanks.

An Italian, having applied for citizenship, was being examined in the naturalization court.

"Who is President of the United States?"

"Mr. Harding."

"Who is Vice President?"

"Mr. Coolidge."

"Could you be president?"

"No."

"Why?"

"Mister, you 'scuse, please. I vera busy worka da mine." L. R.

That Requires Practice.

Robert: "Mother, was Robinson Crusoe an acrobat?"

Mother: "I don't know. Why?"

Robert: "Well, this book says that after he had finished his day's work he sat down on his chest." D. W.

And He Did.

A young man named Dubose was out riding one evening with Miss Miller, who lisped. The moon was shedding its soft radiance over all the earth. Soon they came to a nice shady spot. Mr. Dubose stopped the horse and, turning to his companion, said: "Miss Miller, here is where I collect toll. Shall it be a hug or a kiss?" The girl hesitated and lisped brokenly: "O, Mithter Dubothe!" M. L.

Women Will Deceive.

He—How old are you?

She—O, I have seen sixteen summers.

He—How long were you blind? H. M.

That's What They All Say.

Father: "I punished you merely to show my love for you."

"That's all right," sobbed the small boy, "but it's a good thing for you I ain't b-b-big enough to return your l-l-ove, that's all." N. V. Z.

Refused to Quarrel.

Pat had been having considerable difficulty trying to ride an unruly mule, when, with an unusually vicious lunge, the mule caught its foot in the stirrup, whereupon Pat said, with disgust: "Well, begorra, if ye're goin' to git on, I'll git off." G. B.

Another Guy Altogether.

A rookie was reading an article about the kaiser which compared him to Nero.

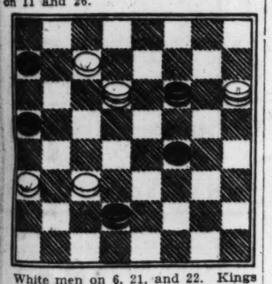
"Who was Nero, Bill?" he asked a fellow rookie. "Wasn't he a man who was always cold?"

"Naw," was the reply, "that was Zero, another guy altogether." H. H.

CHECKERBOARD PUZZLES by P. H. Ketchum

You may have to work some to solve this puzzle.

Black men on 5, 13, and 19. Kings on 11 and 26.



White men on 6, 21, and 22. Kings on 10 and 12.

White to move and win in four moves.

SOLUTION TO LAST PUZZLE.

Black men on 13, 18, 19, and 20. White men on 21, 27, and 28. King on 9. White to move and draw. 21 17, 13 22, 9 14, 19 23, 14 17, 23 32, 17 26, 32 27, 26 23, drawn.

A TRAP FOR THE UNWARY.

Here is a trap that all the amateurs fall into:

11 15, 8 11, 10 15, 5 14, 15 18, 22 18, 29 25, 24 20, 22 17, 17 13, 15 22, 4 8, 9 14, 6 10, 11 15, 25 18, 25 22, 18 9, 28 24, 13 9.

Now you will find that black will play 1 5 and white wins by 9 6, 2 9, 24 19, 15 24, 20 16, 12 19, 27 20, 18 27, 31 6.

OUCH! BACKACHE! RUB LUMBAGO OR PAIN FROM BACK

Ah! Pain is gone! St. Jacobs Oil acts almost like magic.

Quickly?—Yes. Almost instant relief from soreness, stiffness, lameness and pain follows a gentle rubbing with St. Jacobs Oil.

Rub this soothing, penetrating oil right on your painful back, and relief comes. St. Jacobs Oil is a harmless backache, lumbago and sciatica cure which never disappoints and doesn't burn the skin.

Straighten up! Quit complaining! Stop those torturous stitches. In a moment you will forget that you ever had a weak back, because it won't hurt or be stiff or lame. Don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest St. Jacobs Oil from your druggist now and get this lasting relief.

Slams of Life

by J. P. McEVOY

MARCH FIFTEENTH.

When all the East is flaming red
And I arise from out my bed*
Why is this aching in my head?
The Income Tax.

And when my toast I bravely chew
And drink my soothing cup of brew
What is this feeling like the flu?
The Income Tax.

And when to work I gaily ride
What is this dark brown taste inside
Suggestive of formaldehyde?
The Income Tax.

And when at eventide I go
To dine and dance in the mazda glow
Why am I all bowed down with woe?
The Income Tax.

And when upon the stage they chaff
And dance, and show the fatted calf,
O why is it now I cannot laugh?
The Income Tax.

And when to bed I sadly creep
Why do I moan and groan and weep
And what do I see in my tortured sleep?
March Fifteenth.

AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Six books most in demand at the Chicago public library last week were:
"If Winter Comes," by A. S. M. Hutchinson.
"Maria Chapdelaine," by Louis Hémon.
"To the Last Man," by Zane Grey.
"The Story of Mankind," by H. W. Van Loon.
"Mirrors of Washington," anonymous.
"The Best Plays of 1920-'21," edited by Burns Mantle.

By Fanny Butcher.

MAY SINCLAIR has gone back to the style of "Mary Olivier" in her new book, "The Life and Death of Harriet Frean." She has written something which is a sort of mental essence of the life of a woman—something which is comparable more to the distillation of a perfume from actual flowers than to anything else.

Most of our modern novels are like—synthetic perfumes, I believe they call them.

They are a law of chemistry applied to materials which have none of the inherent qualities of the compound obtained from mixing them. They are almost a manufactured article with the semblance of reality. They delight the senses of the readers. They look like works of art to their perpetrators. They have all the sense-stirring qualities of the real thing. They are highly complex and—perhaps—beautiful and fragrant in themselves.

MAY SINCLAIR.

But they are not a distillation of life.

May Sinclair is a great artist because—when she cares to do the job—she can make of the finished product of her writing an actual essence of the subject which was at her hand.

"Mary Olivier" was a book few liked, which many banged loudly, but which was such a unit in itself, such a spiritually real essence of the soul of a woman that it simply wasn't vulnerable to the same sort of criticism which puts an o. k. or an n. g. on the hundreds of volumes which flow through the hands of a reviewer every year. There's a strange thing about books.

They are almost never self-contained.

I mean, their interest, their power, is almost always dependent upon something else, some other book, the state of the world at the moment of their publication, the countless chemical forces of social and political life which contribute to their fragrance and their appeal. An author receives his laurel wreath because he knows how to compound those forces, because he has, by some alchemy, perhaps, mixed his elements to produce an exotic fragrance. But the really great artist is the person who crushes the flowers of life into a haunting fragrance.

"The Life and Death of Harriet Frean" is such a work of art, a pure essence of life. It probably will not be popular. Harriet is not a pleasing, or, to the casual reader, an interesting subject. But Miss Sinclair has done, in the book, something which is unmistakably fine.

James Harvey Robinson—A New Huxley.

More comprehensive praise than this could never be spoken for a book. H. G. Wells says:

"In the last few months I have visited America, watched the Washington conference, met all sorts of interesting and important people, and seen a multitude of significant things. But when I come to reckon up, if ever I do reckon up, the values of this American visit, I think I may well reckon that, from my own personal, individual point of view the encounter that has been of most importance and that is likely to have the greatest lasting effect upon me is meeting and talking to Prof. James Harvey Robinson, seeing something of the plan and work of the New School of Social Research, and reading his fascinating book, "The Mind in the Making." For me I think James Harvey Robinson is going to be almost as important as was Huxley in my adolescence and William James in later years."

Thus Overloading the Biographer.

The exhaustive two volume life of Clara Barton, by William E. Barton of Oak Park, her friend and kinsman, brings up again a question which Haslett discussed charmingly in his "Is Genius Conscious of Its Power?" Miss Barton left almost literally tons of material for her biography. She saved with most scrupulous care all the letters which she received and copies of all the letters she wrote. She must have begun at an extremely early age to collect material for the autobiography which she hoped some day to write and which the press of time and circumstances kept her from completing. She left all the material to a literary executor and an advisory committee, of which Dr. Barton was elected chairman and official biographer. The autobiography which she did write—the story of her childhood—is exactly the kind of life story that she must have contemplated almost as soon as the consciousness of preserving records was hers. It makes one wonder whether great men and women know—in some psychic way—that they are to be great even when they are mere bits of amusing precocious childhood. Meanwhile the life is complete and authentic—if not inspired.

CLARA BARTON.

Charles the Great.

The most comic book of the year. That is what "My Trip Abroad" is. Charlie Chaplin kept something which was a cross between the gushy "Dear Diary" of the late '80s and the Sweet Singer of Michigan. It has all the journals intimes faded into the limbo. It is the most self-revelatory book that was ever written. It is naïve in the extreme and unintentionally a screaming farce.

Torn between his longings for solitude and his passion for adoring crowds, his book is a series of self-conscious declarations that he wanted to be his simple, unrecognized self, but that when the world let him go incog, he was nettled. And it's all so simple—what the flapper would call "dumb." It is almost a too honest revelation. Anybody without reticences might have written it. No one with reticences could have helped tearing it up afterward.

Charlie Chaplin met the great and the near great, he spent an evning with Barrie, a week-end with Wells, explored Paris with Waldo Frank, was greeted by diplomats and artists, and the net result was a nature untouched, the same egocentric, almost childlike person.

"As I speed into town I am wondering if Wells wants to know me or whether he wants me to know him," is a sample of his reactions to people.

He tells, for example, of a long evening which he spent with Barrie. "Then Barrie tells me that he is looking for some one to play Peter Pan and says he wants me to play it. He bowls me over completely. To think that I was avoiding and afraid to meet such a man!" (Doesn't it sound like Clementina's Diary dated Oct. 27, 1888? Darling Diary, today I met . . .)

In another place he says of an old actor who paid him a compliment about his "Shoulder Arms," "I wanted to kiss him." (The perfect Clementina.) Charlie Chaplin has an immense admiration for Carl Sandburg, as evidenced in this paragraph: "Carl was there to see me off. I must do or say something extra nice to him. Something he could appreciate. . . . I tried to think of a passage of his poetry to recite. I couldn't. Then it came—the inspiration. 'Where can I buy your book of poems, Carl?'" It's too good to be true. Either Charlie Chaplin is the funniest writer in America or he is the greatest satirist. "My Trip Abroad" is almost as good parlor reading as Daisy Ashford. One thing that may be said about it without a chance of being wrong is that it is one of the few volumes of reminiscences written by the reminiscencer himself. A professional writer would have died of laughter at himself for writing it. Unless—and this is an idea—Sir James Barrie did it in one of his Daisy moods!

Women the World Over

Married women in France are virtually enslaved, as under the provisions of an old law they surrender their individuality upon marriage.

Women stockholders of the Pennsylvania railroad now number 66,504, or 46.90 per cent of the total shareholders of the corporation.

Nearly 30,000 farm women in New York state are members of the Home Bureau federation, which is organized in every county in the state.

Many women talented in the arts and public expression have been discovered on farms in New York through the Home Bureau federation.

Suburban Debaters Meet

These are the Proviso High school debating teams, who will meet the New Trier High school next Friday in their first contest of the season for suburban championship. Proviso takes the negative and New Trier the affirmative of the proposition, "Resolved, That the policy of the closed shop in industry is justifiable." The contest will be held at Maywood.

The members are, left to right: Standing—Joseph Branson, Edward Franzus, and Jacob Peller. Sitting—Irma Pigorsz, W. N. Brigance (coach), and Ruth McNeil.

Lyons and Proviso High schools will meet on March 24, holding two contests on the same evening, one at La Grange and one at Maywood. Each affirmative team will debate at home, while the negative team goes to the opposing school. On March 25 the Proviso affirmative team will meet J. Sterling Morton at Cicero.

The Suburban Debating league was organized last fall with J. Sterling Morton, New Trier, Lyons, and Proviso, as members.

Each school in the league has scheduled four debates, two affirmative and two negative. The school winning the highest percentage will be declared suburban champion and awarded a silver loving cup.

If you're looking for Good Luck—Look First for This Stamp

On the Inside of Your CHINESE GOOD LUCK RING

Don't Be Misled by Cheap Imitations!

THERE is only one authentic Chinese Good Luck Ring—unearthed after months of travel, adventure and research. It is around this original ring only that ancient Chinese legend weaves an age-old history of unfailing Good Luck.

To purchase a cheap imitation of this ring is to make a useless expenditure. A pen without ink would be more useful than a Good Luck Ring without the ⋿. The cheap imitations have no authority, legend, history or superstition surrounding them.

The original ring only is stamped with the ⋿ inside and is the only ring that the Chinese worship, claiming for it uncanny powers to bring Good Luck, Health, Happiness, Prosperity and Long Life to the wearer

It is this original and genuine ring stamped with the ⋿ that brought Al Jolson the Good Luck he speaks about in "Bombo." It is the ring that Frank Bacon, of "Lightnin'," cherishes. It is the ring that Fanny Brice of the Ziegfeld Follies states brought her $2,000 forty-eight hours after she put the ring on her finger—the ring that has brought Good Luck to thousands everywhere, including many of America's most successful business and professional men and women.

Buy your ring to-day, but get it from your local jeweler and make sure the ⋿ is stamped inside. Almost as many of these rings are being sold in solid gold as in sterling silver

Do You Know A Happily Married Woman? 18K ⋿

Ten million American wives have this same ⋿ stamped inside their wedding rings. If you know a married woman who seems to you to be particularly happy look inside her ring. You'll undoubtedly find a ⋿ there. Just as you must look for this stamp inside the Good Luck ring to be sure it is genuine, so you will be sure that the wedding ring stamped with a ⋿ is genuine solid gold or platinum, plain or properly decorated or carved—and the best that money can buy.

THE POCKET EDITION OF THE NOVELS OF A. S. M. HUTCHINSON

William Lyon Phelps in The New York Times says:

"Hutchinson has published four novels and I heartily recommend them all: 'Once Aboard the Lugger—': 'The Happy Warrior': 'The Clean Heart': 'If Winter Comes.'"

IF WINTER COMES

The novel that every one is reading. Over three hundred thousand copies have been sold. "Read it today so that you can talk about it with the rest of the world."—The Boston Herald.

Once Aboard the Lugger—

Heywood Broun says: "'Once Aboard the Lugger' is one of the merriest books ever written."

The Happy Warrior

E. F. Edgett in The Boston Transcript says: "A great story which must surely win for its author a high place among the novelists whose work endures."

The Clean Heart

The New York Sun says: "Power and strength and humor and human nature are here."

THE SETTLING OF THE SAGE

By HAL G. EVARTS

Grant Overton, in the Philadelphia Ledger, says:

"After 'The Virginian' I lost my taste for the run of Western stories, and for some years I have thought I should never enjoy another. But 'The Settling of the Sage' has kept me to the end. The restraint did it; no show-off gun play; no slop-over love making. Real action; and when it comes Evarts handles it with a Spartan simplicity."

Said Prince Shan, ruler of China:

"You will observe that on paper, at any rate, Japan is the great gainer. She takes Australia, New Zealand and India. China absorbs Thibet and reestablishes her empire of forty years ago. France escapes. Rightly or wrongly, the whole of Germany's post-war animosity was directed against England. Great Britain has taken the League of Nations to her heart. It was a very dangerous thing to do."

"Though—We Die,

we have bright hopes," said the young revolutionist, condemned to death. It was enough for him that he believed, and could give his life for what he considered the nobler social and political order that he insisted was to come.

Unitarians think of a grander order, a universal society, a Commonwealth of Man, as the consummation of the whole course of human history, the result of the toils and struggles of all the generations of men.

If you have faith that the world can be made to move toward this perfect goal, and will go on in life with strength and courage because of that faith, write to Coblenz As It Looks Today . . . .

BY H. J. MANN

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

COBLENZ.—However much critics may differ on other matters, there is no doubt that one thing today in Coblenz is exactly as it was three years ago—the weather. The returning traveler, who spent the winter of 1918-'19 with the 3d army, could realize, without lifting his eyes from the ground, that he was again in Coblenz. For nowhere, apparently, does the gentle rain so persistently fall and form puddles whose evasion is impossible as in Coblenz, and only in Coblenz, despite a constant washing from the skies, do the street and gutters look as if they had never been cleaned.

When he lifts his eyes from the rain-soaked ground, however, the returning traveler finds much that is different. The shops, for one thing, are filled with eatables—bread, chocolates, milk, bacon, and a thousand other things that seemingly has ceased to exist for German civilians when the armistice came, and he thinks sadly of the days when a cake of soap and a bar of chocolate were open sesame to anything that his fancy craved.

Soap, but It Isn't Used.

The population has all the soap it desires these days and yet, strangely enough, the porters and loafers at the Bahnhof are still as unwashed as in the days when soap was rare as radium and the waiters in the middle class hotels still serve the meals with the same dirty fingers of yore.

Gone, too, are they all, the old familiar places, where for 2 marks the harassed doughboy could park his khakied form on an American shoe shining chair and let a horny handed fraulein scrape the mud of Neuwied or Hoenningen off his number ten hobnails. In the spring following the armistice there were literally dozens of these shops, all seemingly doing a capacity business, but today the sole trace of all their glory is a modest sign in the Coblenzer hof, "Shoe Shines Here."

The Story of Mr. Delaney.

Memory recalls one Delaney, a rear rank private in the 9th infantry, who was once detected by his corporal in the act of walking in the middle of a Coblenz street, engaged in the not particularly difficult task of deliberately stepping in mud puddles and getting his shoes dirtied. An explanation was required and he made it.

"There's a Fraulein in that shoe shining place back there," he explained, "and her and me hits it off well. But there's a duty-struck M. P. at the door and when the shine's done I gotta get out. If I wanta speak to her, I gotta get my shoes shined."

With a happy smile the martyr stood his ground while a Q. M. C. truck passed within a foot of him, covering him with mud. "I'll need a double shine to get this off," he explained.

Absorbed in his recollections, the returning traveler walks from the station towards the center of town. He comes to the Kaiser Wilhelm strasse and sees familiar sights. There to the left of him is a little bridge and, if you pass under it and walk a little ways, you come to what was Evacuation hospital No. 2. Here the flu cases in the third army were brought and from this hospital the first American in the third army to die of that dread scourge was buried. At the time a slight wave of maudlinity ran through the troops—it was not enough to have dodged the bullets and the monkey meat, they recognized, to be certain of a safe return to Pueblo and Wilkesbarre and Greenhaven.

Chocolate Day at Hospital.

There were goldbrickers, too, at the hospital and, at the particular time referred to, the marines were well represented with two private, all the marines there were at that particular hospital. It was chocolate day at the Red Cross hut and the men, who had been lined up for hours, filed past the Red Cross girl, received their chocolate and two crullers, which was the sternly fixed limit, and returned to their corners to consume their booty.

At 7 in the evening the distribution was over and the Red Cross girl approached one of the two marines and said:

"How many marines are in this hospital?"

"Two."

"But I counted over fifty in the line this afternoon."

"That was us two, ma'am, filing around.

The road leads to the Schloss strasse, and just before this is reached a large sign strikes the eye, "The Berlitz School." Here, in the Berlitz school, was the headquarters of the army educational commission, which sent soldiers to the Sorbonne and Oxford and the rest of the French and English universities and which was the father of the system of schools which now enables the enlisted man to continue a sort of vocational training undisturbed by the fact that he is in the army.

Red Cross Work Is Cut.

At the Schloss strasse, the home of the welfare organizations, American flags greet the eye. A newcomer, as against January 1919, is the Salvation Army, but the Y. M. C. A. and the Red Cross retain their old locations. The Red Cross has moved directly across the street and occupies much smaller premises than formerly, for its work has to a large extent diminished.

The Festhalle itself, at the end of the street, is unchanged.

The route now leads past the kaiser's castle and the former imperial chapel, now used by the army. At the end of the street a mysterious building, freshly painted white and labeled "Esplanade," attracts attention. Closer inspection and a slight strain of the memory identify it as the old "Hostess House," in which, by regular brushing of the hair, shining of the shoes, and elimination of soldier adjectives from the mother tongue, one could get a good meal if accompanied by a woman worker. Late in the evening, too, there was dancing, to music from a single violin, with the jazz band as yet unknown to Coblenz.

Soldiers Buy Clothes Now.

The street runs to the Rhine. On each side are shops obviously angling for the soldier trade, with apparent success. Khaki cloths are on sale, now that the soldier buys his own clothes, and interested doughboys seem to be studying the latest cuts and designs. And then out upon the Rhine.

Ehrenbreitstein, as was to be expected, remains where it was. A small flag floats up on the heights, but it is impossible to recognize whether it is American or not.

The most striking change that at once attracts the attention of the revisitor to Coblenz is the difference in the American soldiers to be seen in the streets.

Even superficially, the difference is large. The soldier of the 3d army, in the winter of 1918-1919 had one thought to the exclusion of all others, that of getting home as fast as possible. The soldier of the permanent army of occupation, too, has one thought to the exclusion of all others, that of staying where he is as long as possible.

The American soldiers to be seen in the streets of Coblenz at the present time are the equal of any soldiers in any army anywhere in military bearing, neatness, courtesy, discipline, and the hundred little things that go to make up the good soldier. The reason is very simple. "Bad soldiers get sent home," in the words of Maj. Bagby, the army's intelligence officer. And while there may be no place like home, a rate of exchange of a hundred and eighty marks to the dollar, plus no restriction on beers and wines, plus the general feeling that service on the Rhineland is intrinsically more worthwhile than routine garrison duty elsewhere, is something else again.

YOU'LL KNOW NEXT SUNDAY

THE thousands of grade and high school children who participated in The Tribune's George Washington essay contest will be pleased to learn that the winners of the prizes, which total $11,650, will be announced in The Sunday Tribune of next Sunday, March 19.

During the closing days of the contest the number of essays received fairly overwhelmed those in charge of the contest, and ever since its close on Feb. 22, the anniversary of Washington's birth, the judges have been delving through the mass of manuscripts. They are now nearing the close of their work and the results will be ready next Sunday.

The judges, all members of the faculty of the Joseph Medill School of Journalism, which is a part of Northwestern university, already have expressed themselves as highly gratified by the general character of the essays, and by the wide knowledge of the father of his country which has been displayed by the school children.

A PIANO IS A PURCHASE FOR A LIFETIME

Now is the Time to Procure Exquisite Satisfaction

This week shows many attractive values in pianos. The display is very extensive. Hundreds of instruments are shown. If you are thinking of buying a piano, now is the time to make your selection. The display here offers ample opportunity to save.

Over 15 manufacturers are represented. Prices have been lowered in several lines. We are reducing our stock as much as possible. This means that you obtain exceptional values here. Read our terms below.

All pianos shown are plainly marked with price tags. They are thoroughly guaranteed and present splendid musical qualities. They are pleasing in every way. Come in to see them.

The Captivating New Grands

Foremost among these pianos is the Steinway Grand. Priced only at $1,375, it sustains delightfully the reputation of the makers of "The Instrument of the Immortals." Admirers of the Steinway tone will be greatly interested by the new models which are shown. They are in the latest case designs and finished in mahogany, oak or walnut.

Rapidly extending its reputation as being the modern instrument for the home, is the Lyon & Healy Apartment Grand Piano. Cases are distinctive, graceful, and beautiful, and they are finished in mahogany and oak. The tone of the instrument is remarkable. The piano fairly sings under the fingers. Notable improvements such as the Junior Pedals have won for this dainty piano the acclaim of all who have seen and heard it. Prices begin at $900.

The grand piano is the dominating feature in the home. About it clusters the family interests. Its grace and beauty are a daily inspiration. Durably built in classic design, the Brambach Baby Grand is a piano of unusual value. Priced at a sum no more than that asked for a good upright piano, it is within the reach of all. Come in to see this attractive grand. You will be delighted with it. Priced at $635.

Uprights of Chaste Design

This group in our display is one of great appeal. The pianos all enjoy a reputation for superior musical quality. Many attractive bargains are shown among them.

At $350, the Washburn piano is an unusual buy. Remarked throughout the world for durable construction and splendid tone, this piano is an unequaled value. The cases are double veneered in mahogany, oak or walnut. They are in the newest designs. Another advantage in the Washburn piano is that now you may obtain as part of its regular equipment, the Junior Unfolding Pedals. This fact alone deserves your consideration of the Washburn.

Another interesting group comprises sample pianos. These, with pianos taken in exchange, offer a solution to those who have wanted a good instrument at a low figure.

Used Grand Pianos

Very choice grands are included in this group. In musical condition and appearance, they leave nothing to be desired. Repair work has been done with such happy results that the mirror-like surfaces of the pianos appear as a recent factory product.

OUR TERMS—EASY TO PAY

When you choose your instrument here, all that is necessary to pay down is a small sum as evidence of good faith. You may take 30 months to pay the balance. Liberal allowances given on all instruments taken in part exchange. Remember, now is the time to buy! You have wanted a piano. This is your opportunity! If you cannot call in person, send in the memo above. Mail it today.

Dainty Grands at a New Low Price

Be sure to see this wonderful piano. Our supply is limited. If you are in any way interested, come early. It is a piano of such high character that you will not find its equal anywhere at the price. Its musical quality and artistic beauty stamp it as an instrument which you would be happy to own. Priced at $535.

Players and Reproducing Pianos

These magnificent instruments take a prominent part in our display. The player pianos shown have a crisp tone and perfect action. The Lyon & Healy Player at $730, brings music to everyone. It plays all standard rolls. For manual playing too, it is in appearance and tone a high grade instrument. In upright models only.

The Aeolian Upright Player Piano at $575, is another instrument of sterling qualities.

The versatility of the Duo-Art Reproducing Piano is remarkable. It reproduces perfectly the playing of the great pianists. It places at your command the art of the masters. You may obtain it either in upright or grand models. Prices begin at $750.

The Lyon & Healy Reproducing Piano is an instrument of unusual character and value. With it you may fill your evenings with the music of Paderewski, Ganz, Gabrilowitsch and many others. The tone is rich, full and resonant. It is a piano whose physical beauty enhances the home it graces. Upright and grand models. Prices begin at $990.

POPULAR SCIENCE By S. F. Maxwell

Through the MICROSCOPE

THE PAST IS WITH US ALWAYS.

THE Cambrian seas have not vanished. We still have them, filled with weird paleozoic shapes of plant and beast. Ancient types are not extinct. They are only shrunken—small, as if to escape the scrutinizing eye of time.

Revolutions come periodically in the history of the world. Old orders of things grow stale and are violently overturned. This not only happens in the affairs of men, but throughout the realm of plants and animals. There have been twenty-four revolutions since the Cambrian age, twenty-four times when dominant schemes of life were almost obliterated.

But no revolution ever sends all creatures to extinction. Individuals may be wiped out, even races may perish, but their designs, their life patterns, persist forever. Life patterns exist today identical with the original protoplasm, and with every pattern from the protoplasm up to man. The bizarre, the experimental, the less successful of each pattern are gone, but the tried examples remain. We can find great numbers of them in the microscopic objects of today.

Cambrian lakes are now mere puddles; the Cambrian oceans are ponds of stagnant water. Direct descendants of the trilobites still live as pond crustacea, algae are much the same now as then, and worms have not advanced from those distant eras to the present.

A drop of pond water swarms with life. It is the life of one cell, of ciliated creatures, of worms, of animals on stalks whose mode of life resembles that of old Crinoidea.

In the drop are many weeds and floating strands of plant. Looking through them we behold a transparent brute come looping by. He seems as big as an alligator, with wide open jaws and long lashing whips for teeth. He fastens himself to a strand of weed, extends his long body, expands, opens his mouth, and works his external organs furiously. He is a rotifer, a worm, barely visible to the naked eye, but a fearful looking object in the microscope.

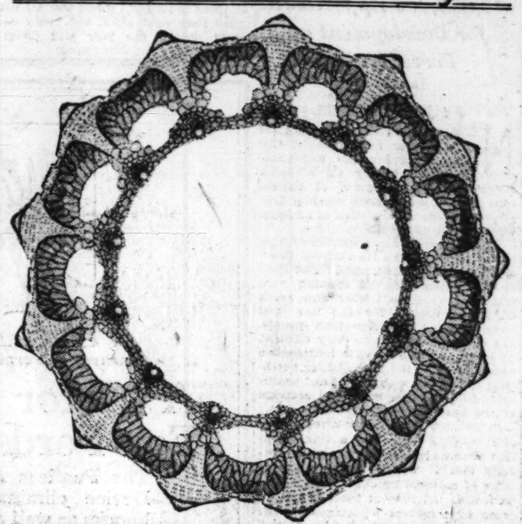
Presently a trumpet shaped vorticellum comes swimming up and anchors not far away. We have an opportunity to see the difference in cells. The vorticellum is a one-celled animal, while a rotifer consists of many cells and stands midway between a protozoan and a man. Yet the one cell of the former is larger than the whole rotifer. It has the same life pattern, and apparently makes its living quite as well.

The subject of orders of animals and their life patterns is one of great interest. Have you followed the history of the community where you lived as a child, and watched how it changed with time? Perhaps it was not as progressive as it might have been. The younger, more eager people moved out as they came to maturity. Sometimes whole families would leave. The old people died, and in time most of the actual inhabitants of the place were gone. Yet the houses remained the same. New tenants came as the old ones left. Some new structures were erected, perhaps, and some old ones changed. The houses correspond exactly to the life patterns of animals, the new tenants to the animals themselves.

The world is filled with remnants of distant ages. When we learn to read them rightly we can know all the history of the past, for it is here.

Botany



A TEMPLE IN A REED.

THE architecture of plants puts man's finest works to shame and makes his best bridges and cathedrals seem poor structures in comparison. Here is a cross section of the stem of a scouring rush. This plant raises a narrow stem to a height of a hundred times its own diameter. It can withstand the weight of the heaviest snows without injury.

As you notice, the stem is made of a succession of arches. Externally hanging arches span between piers of silica. The piers themselves rest on barrel vaults, the green cells between are arched together on the pointed vault principle, and the vascular corridors below are connected by a series of internal hanging arches.

In an adult equisetum there may be more than twenty such arch systems within the circumference of the stem. The vaults do their work well. This is abundantly testified by the plant's ability to live in places where other vegetables can gain no foothold.

MAN

NORDICS LOVE EXCITEMENT.

PEOPLE carry their characters and capabilities in their faces as plain to read as though each wore a sign with staring letters on it, proclaiming what he was. Can you tell whether a certain man is given to taking chances, even if you have only seen him once? Can you pick out the sellers in a crowd, the mixers or the diplomats?

Science asserts that every human being is born with a certain capacity for success in any line of activity. He has unique possibilities. He is foreordained to rise to his inherent heights no matter under what handicaps he may labor. Those who are successful in the world are those who recognize their peculiar aptitudes and follow them to success. Those who fail are those who cannot or will not see their limitations in what they undertake, who do not survey their capabilities and the various possibilities that are before them.

All men are not alike. The greatest difference exists between man and man. It is well that this is so. In our country there are men of all races and all types, each with peculiar aptitudes. There is no work to be done but that a man cannot be found for it. This is why the United States excels.

No race is more gifted than the Aryan, and of that race no type is more peculiar than the Nordic. There are three types of Aryan—Cromagnon, Celtic, and Nordic. Aryans differ from all other men. They average large of stature, pink of face, and blonde of hair and eyes. The Cromagnon averages the darkest of the Aryans, the Celts fairest, with Nordics standing between the two. Pure Nordic hair is never completely black. Neither is it flaxen yellow nor fiery red. Nordic eyes when untinged by the pigment of other races are always blue.

You can tell a Nordic at a glance.

Capt. Roald Amundsen, Discoverer of the South Pole. He Is a Nordic.

He has a head that is long from front to back, a face that is long from brow to chin, convex profile, slanting forehead, narrow cheek bones, lank, often sunken cheeks, a long, sharp nose, and a well developed chin. There are two general types of Nordic, the tall Gothic and the shorter Anglo-Saxon.

A Nordic mind is as unique as the Nordic build. Its views are ectrospective. It looks outward. A Nordic does not see himself, but only external objects. Nordics are childlike in their understanding of people and their moods, but wizards at comprehending things. They find it difficult to understand simple factors of human emotion, but easy to sense the slightest knock in the running of an engine.

The Nordic mind is a product of the ancient Nordic habitat. The type was evolved amid the snow. Nordics enter history as savages whose center of dispersion lay in the basin of the Baltic sea, close under the Scandinavian glaciers of the ice age. Their present native home lies in those nations which border on the Baltic, the North sea, and the north Atlantic ocean. There is no large tract of land, even to the two poles, where these men have not gone. America is largely a Nordic country. On State and Madison streets, in the heart of Chicago, 63 per cent of the people who passed in one hour were Nordics, notwithstanding the fact that Chicago has a large population of races other than Aryan.

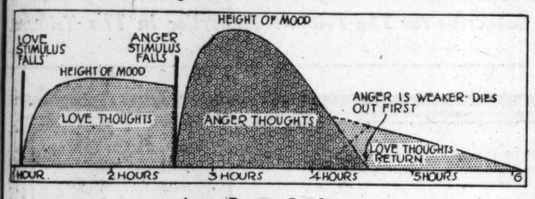
A Nordic's energy is expended in spurts. He works like a gas engine, by bursts, with rests between. For this reason he best succeeds at pursuits of an intermittent sort, hard one hour, and relaxed the next. He is unhappy when confined to routine toil, and fails at it.

Nordics love to fight. They are assertive against both man and nature, and they understand combativeness better than any other type on earth. They are attracted to the military professions. Nordics love adventure. They enjoy taking chances. They are attracted by a seafaring life, to exploration, to prospecting, and athletics. The more intellectual of them gravitate to invention, science, business, promoting, and the like. They require an active life. Police and fire departments, postal employés, chauffeurs, and skilled workmen in purely mechanical lines are largely Nordic.

Activity which deals with objects suits the Nordic best. He is not so much attracted to the routine business of selling, to art or music, the theater, to politics, or any pursuit requiring a considerable knowledge of psychology.

Few people are so lacking that they can not adapt themselves to some extent, no matter how out of their environment they may be. But averages will tell. Count the heads of blond hair you find in some mercantile establishments and then the percentage you find among the players at a ball park. Experiments like this will show you how the Nordic types seek out their own environment.

Psychology



Anger Drowns Out Love.

SHOCK CAUSES MIND.

HAVE you a metronome, one of those pyramidal affairs with an inverted pendulum, used for marking off time for music practice? Set it up to beat at a slow pace, turn your face toward a light, and close your eyes. Notice that at each click your perception of light vanished for an instant. A wave of blackness comes over the dull red of your closed eyelids. You were blinded at each tick of sound.

A weak noise, you find, suffices to destroy your sense of light. Blindness followed instantly after each perception of sound, you find.

Some night, when the air is extremely quiet, set up the metronome, or start a drip of water. Listen to the strident notes. Feel the uncomfortable sensation of each stroke. These sounds illustrate the phenomena of shock.

Shock is the basis of all mind. The nerve endings of the perceptions are exposed to the external world for the express purpose of receiving impressions. Eyes feel light, ears feel sound, noses feel odor, skins feel touch, each feels its own peculiar stimuli. Each feeling shocks. When the stimulus falls, a wave runs along the nerve. As it passes down the psychic train it causes certain things to happen. It does not matter on what sense perception strikes, the shocks are always the same in nature. They are weak or strong, depending on the strength of the event and of the sense organ's power to perceive it.

An instant after each impression falls a period of paralysis results on all nerve paths other than the one of that perception. All other perceptions are automatically locked out, and a wave passes only on the train in question. The sound perception of the metronone was far stronger than your sense of sight. Its shock locked out the visual train; your mind for an instant was a blank to light and was conscious only of sound.

You can experiment on any perception you desire. Suppose you have a toothache. The pain is a succession of shocks, relatively weak but over nerves of great perceiving power. Lay a warm iron against your cheek. Your perception for heat is much weaker than for tooth pain, but the nervous stimulation is much stronger. The warmth locks out the pain until such a time as the heat perceiving nerves are fatigued by long continued action.

The practice of savages, who beat gongs, shake rattles and pound drums over a sick person has considerable fact to recommend it. In the absence of all other measures of palliation, sound undoubtedly does inhibit pain, and brings some measure of relief.

Did you ever smash your finger with a hammer? You danced and shook your hand, did you not, and thus locked out a great deal of the pain you might have felt?

Shocks cause moods. Every shock calls up all the memories caused by former shocks of the same nature and excites the passion it is connected with into activity. Moods can result only from a shock on some sense. A stronger mood will always supplant a weaker one. Sometimes a shock of high intensity, as anger, will fall while a mood of lower intensity, but greater persistence, such as love, is in progress. The anger mood locks out the love mood, and only anger memories and imaginations rule the mind. At length these grow weak and disappear and the love mood, with its memories and imagination, return to thought.

INSECTS

A BEETLE FOR A KILL.

I OFTEN noticed the carcasses of beetles and large bugs hung in spider webs. After a night's hunting was over a dozen victims of the kill might be found, suspended like bluebeard victims to the wall. It seemed incomprehensible to me that so weak an animal as a spider would catch and kill a heavily armored, carnivorous beetle half a dozen times its weight. I would watch and see how it was done.

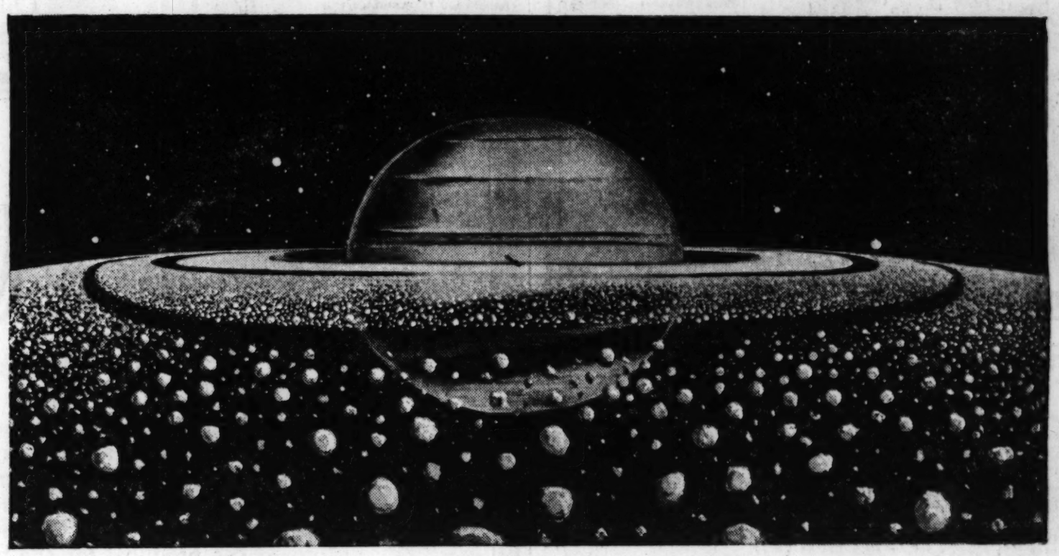
Shortly after dark I took a stool and flash lamp, and went down into the basement. Ground beetles were already running. They were ponderous, clumsy things, huge of jaw and thorax, and infinitesimal in intelligence, out preying on weaker insects. Their mode of seeking food was to run until they met a victim, to eat him on the spot, and go trotting on for more. Some instinct prompted many to seek the angle of the floor and wall. Undoubtedly many creatures, tired of climbing, dropped there and were rich feeding for the beetles. It was here that the spiders laid their snares.

I watched one spinning. She laced a few strands across the angle, made herself a platform to hang on, and began her watching. Hours passed. Beetles were running everywhere, sometimes quite near the web. She paid no attention to them. If her eight eyes saw them, she gave no sign of it. But at last a huge carabid came lumbering under the web, hugging the wall, and turning neither to the right nor to the left.

She recognized a victim. She crouched. He broke the strands of her web. She sprang like a panther, not on him, but beside him, and threw out a ribbon of web. Each strand was gleaming with glue. It caught the beetle's feet, low down on the tarsi, and instantly was tangled in his spiny hairs. Still plying line, she leaped back to her web. One, two, three inches of ribbon she played out, while the beetle kicked and struggled. Then she stopped and began climbing. Her legs strained with the load, the web sagged, but did not break; she lifted the beetle bodily from the ground. His jaws gnashed, his powerful legs pulled, he tore and struggled, all impotently, in the air. She made his cables fast and let him swing an inch above the floor. Then sliding down the web she threw out more silk. She climbed around him many times, winding line. He was tied and helpless. He struggled on, but his efforts barely served to stretch his bonds. She had him; he was hers. Then gluing him to her spinnerettes, she bit his moorings loose and carried him high up the wall to her lair. There she moored him down again and bit his armor open at a joint. With leisure and with great enjoyment she drank his contents, swelling as she did, until only his empty skeleton remained.

ASTRONOMY



Saturn from the Ring.

A JOURNEY TO SATURN.

TWO planets rise before 9 tonight. Watch for them as they come gleaming over the bare tree tops. The lower and brighter one is Jupiter, the lesser and upper one is Saturn.

Let us take a journey through the telescope and visit Saturn from close range. The room under the dome in the observatory is dark. Entering from the lighted hallways we are blinded for an instant. Then gradually we see objects silhouetted in the darkness —the open shutter in the roof, the stars beyond, a huge black tube before the gap, a ponderous upright to support the tube, then wheels, dials, and controls upon the mechanism.

An astronomer comes to escort us to the observing ladder. We climb its many steps. Looking down we perceive that we are high above the floor; over us and stifling by its nearness is the black bulk of the telescope.

The control lamps click on, and by their yellow gleam we discern the eyepiece, a little lens no larger than a nail head, set in a circle of controls. It is through this lens that we shall look.

We glimpse the universe through a peep hole. A foot away we seem to see the sky, a lighter disc encompassed by the blackness of the eyepiece. It is hard to realize that we do not behold a material something there, but that the great front lens has seized our sight and magnified it a thousandfold.

The telescope is moving, guided by the astronomer at the finding glass. Little stars flit by, nameless suns, perhaps, in the vast universe. A gleam of brightness lights the field. The telescope slows down, and out of the darkness comes the planet.

You will never forget your first view of Saturn. The human mind does not let go of memories of strange sights and startling events. There is nothing in the world that looks like Saturn. Pictures are poor, limping caricatures of its majestic ball, its streaked belts, its flying moons, and the round encircling rings. The sight through the telescope is one of fascination. Saturn hangs supportless in the empty sky, a thing unreal, alive, fantastic, beyond the ken of imagination. Its colors contrast blindingly with the blue black of the vault beyond.

Saturn is one of the major planets. The earth would seem puny, indeed, beside this globe. The rings alone exceed the whole circumference of the world. The black rift of Cassini's division, that seems so fine and small, is actually wider than the distance from New York to Denver.

Our minds slip through the telescope while our bodies are in the chair, and in fancy we go flying out through space.

We go a million miles. Is this enough? No. A million miles is but one step when reckoned in celestial measurements. Saturn lies more than 800 of such steps away.

We fly and fly, past Mars, past the Asteroids, past Jupiter, by more Asteroids, and on until the form of Saturn looms huge out of the blackness.

Ten moons light up the Saturn scene, revolving ceaselessly. Saturn is a world of moons. The ring is made of moons, countless billions of them, plunging on in never ending sheets. Each moon and moonlet pursues its orbit as though it were alone.

The swarms that make the ring come racing by like cannon balls. The ring is a flat sheet of particles, a true flat land in the most literal pre-Columbian sense. We watch the moonlets flying. Rifts open and close in their swarms, and the crowd appears to boil. What could be the cause of this? Look over your shoulder. Do you see that bread faced moon behind you, beyond the ring? It is the cause.

The moonlets in the ring run faster than their fellows outside, and so can usually pull away before their orbits are disturbed. All except those moonlets whose orbits occupy positions in the rift are in equilibrium. The moons whose periods of revolution bear some ratio to the periods of the larger moons, as 1 to 2 or 2 to 3, periodically overtake their tormentors, and are subjected to a rhythimic pull. Cassini's division is caused by the first moon, Mimas, just outside the ring. This moon has swept a furrow through the ring in which no particle can rest.

The globe of Saturn is spinning furiously. It is a world of gas, a sphere hotter than fire and lighter than water, Saturn and the Earth.

a world half formed. So tremendous is the centrifugal force of its rotation that its equator is bulged one-tenth in a diameter of 74,000 miles.

We take a light beam back to the earth. We see our planet far below as a little crescent speck beside the sun. We race two hours on the light waves, back through the telescope.

"Did you have a good look?" asks the astronomer.

"Excellent, but tell us, are there any other sights as marvelous as this?"

"My dear people," he replies, "I have been looking through this telescope for years, and I have not yet visited a tenth of the objects within its light grasp."

Questions and Answers

M. J.: "What does death mean—the extinction of the individual, with all his hopes and promises?" you ask. Science asserts that nothing dies in vain. Some good comes of every suffering and every extinction. It may not be apparent, and may seem unnecessary at the time, but when the whole story is told we can realize that it fulfilled a need as nothing else could do. Every step of our progress upward has been paid for with pain and death. Death is as natural as birth. After our span of life is up we must return to the earth to be re-solved. All the instants of our lives' forces are at work whose destiny it is to destroy us. It is for us, the living, to profit by the deaths we see and avoid similar pitfalls for ourselves.

C. H.: The aerial is connected to one end of the tuning coil and one side of the receiver circuit springs from this same point. The ground wire is fastened to its slide, and the return side of the receiver circuit to a second slide. This is the best hook-up for a double slide tuning coil.

J. D. B.: The lenses for microscope eye pieces should be strong magnifiers.

U. K. M.: An aerial will work if hung in a hallway. It will work better on the roof.

B. M.: The ratios of turns for a loose coupler should be about 60 to 90.

RADIO

ELECTROMAGNETIC WAVES MAKE WIRELESS.

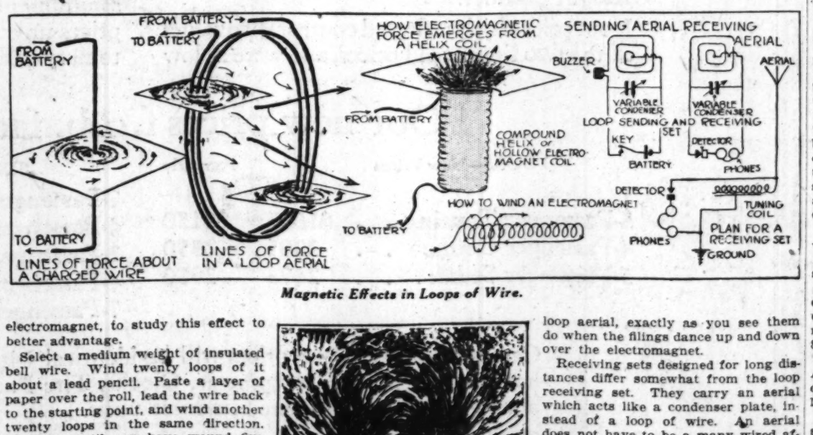
THERE is a close connection between magnetism and electricity. Procure a toy magnet, lay a sheet of paper or a piece of glass upon it, and dust it with iron powder. Iron filings will serve, or you may buy 10 cents worth of reduced metallic iron at the drug store.

Magnetism, you notice, penetrates most substances as easily as it goes through air. As the filings fall they arrange themselves in lines about the magnet. These lines have a peculiar pattern. They are densest at the ends, or poles of the magnet, and thinnest at its middle. Some span across the bars, while others take wide paths from pole to pole. Iron filings reveal the magnets' lines of force. This force was invisible until iron was placed in it. The filings were magnetized by its attraction, and fell in shapes approximating that of the magnetic field.

The magnetism of a steel magnet is permanent. It remains constant under ordinary conditions. But there are other forms of closely related magnetism that do not remain stationary.

Connect several strong dry cell batteries together, zinc to carbon, in a series, and put a verticle wire around their terminals for a circuit. Have his circuit wire pierce a card. After the circuit is closed, sprinkle iron filings around the spot where the wire goes through the card. Notice the rings of force that form about the wire. Open the circuit, and see them vanish. A wire is magnetic so long as a current of electricity is flowing through it.

Wind three turns of wire into a loop. Let each side of the loop pierce a card. When the current is turned on the lines of force appear much stronger than around the single wire. Electricity makes the loop a magnet, with lines of force pouring out of its face. You should wind a compound helix, or electromagnet, to study this effect to better advantage.



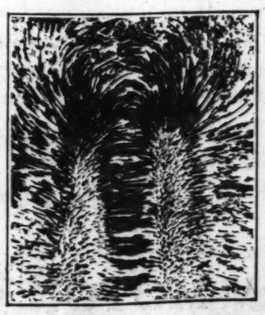
Magnetic Effects in Loops of Wire.

Select a medium weight of insulated bell wire. Wind twenty loops of it about a lead pencil. Paste a layer of paper over the roll, lead the wire back to the starting point, and wind another twenty loops in the same direction. Continue until you have wound five layers.

When a current is sent through this coil its magnetism is quite apparent. Turn the coil open end up, and lay a card on it. Dust down a pile of filings; then switch the current through. See the filings rise. Lines of force are pouring from the open ends. Should you wish to see this even better you might push a piece of soft iron inside the coil. This will condense the lines and make them strongly directed. The coil is now a cored electromagnet. Notice that when the current is shut off all magnetism vanishes.

Lines of force are strains in the ether. When they appear a ripple runs through this medium, and when they vanish another follows. A train of ether waves require only a rapidly pulsing circuit for a generator.

A loop sending set accomplishes just



Lines of Force About a Magnet.

this. The buzzer interrupts the circuit, breaking it up into a succession of strokes. The condenser across the circuit further increases the rapidity of the discharge. When the key is down and the outfit is working a stream of waves pours out from the loop aerial, exactly as you see them do when the filings dance up and down over the electromagnet.

Receiving sets designed for long distances differ somewhat from the loop receiving set. They carry an aerial which acts like a condenser plate, instead of a loop of wire. An aerial does not have to be a many wired affair, strung up between sky high masts; a type of aerial that has found much favor consists of a single wire, about sixty feet long, strung from twenty to forty feet above the ground. It should be as nearly horizontal as possible, and the wire into the house should come from its exact middle or extreme end. Neither aerial nor leadin should sag or be in contact with trees, gutter pipes, or electrical conductors. All wires should be kept at least eight feet away from other wires carrying electricity.

Aerials are sometimes accused of attracting lightning. The evidence shows them to be innocent. When you have finished listening you should ground your aerial to a water pipe or other easy pathway to the earth, to prevent static charges from accumulating on it.

CHEMISTRY

HIGH-FLYING BUBBLES.

GET out your clay bubble pipe and pan of soapsuds. We are going to blow bubbles today. Make a good lather with the soap. It might even be a good plan to soak a piece in a cup of water over night, to make it thoroughly soft before lathering. Buy 5 cents' worth of glycerine at the drug store, and get enough rubber hose to reach well out of doors. These bubbles we are about to make will fly.

Pour the glycerine into the soapsuds. Put in plenty, as much, in fact, as the bubbles seem to stand. Glycerine is great absorber of water. Bubbles burst because their water evaporates, leaving thin places in their walls that cannot sustain pressure. If there is plenty of glycerine in the bubble the water will not evaporate so rapidly. If the day is moist and cloudy the bubble may not burst for hours.

Connect the hose to a gas jet. Smear soap around the junction to keep any gas from leaking out to poison the air indoors. Thrust the bubble pipe in the other end, and turn on a gentle stream of gas. Gas is much lighter than air. Bubbles inflated with it rise rapidly, like little balloons. Touch a fire to some of them in flight, and see the flame. And yet men ride in large balloon relatively just as explosive!

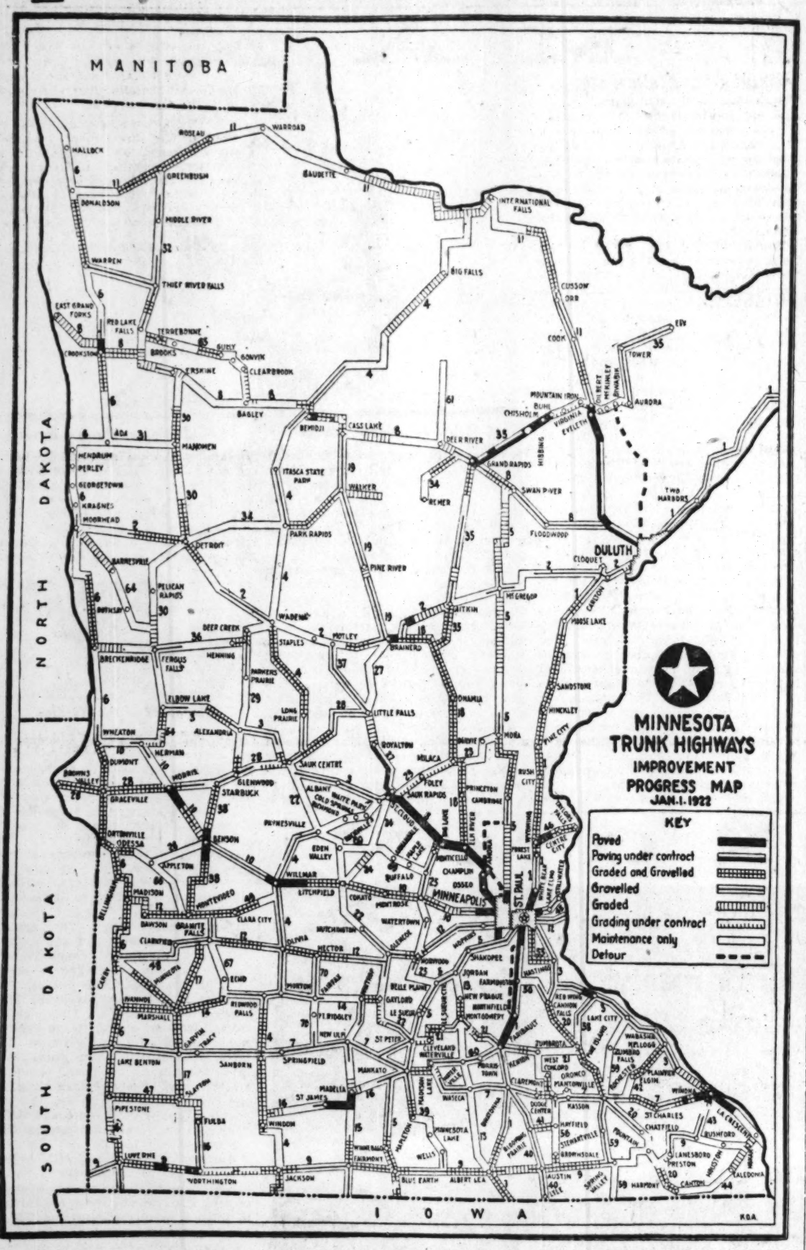
II. MINNESOTA HIGHWAYS.



SAVE THE MAPS

ALTHOUGH Minnesota has paved but 221 miles of its state road system to date, Commissioner Charles M. Babcock has carried out so systematic and successful a plan of grading and graveling preparatory to paving that his state highways this touring season will rival those of Wisconsin for excellence. The accompanying map, No. 2 in THE TRIBUNE state series, shows the condition of Gopher roads at a glance. Cut it out and paste it in the 1922 tour book to link up with other state maps to be published this spring.

One of the most important of the routes for Chicago drivers is No. 3 highway, which connects with No. 33 Wisconsin highway at La Crosse and runs north through magnificent Mississippi hills to St. Paul. The first section out of La Crosse is unimproved but maintained by the state with a short stretch of good paving to La Crescent over the highest hills.

The remainder of the route is good gravel. No. 12, the Yellowstone trail from Minneapolis to the South Dakota line, is gravelel and fair to good all the way. Official state numbers mark all roads.

Wilderness Roads Open New Worlds to Auto Tourists

$15,000,000 Apportioned for Development of Forest Trails.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

NEW frontiers are appearing for the veteran motor tourist this year following the announcement by Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, of federal road fund appropriations totaling $15,000,000 for the construction of national forest roads and trails.

The secretary has apportioned this part of the highway fund among twenty-seven states, Alaska and Porto Rico as an initial step in opening vast tracts of valuable timber and areas of scenic beauty for the use and enjoyment of the American people.

In cooperation with forestry officials, he plans to make hitherto inaccessible wonderlands of the west and far northwest as popular with tourist and health seeker as the best developed sections of the national parks.

In addition to the importance of this new building plan from a transportation standpoint, forestry experts declare that it will save thousands of acres of national timberland each year from fire. At present there are large areas of trackless wilderness in the national forests that cannot be reached by trails. When electrical storms sweep them heavy fire losses occur. Speed in reaching a forest fire, rangers say, is as important a factor in protecting public property as speed in reaching a city fire.

In the past, according to Secretary Wallace, construction of many urgently needed forest roads has been deferred for lack of sufficient funds. Much of the work can now go forward. The forest service estimates that eventually more than $100,000,000 will be required to supply adequate transportation throughout the 156,000,000 acres in national forests, and that the immediate building of primary highways in the system will aid in the popular reforestation movement.

California, Idaho, and Oregon tracts will each receive more than $1,000,000 of the road fund. New Alaskan trails, discovered last year by hundreds of automobile parties wandering far from the beaten tracks, are down for approximately $1,000,000 in improvements. Michigan, whose timber roads have drawn hundreds of thousands of tourists to enjoy delights of the northern peninsula and lake country, will receive $3,638. Some $5,000,000 will be spent in national forest development other than road work, but every cent spent during the year will directly benefit the automobile tourist.

Look to Economy.

For the first time in the history of foreign motor car production one company in France has attained an output of 100 cars a day. The principal reason for this is that the car will travel thirty miles on one gallon of gas. This is something for the motor car engineers to think about. In the last analysis the production and sale of motor cars in this country will depend upon economy of operation and improvement of highways, engineers say.

TWELVE BODY TYPES

With the upholding of Leland tradition, that no Leland-Built motor car ever be permitted to retrogr le or to deteriorate, and with Lelan principles of fine manufacturing extented and intensified, the results are an unmatched measure of roading capabilities, and a measure of stability prolonged far beyond anything which motordom has ever been accustomed to experience.

LELAND-BUILT

R & V-Knight
America's ONLY Knight-Six

We priced our cars for this season, as low as present cost of labor and material allowed and were satisfied to meet any and all competition based on possible production costs,—having faith that our speciality in a Knight-Motored car produces for the buyer maximum value for the cost, and that ou facilities for production are competitively efficient compared with other manufacturers.

We priced our four-cylinder cars higher than the Willys-Knight cars as they are in our opinion worth more money and we felt the public would, upon examination and use, realize this fact and give us our share of the business.

The Willys-Overland Company in their recent reduction have made prices which we believe are below those at which they or any other manufacturer can produce and market their Knight product.

If our prices fairly reflected comparative values of the two lines at old prices, and were as low as today's costs permit, this further price reduction on their part has created a situation which we frankly admit cannot be met on a sound permanent business basis.

We made Knight-Motored cars before the Willys-Overland did, and after eighteen years of building up this automobile business, we have not the slightest intention of retiring because a competitor may temporarily make an unprofitable price which, if not met, might give them a monoply of the Knight business and the power to again make a price of $2300 for their touring car, a price which we never charged for our, we believe, better car, when the seller commanded the market.

We will maintain the relative prices we established on our lines by a straight ten per cent reduction of our prices, reserving the right to increase these prices without notice and assuming no obligation to fill orders at these prices unless same are made firm by the customary cash deposit.

Our new prices f. o. b. factory are:

Mexican Fans to See Real Yankee Automobile Show

BY JOHN CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MEXICO CITY.—[Special.]—The auto show to be held under the auspices of the American chamber of commerce of this city, in the new National theater in April, is well under way. Practically all the American auto factories of importance will be represented in it. Although the floor space is immense, a third of it has already been taken; and the negotiations for space are enough to fill the building. Many of the auto models on exhibition in the New York and Chicago shows will be shipped to Mexico about the middle of March.

The auto show here will be run under American auto show rules, so that American concerns sending exhibits will know in advance the conditions of exhibit.

The automobile business has grown immensely in Mexico during the last two years and there are now in the city 30,000 machines of all kinds, from the heavy auto dray with one or two trailers and the luxurious custom-built car, to the auto bus and omnipresent Ford.

Season Adds 400 Miles of Paving to Lincoln Way

THE Lincoln Highway association, which has been promoting the development of the crosscountry road since 1913, has just compiled the records of the eleven states and ninety-six counties traversed, and announces that improvements in 1921 surpass in extent the work accomplished during any other year in the history of the road's development. Three hundred and ninety-seven miles of new construction were completed at a cost of $7,737,473. Maintenance during 1921 cost the states and counties $1,735,433, so that the total amount expended on Lincoln way betterment was $9,472,906. The additional mileage improved last year represents 12 per cent of the total mileage.

The expenditures on Lincoln improvement in 1921 brought the total expended on this national traffic artery since the dedication of the route in 1913 to over $40,000,000, or more than twice what was originally estimated would build the highway from coast to coast.

What has this vast expenditure meant in the way of tangible improvement; in the way of smoothing the path between New York and San Francisco? The following table shows the mileage of each type of improvement now existing on the Lincoln highway. Here is what you will encounter on a drive between the Atlantic and the Pacific in 1922:

	Miles.
Concrete	521.75
Brick	241.03
Bituminous macadam	383.28
Macadam	287.10
Asphalt	78.00
Creosote block	5.90
Granite block	7.10
Graded gravel	1,052.45
Natural gravel	62.10
Graded earth	526.99
Natural earth	136.00
Sand	3.30
Total	3,805.00

Marking of the Lincoln was finally completed in 1921 when, with the cooperation of the New Jersey state highway department, the last permanent signs were placed along the sixty-mile link between Jersey City and Trenton. The balance of the marking done in 1919 and 1920 has been well maintained, with the result that a uniform marking system now extends from the Hudson river to the Golden Gate. The Lincoln highway is one of the best marked roads in America and this system, installed at such great expense, is a wonderful aid to through traffic.

It is probable that 1922 will see a greater volume of travel along the Lincoln than ever before. Hundreds of thousands will find pleasure and inspiration along its 3,300 miles between the Hudson river and San Francisco bay.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

W. C. DURANT'S "dark horse" of the automobile field went to the post last week in Washington, D. C., with the introduction of the five passenger, $348 Starr car, which was shown for the first time in the Durant sales room. It is an automobile of the conventional type, constructed of standard parts, powered with a Continental Red Seal motor and boasting a disc clutch and selective transmission. The Durant factory promises to open quantity production June 1.

Fred W. Gardner announced last week that his organization is prepared to meet any and all style changes decreed by motor fashions in 1922. He declared that, even in quantity production, the modern moderate priced car must be ready to build its models practically to order to meet the new automotive standards.

Price reductions announced by Willys-Overland and H. C. S. were supplemented last week by announcement by H. S. Hamilton, manager of the Chicago Rolls-Royce branch, of a drop in the Rolls phaeton price to $10,900. American methods employed in the Springfield plant of the famous British car have brought the reduction.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker paused in Chicago last week to draw breath following two months of constant flight from auto show to auto show, and admitted that this year's experience in the manufacture and sales game rivals his war service. He has attended a score of shows since the New York exhibition and has practically doubled the production of his Detroit factory schedule as a result of popular demand for his car.

Sales officials of the Elgin Motor Car company have added the Chevrolet to their lists. An independent organization will handle Chevrolet sales at 2612 Michigan avenue.

L. G. Fairbank, general sales manager for the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, told Chicago tire dealers last week that they may expect the greatest "comeback" in industrial history this year in the automobile and tire business. His prediction comes after a tour of all western states.

Impressive New

CHANDLER SIX

Is Lowest Priced Car Of Its Class

IT is not alone through supreme beauty and mechanical mastery that the new Chandler Six is making its conquering way.

Equally important to buyers is its economy.

No car in its class, wheel base and horse power considered, is priced so low.

Either the cheaper cars are smaller or have less bore and stroke, or both.

This same Chandler price advantage carries through the seven passenger, coupe and sedan models.

Chandler policy has always been to sell a fine car at lowest price. Never has this been so successfully achieved as in the latest Chandler.

If you are—buying for beauty buying for power buying for price

See the Chandler. It is supreme in all three.

Nash Leads the World in Motor Car Value

From 24th to 8th Place

Among Automobile Companies in Less Than Five Years

In five years Nash has risen from 24th to 8th place in volume of annual business among all motor car companies in the industry.

This is a far faster increase than that shown by any other company during the same period.

Today Nash and five other great manufacturing organizations build 84% of all motor cars produced in the United States.

To the best of our belief Nash actually manufactures in its own plants more of the car than any other American builder.

The published Nash financial statement at the end of 1921 showed it to be in about the most liquid and healthy financial condition of any company in the business.

Nash is one of the very few builders of motor cars who entered 1922 with new models and new prices.

Reflect for a moment upon the tremendous significance of those six important statements of fact.

The new Nash line includes twelve models: Four and six cylinders; open and closed; two, three, four, five, and seven passenger capacity; a price range from $965 to $2390, f. o. b. factory. Your car is among them. Come in and drive it.

D'you Know How to Deduct Motor from Income Tax?

Here Is the Latest Word on Auto Exemptions This Year.

THE question of income tax is always somewhat of a puzzle to the average individual, and when it comes to knowing just what expenses connected with the operation of his automobile can be deducted in figuring the amount he is indebted to the goverenment, he is figuratively "out of gas."

The following digest of the income law and the regulations under that law applying to automobiles has been prepared by Walter B. Guy, Washington, D. C., taxation counsel of the National Automobile Dealers' association:

All automobile owners may deduct from their gross income the amount they have paid for license fees, such fees being regarded as a state tax and being deductible as such.

The question is frequently asked whether the federal tax on the sale of new cars, which increases the selling price and is therefore indirectly paid by the purchaser, can be deducted by the buyer. It can only be deducted by the manufacturer who pays it direct. The same is true as to all federal taxes on tires, parts, batteries, and accessories.

The cost of gasoline, ordinary repairs and upkeep of an automobile, including garage rent, and chauffeur's salary, if used wholly for business purposes, is deductible as an expense of the business. The cost of substantial or permanent improvements to the car, such as a new top or body, is not regarded as repairs and is not deductible. A physician, lawyer, or other professional man is entitled to a similar deduction if the car is used primarily for professional purposes.

If the automobile is used partly for business or professional purposes and partly for the pleasure or convenience of the taxpayer or his family, such costs may be apportioned according to the extent of the use for purposes of business and pleasure or convenience, and only the proportion of such cost justly attributable to business or professional purposes is deductible.

The owner of a car used wholly for business purposes of the owner is entitled to deduct a reasonable amount for annual depreciation in the value of the car; the owner of a car which is used solely for pleasure purposes is not entitled to a deduction for depreciation.

If the car is used partly for business and partly for pleasure purposes, the depreciation is to be apportioned accordingly. Thus, if the annual depreciation of your car is figured at $300 and 40 per cent of the mileage for the year was for business purposes, your deduction for depreciation would be $120. In figuring the amount of the depreciation of the car for the taxable year it is necessary first to estimate the probable life of the car in terms of years. The life of a car is ordinarily estimated as from four to seven years, according to the usage. The salvage value of the car should then be estimated as of the end of the active life of the car.

This amount should be deducted from the purchase price and the difference should be divided by the number of years estimated for the life of the car. This gives the annual depreciation.

For example, a new car is purchased for $3,000 on January 1, 1921, and you figure that the active life of the car will be five years and that its salvage value at the end of that time will be $300. You should subtract $300 from $3,000 and divide the balance, $2,700, by five, which would give $540 as the annual depreciation of the car.

You are entitled to a deduction of that amount, provided your car is used exclusively for business or professional purposes, or the proper proportion of it if the car is used partly for business and partly for personal purposes. The life of a car used by a physician is seldom estimated at more than four years.

The premiums for all kinds of insurance carried on an automobile used for business or professional purposes are considered as proper expenses of the business or profession and are deductible as such in computing net income. When the car is also used for pleasure purposes, such an item is deductible, but the item must be apportioned. Thus, if a lawyer used his car 30 per cent of the time for professional purposes, 30 per cent of this item, as well as other costs of upkeep and ordinary repairs, may be deducted.

No matter what the use of the car, any use not covered by insurance and sustained by fire, theft, storm, shipwreck, or other casualty, as well as any amount paid out in settlement of any claim for injuries to the person or property of others, and arising by reason of the operation of the car, is deductible, though for damage to one's own car the cost of the repairs and new parts may be deducted as a business expense or loss only when the car was used for business or professional purposes at the time of the accident.

A salesman who maintains his own car in order to perform his duties to his employer and earn his salary may deduct as a "business expense" the actual expenses satisfactorily shown to have been incurred in the operation of the automobile for business purposes, plus a proper allowance to cover depreciation. If a business or professional man who uses his car for business or professional purposes also uses it to drive from his home to his office, this is not considered a business use, but rather a matter of convenience; and in apportioning the use of the car as between business and pleasure uses, he should not make any deductions for operating costs incident to such use. The cost of a new car is not a deductible item.

The internal revenue department has ruled that amounts paid for violation of laws are not "ordinary or necessary expenses" incurred in the course of a business, and therefore do not constitute allowable deduction for income tax purposes.

The Inquiring Reporter

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Question.

What is the best long tour you ever had?

Where Asked.

Dearborn garage, Grand avenue and Dearborn street.

The Answers.

Maurice Block, St. Regis hotel, salesman—Perhaps the best long auto trip I ever took was one I made from New York to Chicago last June. It was a two days' trip and I took in Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and Detroit. The weather was fine, the roads good most of the way, and the scenery everywhere varied and interesting.

J. J. Zoller, owner Illinois Star garage, Cass and Illinois streets—The most enjoyable, and incidentally the longest, trip I ever took was from Chicago to Pensacola, Fla., and return. We stopped at Mammoth cave, also paused for a while at Chattanooga. Lookout mountain was interesting. Didn't have to change a tire or a spark plug.

George Hoey, Raleigh hotel, actor—My star trip was a certain one from Venice, Cal., to New York City. My, what variety in scenery and traveling conditions! Deserts of the southwest, smooth, level farming sections, the mountains — one vast panorama of ever changing things and scenes. Right now I am on a return trip to the west coast, this time via the Yellowstone trail.

George Blanchard, Raleigh hotel, auto mechanic — My best long tour was one I made last June from Chicago to New York City, via Philadelphia, Washington, and Atlantic City. I had never been east before and everything was interesting, historically and in every way.

Clarence Owen, 538 Cass street, federal vocational student—In spite of it being war time, the most interesting auto trip I ever took was from Bordeaux to Paris. America is a wonderful section of the globe, but for real beauty France goes us at least one better. The scenery in the rural districts, the strange, unusual sights, the indescribable quaintness of their cities—well, if France was a state in our union, everybody would own autos and we would all be motoring in that state.

Ruth Law Will Fly No More; Had Brilliant Career

BY MORROW KRUM.

CAN you recall the bleak day in November, 1916, when a young Chicago woman set out from a Chicago airdrome and navigated one of America's pioneer airplanes to Hornell, N. Y., a distance of 666 miles, without making a stop? On that flight Ruth Law shattered all American records for long distance flights, and did more to make aviation a possibility than any woman had before or has since.

It was but one of many startling feats accomplished by Miss Law, a colorful page in a brilliant history.

Now Ruth Law has quit flying. She has decided to stay on the ground and near the home fireside. No more thrilling flights before state fair crowds. No more worry about her contracts, the weather, her ship. She is through, not because she "wants to go on living," as the old saying goes, but because she wants to settle down in a Chicago home.

There wasn't a tear in her eye a fortnight ago when the state fair secretaries met in Chicago and Miss Lillian Boyer romped off with $40,000 worth of exhibition contracts. Miss Law could have had a contract or two, but she refused.

True, Ruth Law commercialized her fame, but every time she flew over a state fair crowd she did something to convince people that aviation is just a bit more safe than it was when the Wright brothers made their first flights. Miss Law flew exhibition flights for big money. Some say she has made $100,000 out of flying; others say she has given aviation several million dollars' worth of assistance.

Her altitude flight over Peoria in September, 1917, helped to make the reputation that won her contracts, but it also gave flying a little push upward. Her long distance flights did the same. Her first loop over Grant park in 1916 helped. Her record—eight years of flying and she never crashed a ship—did much. Her recruiting flights during the war helped.

Another thing—Ruth Law did not fly the luxurious aerial limousines of today. She flew a pusher most of the time, an old pusher. Her right hand worked the ailerons, her left the peculiar "stick" of those early ships, while her feet were busy with the rudder. Flying Ruth Law's first ship was a busness, not an ide pleasure.

So the flying world might well drink a toast to Ruth Law. Her name will go down in history in a niche not far from the Wrights.

Controls Camera in Air.

A recent invention by F. M. Huddleston of Los Angeles, Cal., is creating considerable interest in aero-photographic circles. The aerograph, as this invention is called, consists of a small pilot balloon from which is suspended a combination gyroscope and gumbal for holding the camera, together with electrical devices for controlling its operation. Absolute control is had from the base, which consists of a truck upon which is installed a winch and hydrogen generator, as well as a control board.

Hartney Improving.

Col. H. E. Hartney is improving at Walter Reed hospital from the effects of the accident he sustained while competing at Omaha in the Pulitzer race last November. A recent setback gave his friends cause for uneasiness.

AVIATION QUERIES

Learning to Fly.

"What kind of service does the government offer those who wish to learn to fly? G. I. M."

The air service offers service as an enlisted man. You may enter a mechanic's school and become a master signal electrician or an aviation mechanic. The air service is not enlisting for flying positions at the present time.

Thriller.

"Where may I find an opportunity to climb from a moving automobile to a flying airplane? H. F."

If you have plenty of money you can hire an aviator and an automobile owner to teach you this trick. It would be wiser to learn to fly and then stay away from such stunts as you mention.

Salesmen Wanted

The Packard Motor Car Company of Chicago desires the services of a number of high-grade truck salesmen. The positions require men of exceptional sales ability, although their experience need not have included truck selling. For the men who can fill these places in the Packard organization this is an attractive opportunity for personal development. Only those who have demonstrated themselves equipped with unusual resourcefulness and industry in first rate salesmanship need apply. No applications will be considered under any circumstances except by letter. Cover full details in letter. Address attention of Truck Sales Manager.

PREST-O-LITE'S Double Message to Car Owners

PREST-O-LITE'S 1922 Prices, The Greatest Battery Values
PREST-O-PLATES, the Greatest Advance in Battery Making

Here is a two-fisted battery offer to the owners and drivers of automobiles:

Prest-O-Lite's 1922 prices, The Greatest Battery Values;

Prest-O-Plates, the greatest advance in battery making.

Either one singles out Prest-O-Lite from other batteries. Combined they make it a battery value without a rival.

Money-Saving Figures

Prest-O-Lite Batteries represent the greatest value in years. Consider that you can buy a regular Prest-O-Lite Battery for popular makes of light cars for $19.90 (trade-in price).

Here are other outstanding values: $24.50 (trade-in price) for a 6-volt type serving:

BUICK HUDSON OAKLAND CHANDLER
MAXWELL ESSEX

12-volt type at $32.30 (trade-in price) that serves

MAXWELL DODGE FRANKLIN

There are similar reductions on every Prest-O-Lite Battery, and Prest-O-Lite builds a correct type of battery for every make of motor car and truck.

Yes, With PREST-O-PLATES

These are not special models. They are top-quality Prest-O-Lites, with the famous Prest-O-Plates.

Prest-O-Plates are as different from ordinary battery plates as gold is from gilt. They combine unusual hardness with a peculiar porosity. None of the old plate compromise between hardness and porosity. Prest-O-Plates have both.

This explains their ready dependable reserve power in biting zero weather, and their non-buckling, heat-resisting strength in summer.

Experts say that they are the world's best battery plate, and this is the same as saying that Prest-O-Lite is the world's best battery.

For the life of the battery is in the plates. You never need a new battery until the plates in your old go bad. As long as you have live plates, you have a battery.

And every part of a Prest-O-Lite Battery is worthy, in material and workmanship, of Prest-O-Plates.

That is why 87 leading manufacturers specify Prest-O-Lite as original equipment, and the list is growing.

Doubly Guaranteed

Every Prest-O-Lite is backed by the regular Prest-O-Lite guaranty, a definite obligation, plus a spirit that says the car owner must be pleased.

Use PREST-O-LITE Service

You should have a Prest-O-Lite Battery in your car. But, whatever battery you have, use the local Prest-O-Lite Service Station. It is part of the oldest service to automobiles.

Its representative will gladly give you his advice and expert attention on your battery. He will help you prolong its life. He will never tell you that you need a new battery until you do.

At the right time, exchange your old battery for a new Prest-O-Lite, with Prest-O-Plates, at our low prices.

FARM AND GARDEN

College Training for Farm Boy in Extension Work

By Frank Ridgway.

BUSINESS men, bankers and farm leaders realize that helping farm boys and girls to solve their new and puzzling problems in agriculture is one of the most effective means of building and strengthening a more dependable system of economics in America.

A vigorous attempt is now being made by the national committee on boys and girls' work to coordinate the efforts of all business men and organized industrial and agricultural agencies in furthering the club work which is now being carried on among the boys and girls of the farms by the federal department of agriculture and by agricultural colleges.

There is a broad gap between the city and country which needs to be closed. Whether it is closed or widened depends more or less upon the kind of farmers and farmers' wives in the future and how well they work with business men. Eleven million boys and girls between the ages of 10 and 18 are on the farms of the United States today. They are the ones who will be managing the farms in a few more years, and the effectiveness with which they do it will depend upon how well they are trained while they are young.

Ownership Breeds Pride.

No longer can the boy on the farm expect to succeed by driving his wagon in his father's rut, and so an education which will enable him to cope with the problems ahead of him has become a big job. Imagine a school house filled with 11,000,000 boys and girls who are to be taught what will make rural life more attractive and profitable, and you will have some idea of the task before extension workers of agricultural colleges and members of the United States department of agriculture.

Their "school" is growing by leaps and bounds, jumping from an enrollment of 23,000 in 1914 to 331,000 in 1920. Through the club work boys and girls are taking an active part in raising pigs, calves, and corn, and are learning by doing the work themselves. Parents have learned to appreciate the fact that children crave ownership of a pig or an acre of corn. They take a personal interest in raising the corn and feeding the pigs if they can call them their own.

Do you remember way back when your dad gave you the first pig you ever owned, and how you eagerly took the responsibility of growing it into a big hog? At least you remember how independent you felt when you sold the hog and jingled big silver dollars in your pocket. You never had any trouble picking out your pig if it happened to be in a pasture with a dozen others, because it was yours—you knew which way his tail curled.

Mightier Than Guns.

That same idea is being used by extension workers in teaching young people lessons in production and home making. But the work has a much deeper significance than the teaching of better methods in farming. Its roots penetrate the foundation of the nation's safety and prosperity. An army of 11,000,000 boys and girls, equipped with knowledge to make better homes in America, is mightier than huge cannons, battleships, and submarines.

Club work deals with agriculture—industry's real corner stone—and with the making of homes, better homes, on the farm, where the steadying power of the nation is generated. G. L. Noble, secretary of the national committee, regards the work as the copper cable through which agriculture and rural life are electrified and made to function. Knowledge of scientific and practical facts about agriculture are disseminated through the club members and made use of on the farm.

Crop Yields Too Low.

The effectiveness of the work shows the necessity of increasing its activities and enrolling more in the big school. Practically all the available land in this country is being utilized; population is growing; immigration is increasing, and production on each acre of tillable land must be increased if the nation is to be fed and made safe.

Population has grown at a rapid pace during the last fifty years. Live stock production during that same period has only been doubled, and the crop yield per acre is lower than that of any other country except Russia. At least that is true of the wheat crop. Because of improved machinery this country produces the highest yield per man of any country, but it has eight productive acres of land for every man, woman, and child, while Germany and France have about two, and China and Japan only one. This country must look forward toward a more intensified agriculture. More corn, wheat, and oats must be grown on an acre of ground.

Bankers have recognized the work as an important factor in building up their communities and making business better for themselves. The attitude of Charles F. Koontz, vice president of the Merchants National bank, Muncie, Ind., is typical of many other bankers and business men throughout the entire country. Here is a part of his letter:

"Our experience convinces us that there is no work equal to that of the club work, for it not only helps the boys and girls but the old folks as well. It brings contentment with farm life, and the friendly contests create ambition among boys and girls on the farm."

Has Great Possibilities.

Thomas E. Wilson, packer and member of the national committee, says it is one of the greatest works now being undertaken in the field of agriculture.

In discussing the movement recently E. T. Meredith, former secretary of agriculture and head of the national committee, said he regards the work as a positive force in rural development.

Directors and officers of the national committee are E. T. Meredith, chairman, Des Moines; Thomas E. Wilson, Chicago; B. H. Heide, Chicago; C. L. Noble, Chicago; E. N. Hopkins, Des Moines; J. W. Coverdale, Chicago, and Joseph Hirsch, Corpus Christi, Texas.

Other members include Harold F. McCormick, Chicago; Senator Arthur Capper, Washington, D. C.; Newton T. Baker, former secretary of war, Cleveland; W. J. Carmichael, Chicago; Carl J. Baer, St. Louis; E. J. Bodman, Little Rock, Ark.; N. I. Bowditch, Farmington, Mass.; F. L. Eaton, Sioux City, Ia.; R. M. Striplin, Atlanta, Ga.; J. Simpson, Springfield, Mass.; O. M. Plummer, Portland, Ore., and J. M. Parker, Baton Rouge, La.

TWELVE FRIENDS OF AMERICA'S FARM BOYS AND GIRLS—This national committee is made up of leading agriculturists and business men who are looking after boys and girls on the farm and indirectly laying a better foundation for American agriculture and business. They are from left to right: B. H. Heide, Chicago; E. N. Hopkins, Des Moines; O. M. Plummer, Portland; G. L. Noble, Chicago; F. L. Eaton, Sioux City; George E. Farrel, Washington, D. C.; R. M. Striplin, Atlanta, Ga.; J. W. Coverdale, Chicago; Dr. F. R. Eagle, Chicago; J. C. Simpson, Springfield, Mass; E. T. Meredith, chairman, Des Moines, and Thomas E. Wilson, Chicago.

Cattle Feeders' Day Interests Corn Belt

Since marketing grain through live stock instead of hauling it into local elevators and selling it for cash has become the popular idea among farmers throughout the corn belt, an unusual interest is expected to be taken in cattle feeders' day at the Iowa State college this spring. It will be held April 12.

Cook County Campaign to Enroll Apiarists

Booming the beekeeping business and putting it on a sound basis will be attempted by the leading apiarists of Cook county this year.

Tomorrow is the opening day of the Cook County Beekeepers' association's thirty day campaign to enlist every apiarist in the county.

In opening their membership campaign the association members will hold their second spring meeting tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock at the Great Northern hotel, according to Samuel Cushman, president. C. P. Dadant, a practical producer of extracted honey and editor of the American Bee Journal, will tell "How We Produced a Sixty-two Ton Honey Crop" and answer questions on the handling of bees.

For the Farmer's Library.

Every farmer who reads will want circular No. 251, "A List of Books for the Farmer's Library," that has just been published by the University of Illinois. The circular gives the names, description of contents, publisher, price, and other data on books dealing with every phase of agriculture. Whether you are ready to add more books to your library or not, send to the College of Agriculture, Urbana, Ill., and ask for a copy of this circular.

Spray Orchard Pests.

Begin spraying your apple trees for San José and oyster scales the first of March, if the weather is not too cold and stormy. Use a lime sulphur spray for these orchard pests. Lime sulphur should also be sprayed on the peach trees about the first week in April to protect the trees against fruit rot and leaf curler.

Vaughan's Chicago Parks Lawn Seed

SOW NOW and let Spring Rains wash it in.

Warning!

WITH grass seed prices at a record-breaking point, buyers must be on their guard this year above all to avoid weed adulteration, light weight seed, and undesirable substitutes which in the end are far more expensive than good seed. We are maintaining the same high standard in our mixtures as for forty years past and our prices are the lowest possible with this standard.

SOW 1 lb. to 300 feet for new lawns, half quantity for repairing old. March snows and April showers will give ideal conditions for germination. Use Chicago Parks mixture for sunny lawns, Columbian mixture for shady lawns.

Prices: Lb., 50c; 5 lbs., $2.40; 10 lbs., $4.75; 20 lbs., $9.25.
Orders for $2.00 and over prepaid within 500 miles

Its Exclusive Motor Proves Its Excellence

CLEVELAND SIX

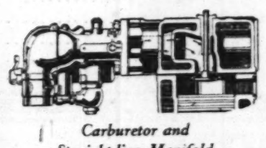
The individual style and unusual beauty of the new Cleveland Six are conceded by everyone. This advertisement will convince you that the car is as fine mechanically as it is in appearance.

THE most important mechanical unit in any car is the motor. The Cleveland Six exclusive motor, built in its own shops, is the culmination of six years intensive effort. In design and in details it is as fine a piece of engineering as will be found under the hood of any car.

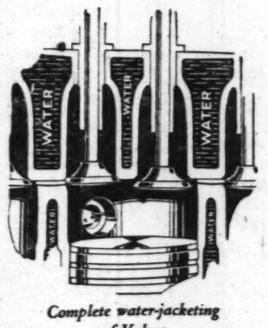
Power with flexibility, durability and efficiency, are the qualities that make the Cleveland Six motor the most highly refined of the overhead-valve type.

This motor is so designed that it actually develops 58 per cent of its 45 horse-power at twenty miles per hour. Few motors develop more than forty per cent of their power at this speed.

The Cleveland Six gives more power when you need power most (for quick acceleration, hill climbing, or for the long hard pull) than is obtainable in most other motors.



Carburetor and Straight-line Manifold



Complete water-jacketing of Valves

Power With Economy

THE remarkable fuel economy of the Cleveland Six is largely due to the unique straight-line manifold which is cast integral with the cylinder head. Gas travels the shortest possible distance from carburetor to cylinders and as the manifold is evenly heated throughout its entire length, condensation is eliminated at all points in its travel.

This feature insures quick starting, complete combustion and means high power with economy, at all speeds. It also reduces carbon deposit, which is further minimized by completely machining the combustion chambers to a smooth finish.

Balanced Pistons of New Design

LIGHT WEIGHT pistons are of the latest design and all six machined to the same exact weight. Conventional design has been improved by the addition of three V-shaped grooves which have a wiping action on the down-stroke to prevent oil from working past the three rings to foul the spark plugs and form carbon.

Silent Valves That Never Stick

IN the Cleveland Six the admitted advantage and efficiency of overhead valve design is advanced to its highest point. Valves and stems are completely surrounded by water and being evenly cooled from all sides they can not warp and stick. They are actuated by double springs insuring quietness and eliminating clatter or vibration.

The valve lifters are fitted with large, accurately ground rollers, and the entire valve mechanism, including rocker shaft, rocker arms, valve stems, etc., is completely enclosed and thoroughly lubricated by wicks through which oil is fed from two large cups on the top of the engine.

All Motor Parts Easily Accessible

THE Cleveland Six motor is built to function continuously and efficiently with a minimum of attention and the least necessity for adjustment. Lubrication has been made positive at all points. The silent chain drive for camshaft and pump can be adjusted from the outside of the motor case. The crank case can be drained by a lever under the hood.

Quietness, smoothness, absence of vibration at all speeds, quick pick-up, and plentiful power are combined with very slow depreciation and long life.

Your Cleveland Six will be an efficient, economical, mechanically excellent car even after many season's use—because it is built to last.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Federal Council Urges Ratifying of Arms Treaties

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, through its commission on international justice and good will, has declared in favor of the speedy and enthusiastic ratification of the treaties proposed by the conference on the limitation of armament. A meeting to promote ratification will be held today in the Calvary Baptist church, Washington, D. C., the church which President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes attend.

Bishop W. F. McDowell of the Washington area of the Methodist Episcopal church, formerly of Chicago, will preside. The speakers will include Henry Noble McCracken, president of Vassar college; Senator Frank B. Willis of Ohio, the successor of President Harding; Dr. John H. Finley, chairman of the commission on international justice and good will, and Dr. Charles S. Macfarland, secretary of the federal council. The Washington meeting will be followed by others throughout the country.

"A moral crisis has arrived for the United States," the commission declares. "Let us enact the treaties promptly and with enthusiasm. Let us enact them together, for they constitute a whole that should not be mutilated."

The ecclesiastical council of the Ukrainian Orthodox church in America will meet at 3 p. m. today in the Ukrainian Orthodox Holy Trinity church, 1950 West Erie street, near Robey street. It represents a membership of about 500,000 in the United States and Canada. It is hoped that the outcome of the meeting will be a decision to build an orphanage and theological seminary to be located probably in Chicago. High mass will be celebrated by the Most Rev. Archbishop Germanos of New York.

Arthur Nims of Carson Pirie Scott and company will speak this evening at 7:45 under the auspices of the men's Bible class at the Drexel Park Presbyterian church, 64th street and Marshfield avenue. A men's choir of fifty voices will sing.

The Rt. Rev. James Wise, bishop of Kansas of the Episcopal church, will speak this evening at 8 at the Sunday Evening club, in Orchestra hall, on the subject, "The Builders."

THE REV. WILLIAM HIRAM FOULKES, D. D.

Dr. Foulkes, New York, is general secretary of the New Era movement of the Presbyterian church of the United States of America, which is promoting a nation-wide every member canvass today to raise a budget of $14,500,000. The Rev. George S. Magill, D. D., of Wilmette is in charge of the work in the Chicago presbytery.

The canvass is for the purpose of providing an adequate advance subscription for the coming year beginning April 1 so that the various benevolent boards caring for foreign and home mission work will be able to know the funds they will have at their disposal.

The Rev. A. P. Shatford, rector of the Church of St. James the Apostle, Montreal, Canada, will speak at the Lenten noonday services in the Garrick theater this week. Canon Shatford served four years in the Canadian army overseas, and was decorated with the Order of the British Empire. His evenings engagements are: Tomorrow evening, St. Mark's, Park Ridge; Tuesday evening, Emmanuel, La Grange; Wednesday, Grace, Oak Park; Thursday, Church of the Redeemer, 56th street and Woodlawn avenue.

The Tabernacle Baptist church, Monroe street and Spaulding avenue, has called to the pastorate the Rev. Russell M. Brougher.

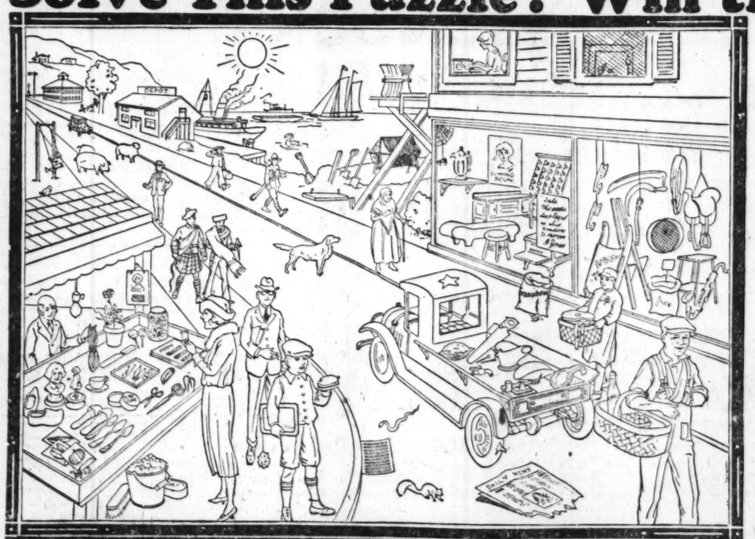
Solve This Puzzle! Win the Prize!



Open to Everybody

Find the words beginning with the letter "S" (such as saw, spoon and scuttle) in this picture. Write them down and send them in just as soon as possible. See how easy it is! Everything is in plain sight. No need to turn the picture upside down.

Costs Nothing To Try

Just send in your list of "S" words. If the judges decide your list is largest and nearest correct, they will award you First Prize. If your list is second largest and nearest correct, you will be awarded Second Prize, etc. Get started right now!

Big Picture FREE on Request

How You Can Win $5,000!

You do not have to buy any of Reefer's Yeast Tablets to enter this contest and win a prize. If your list of "S" words is largest and nearest correct and you have not ordered any, you will win $50 as First Prize. (See Column 1 of Prize List.) If you send in an order for one $1 package with your list of words and your list is awarded First Prize, you win $750. (See Column 2 of Prize List.) If you order two $1 packages and your list wins First Prize, you will get $1500. (See column 3 of Prize List.) And if you order five $1 packages and you are awarded First Prize, you get $5000. (See Column 4 of Prize List.) And besides, there are 104 other big cash prizes. Second Prize in Column 4 is $2500—Third Prize is $1250, etc. Just think of it—105 chances for you to win.

Reefer's Yeast Tablets—

Most people are undernourished even though they eat ample wholesome food. The modern cooked food diet does not contain the three natural Vitamines so necessary to health. Lack of pep, that dull, listless, tired feeling, headaches and constipation, poor appetite, absence of firm flesh, all are due to undernourishment.

Vitamines The three Vitamines which your body must have are found in their most tasty and convenient form in Reefer's Yeast Tablets. This highly concentrated, scientifically prepared yeast product also contains iron and other blood enriching elements. Reefer's Yeast Tablets are sold only direct to you from Reefer's Laboratories. Send for some today. Take two with every meal. Just watch the change. See how your health and strength continue to improve as the Vitamines assist you to derive full nourishment from the food you eat.

Beauty The world is just now waking up to Nature's own beauty secret. Sparkling eyes—a clear complexion—the radiant charm of perfect health—can only be had as a result of complete nourishment. Unless all three natural Vitamines are present, even the most wholesome foods cannot be properly assimilated by the body. Would'nt you be delighted to see skin blemishes disappear and sharp bones become covered with firm, smooth flesh? Reefer's Yeast Tablets seem to bring about a prompt improvement by supplying the necessary vitamines. If you envy beauty, be sure your body gets the nourishement it craves, through vitamines, the greatest health builder of all.

Youth Vitamines will help to give you the buoyant freshness of youth, vim and vitality, a springy step, a snappy walk, a healthy appetite, a keen sense of joy in living. Think how wonderful life would be without that continual "tired feeling," with plenty of energy to work hard and play hard, with strength and vigor. No matter how old or how young you are, you need vitamines. That is why you should take Reefer's Yeast Tablets.

6th to 55th prizes, each	2	4	8	25
56th to 105th prizes, each	1	2	4	10

OBSERVE THESE RULES:

1. The contest is open to every man, woman, girl or boy living in America, except employees or relatives of employees of E. J. Reefer, 9th and Spruce Sts. There is no entrance fee of any kind.
2. You must use only one side of paper. You must number your list of objects in regular order—1, 2, 3, etc. Your full name and address must be written on each page in the upper right hand corner. Use a separate sheet for anything you may wish to write outside of your list of names and your name and address.
3. English words only will be accepted as they appear in Webster's New International dictionary. Obsolete words will not be counted. Both the singular and the plural of a word will not count, either one of them may be used.
4. Compounds or words which are made up of two or more complete English words cannot be used.
5. The same spelling of a word will be counted only once even though it is used for different articles or objects, or parts of them. Each article or object can be given only under one name.
6. Two or more people may co-operate in answering the puzzle. However, only one prize will be given to any one household. No prizes will be awarded to more than one of any combination outside of the family where a number—two or more—have worked together.
7. If a contestant sends more than one list under the same name, an assumed name, or a pre-married name, then all lists of such contestant will be disqualified. If more than one list is sent by any group or by any members of the same group who have co-operated in the preparation of such lists, then all lists of such contestants will be disqualified.
8. All answers must be received through the mail by E. J. Reefer, 9th and Spruce Sts., Philadelphia, Pa., and must be post-marked in Post Office closing time, April 10th, 1922.
9. The first prize will be awarded for the answer containing the largest and most nearly correct list of the names of visible objects and articles beginning with "S" shown in the picture. No other consideration, such as neatness, style or handwriting will have any bearing in making the decision.
10. The full amount of any of the prizes will be awarded to each contestant in the event of ties.
11. The decision will be made by three judges entirely independent of and having no connection with E. J. Reefer. They will judge the answers submitted and award the prizes at the end of the contest. Participation in the contest carries with it the acceptance of the decision of the judges as final and conclusive.
12. All answers will receive full consideration whether or not "Reefer's Yeast Tablets" is purchased. At the close of the contest, when all lists have been graded, the names of the prize winners will be announced and the list of words will be sent upon request to any participant who sends us a stamped, addressed envelope.

KENMORE AT GRANVILLE, CHICAGO

It is possible now to see Sovereign Apartments for Spring. There is only one Sovereign.

This is indeed a real home

F. J. Kihm

YES, I know I am making a big claim—but I also know the apartment hotels of Chicago unusually well. I have been in the hotel business ever since I was 19. Fred Harvey gave me my early training, and everybody knows the Harvey hotel division's thoroughness and careful attention to the customer's comfort.

So, when we planned the Rogers Park Apartment Hotel, my vote was to make it a real home, besides giving perfectly appointed hotel service. My partners agreed. And that is why we can offer you more of comfort and satisfaction than your money will buy elsewhere.

As I said last Sunday, our rooms are bright and airy—the furnishings are better than you will find elsewhere—the closets are ample—the walls are practically sound proof—refrigeration facilities are adequate—servidors eliminate tips, yet the maid and bellboy service is cheerfully polite!

And, in addition, the food in our restaurant is good, and well served. Of course you can eat all your meals in your suite, if you prefer—cook them yourself or have them served from our kitchens, as you wish. Or you can do as so many of our guests do—cook some meals yourself and eat the others in our pleasant and comfortable dining room—the famous Della Robbia room, you remember.

I invite you to visit us, try the restaurant service and inspect our hotel and its apartments. If you are here on a Thursday evening you might enjoy the dinner dance in our really exquisite green and cafe au lait ballroom.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

A Farm, a Home, A BUSINESS

A FARM means a home for you—of the best kind. It means a permanent business—your independence.

START THIS WAY.

Get some of our excellent clay loam land with timothy and clover growing on it. Get a cow to supply your milk, butter, and cheese; then get another cow or two and have milk and cream to sell. Get five acres cleared and put it into potatoes to bring big cash. A few hogs for meat and chickens to supply your eggs, with some to sell, will with a garden, furnish a good liv- ing. The wood on the lands will supply your fuel for several seasons.

DO YOU LOOK AHEAD?

These lands are extremely low priced now —only $15 to $35 per acre; easy terms if de- sired; $10 to $20 down on 40 acres, balance $10 to $20 per mo. near towns, railroads, schools, churches, telephone lines, rural routes, and good roads. Settlers are rapidly coming in. Every house and barn that is built and every field that is under cultivation in- creases the values of surrounding lands. Don't wait until you have to pay more. You can get the best selection by choosing now.

The contract we give our customers is one of the most liberal ever offered. Some of the features are: Suspension of payments and privilege to borrow money in case of sick- ness, loss of work, or misfortune; loan to settlers on land; insurance benefit; privilege to repay loan at any time; timber features space does not permit our mentioning here.

Learn more about these lands; the liberal features of our contract, and the way we help earnest homeseekers. Write today for our booklet giving full information. IT'S FREE.

CADILLAC'S 11 Bargains

RENAULT COUPE. Car has only recently been imported to this country. It is a small 10-14 h. p. motor. Equipped with electric lights and starter. Can be classed one of the highest grade imported cars. Is an economical car to operate, as motor and car are small and is a very easy size to handle in congested traffic. Original price on this car delivered in this country was about $3,500. It has been used very little; in fact, it is hard to tell it from new. Here is probably the only opportunity you will have to buy an imported car at such a ridiculously low figure of $1,500.

WHITE MODEL 45, BERLINE LIMOUSINE. This is one of the very latest models and a car that is being turned in by the original purchaser in exceptionally fine condition. Paint and upholstery on this car will bear most rigid examination and demonstration. This is a custom made body and makes a very snappy looking Touring Limousine. Has an excellent set of cord tires, one extra. Westinghouse shock absorbers, etc. This particular car can be had at an extremely low figure. Special for this sale, $1,250.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, LIMOUSINE. This particular car has been in the original owner's hands and he has availed himself of our Service Department. For this reason it is being offered us in remarkably fine shape. Runs smoothly and quietly. The velour upholstery and general coach condition are exceptionally fine. Has an excellent set of tires, one extra, bumper, clock, etc. We have priced this car very low. If you are looking for a Limousine for every day or funeral work, or private use, this car will surely please you. Special for this sale, $1,150.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 55, STANDARD LIMOUSINE. We consider this the best bargain we have ever offered in this make of car. General coach condition is exceptionally good. Has an excellent set of tires, one extra, bumper, clock, seat covers, etc. Mechanically will bear most rigid examination and demonstration. It is priced low for immediate sale, and if interested you will have to act quickly. Special price, $750.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, STANDARD LIMOUSINE. This particular car we have put in most excellent mechanical condition. Will carry our standard warranty. The tires are brand new. Has 5 Rudge-Whitworth wire wheels, one extra tire, and Westinghouse shock absorbers. We have just refinished this car in standard Cadillac Blue. This car will run as smoothly and quietly as a new Cadillac. Has the appearance of a new car. We consider this to be a nearly new Cadillac Limousine and the best bargain offered today. Special for this sale, $3,000.

PACKARD TOURING CAR, MODEL 1-25. This car was recently turned in to us by an owner who had kept the car in his private garage with 2 or 3 other cars, and it is exceptionally fine mechanically. Has an excellent set of cord tires, one extra, and bumper. This car is 'way above the average mechanically and it runs smoothly and quietly. We are offering this at a ridiculously low price and if interested you will have to act quickly. Special for this sale, $500.

OAKLAND ROADSTER, MODEL 34-D, 1922. Practically a new car. Speedometer mileage, 264. If you are looking for a 2-passenger light six cylinder economical Roadster that has had its first depreciation taken off and is what we believe to be equally as good as a brand new car, we suggest you call on the paint and with Goodyear tires which show no wear—this car will surely please you. As this is being offered at 'way below the market price, your immediate action will be necessary. Special for this sale, $850.

HUDSON SEDAN, MODEL 11-0. This car was delivered in 1920. Mechanically it will bear the most rigid examination and demonstration. Is equipped with an excellent set of cord tires, one extra, set of covers, and bumper. Paint and upholstery in good shape. If you are looking for a Hudson Sedan this car will surely please you. Special for this sale, $1,250.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, VICTORIA COUPE. We have just recently removed this car from our storage warehouse, where it has been for some months. The customer has just decided to buy a new Cadillac car of larger seating capacity. The original paint on this car shows practically no wear. The velour upholstery looks like new. This motor car is as smoothly and as quietly as a new car. Has an excellent set of cord tires, one extra; clock, etc. This car carries our standard warranty. We are offering this nearly new car at a snap price. Special for this sale, $2,750.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, PHAETON. This is one of the late series and a car that is coming into our hands in the original state. Has not been refinished. It is almost like new in appearance. Has an excellent set of cord tires, one extra, and bumper. If you are looking for a Cadillac Phaeton of a late series at 'way below the market price do not fail to see this car. Special for this sale, $2,000.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, TOURING CAR. This is one of the late series in a seven passenger roomy touring car that is being turned in to us for one of our new Cadillacs. Equipped with an excellent set of cord tires, one extra. Mechanically the car is in exceptionally fine condition. Paint, upholstery, and top in remarkable condition. This particular car has had very fine care and customer has availed himself of our service department, which means that it has been properly lubricated and adjusted at all times. Your immediate action will be necessary. Special, $2,250.

PACKARD

CHEVROLET SEDAN, 1920, "F. B. 50." This is a car considerably above the average and the motor sounds like new. Upholstery is perfect and the tires in excellent condition. We believe that we are offering an exceptional value in this car at $600.

WILLYS-KNIGHT COUPE, 1919 MODEL. The owner of this car was very particular as to its care, and the car reflects its careful usage. The gray velour upholstery is like new. The motor is absolutely noiseless and the cord tires show practically no wear. We are fortunte in being able to offer our customers this exceptional car at only $850.

HUDSON SPORT, 1921 MODEL. We believe that we are offering in this car a value unequaled in Chicago today. It is very completely equipped, with new spare tire, bumper, theft proof lock, etc. The tires, upholstery and paint are in excellent condition. Special at $1,100.

MARMON 4-DOOR SPORT, 1920 MODEL. For the man desiring a late model sport car, we can offer a decided saving. The car is in first class mechanical condition and is well equipped with cord tires. Has 6 wire wheels, 2 extra tires, bumper, clock, etc. Top and upholstery are in good condition and the price will certainly make a decided appeal to the careful buyer. $1,850.

PACKARD TWIN SIX TOURING, MODEL 1-25. The motor has been thoroughly overhauled; the body and chassis repainted standard Packard blue, and the top and upholstery are like new. The tires are practically new cords, with one extra. This car, which is fully equipped with bumper, locks, etc., is now offered at the extremely low price of $750.

PACKARD SINGLE SIX TOURING. This is practically a new car. Customer exchanged for a different type, and is perfect in every way. The cord tires show no signs of use. The paint, upholstery, and top are like new, and the equipment includes Biflex spring bumper, spotlight, mirror, etc. We offer new car service and guarantee at the low price of $2,100.

PACKARD TWIN SIX SEDAN. This is one of the latest series cars. Has been completely refinished and cannot be distinguished from new in any detail. The upholstery shows no wear at all. The tires are all new Firestone cord. Car carries our new Packard warranty and service. We offer in this car an opportunity to make a considerable saving over the new car price. Formerly selling at $5,500—now reduced to $4,500.

RENEWED MARMON 34'S

A Marmon 34, being of stabilized design, is a Marmon 34 always, whether built in 1916, in between, or this year. The average man cannot tell them apart. Except to an expert, their appearance is almost identical.

Stand a renewed Marmon 34 beside a car of equal price but inferior manufacture side by side. Compare them in appearance. Note the features of class and distinction in Marmon cars. Study the mechanical features. Note the added extra mechanical value in a renewed Marmon, then decide. NEW OR RENEWED—which?

Your dollar goes its limit in a Marmon 34.

CASH, TERMS, OR YOUR OLD CAR TAKEN IN TRADE.

No. 1428 Marmon 34, 7 pass. touring. Now going through our paint shop. Fully renewed in our shops, guaranteed mechanically, and carries new car service. You must ride in this car to appreciate the value we are offering. Especially priced at $2,250.

No. 1469 Marmon 34, 4 pass. chummy roadster. This car has had very little mileage; original paint. Car carries our standard new car warranty. $3,250.

Hudson Cabriolet '21

MODEL 12-0, 3 PASSENGER.

$1,250

Costs $2,600 to duplicate today.

The Hudson cabriolet is a very smart appearing enclosed car with a landolet leather top and is an exclusive Hudson creation. It is an ideal automobile for a professional or business man, counsellor or small family and can be used as a combination business and pleasure car for town and country. The car has the appearance of a petite coupe until the top is folded back and it then resembles a dignified gentlemans' roadster.

The car we are offering has been carefully driven only 4,000 miles, is perfect mechanically and presents the appearance of new; attractively finished in London smoke gray and dark blue; equipment consists of excellent set of tires with one spare, bumper, 2 spotlights, motometer, cocoa mat, windshield cleaner, sun shade, etc.; large luggage space.

Wonderful value for only $1,250. See this car today. OPEN SUNDAY.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

NEW GOLD COAST HOTEL WILL COST OVER $3,000,000

Regent to Be Largest of Its Kind in Town.

BY AL CHASE.

Gold Coast building announcements usually glitter with superlatives. One apartment is the tallest in Chicago and the next is the cat's eyebrows (to use last week's eighth grade encomium) so far as something else is concerned.

Streeterville's latest building project, a twelve story $3,000,000 kitchenette apartment hotel at the southwest corner of Chestnut street and De Witt place, to be called the Regent, it is claimed, will be the largest in the city. Others claiming to be larger have been announced, but haven't materialized as yet. Architect Z. Erol Smith has designed an unusually elaborate and luxurious hostelry which will have 600 rooms in 180 suites of from three to seven rooms each.

Honest to Goodness Roof Garden.

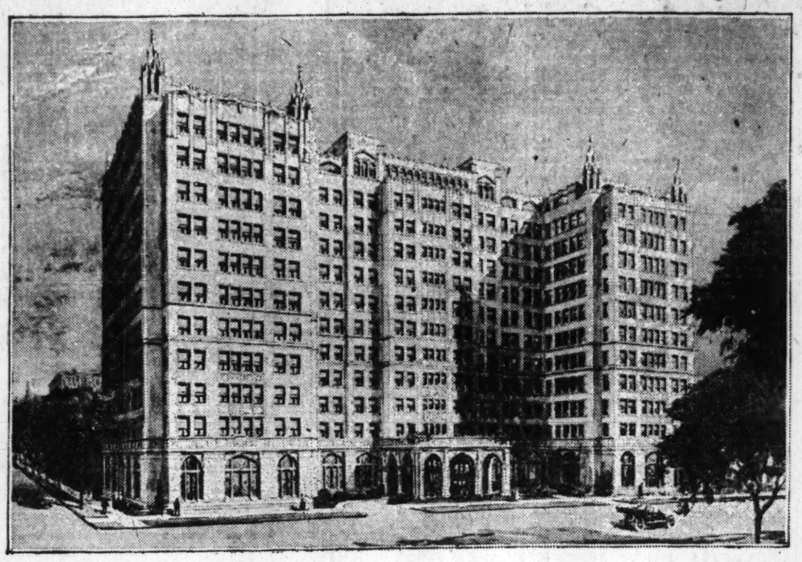
Robert A. Grant, a Yankee who's been a Winnipeg resident for the last decade or so, is head of a syndicate, whose ten members will be disclosed later, which will erect the Regent.

No attempt will be made to cater to outsiders with dances or elaborate restaurants. The main dining room will seat only 150. The commercial features, such as the business office, etc., will be kept as far as possible in the background. On the roof will be a solarium and the balance of the roof will be covered with eight inches of black earth sodded and made into a real garden.

Remember Back When Carpets——!

All the apartments will be furnished and the living and bed rooms will be carpeted, with tile floors in dining room, kitchenettes, and bathrooms, and composition floors in dressing rooms. Bids will close April 1 and work will start about the middle of the month, with May 1, 1923, set as opening date.

Chicago's Largest Apartment Hotel—the Regent



"The Regent," a $3,000,000 apartment hotel to be built at the southwest corner of Chestnut street and De Witt place by a syndicate of which Robert A. Grant is head, was designed by Architect Z. Erol Smith. It will front 235 feet on Chestnut and 110 on De Witt and will be of Bedford stone. A hotel was announced several years ago for this site by other interests, but the project was abandoned.

DON'T DABBLE IN MORTGAGELOANS, WARNS TAYLOR

Specialize or Make It a Real Department.

"Don't dabble in the real estate mortgage loan business unless you're going to specialize in it or unless you expect to conduct it as a real department of your business," was the warning sounded to embryo realtors by George H. Taylor, president of the Chicago Mortgage Bankers' association, in his lecture before the realty class of the Y. M. C. A. school of commerce on Tuesday evening.

GEORGE H. TAYLOR [Moffett Photo.]

"It's too important and intricate a business to be handled superficially and if you go into it as a side issue to make a few temporary commissions, the result will only be a disappointment. Too many men take up the real estate and mortgage loan business when they can't think of anything else to do with the idea that it's easy money.

Hardest of Hard Work.

"In reality it's the hardest of hard work for those who succeed. Either you should have capital and embark on your own account or you should attach yourself to a strictly real estate mortgage loan office and work intelligently and unceasingly. Unless you specialize in real estate mortgages turn that business when offered to you over to some one who does.

"I want to say also to the young man connecting himself with the mortgage loan business, if you're setting about to negotiate a loan on a given property know all the facts and essentials necessary to form an opinion as to the security offered and the desirability of the loan offered. So many men come into to see me about placing a loan without bringing with them half of the facts necessary for me to be able to say whether I'll make it or not.

Sees Only the Commission.

"The tendency of the young salesman or solicitor is to see only the commission he expects to earn if he makes a deal. So when a man comes in to apply for a loan or to enlist his services in placing one, four times out of five the first thing the broker does is to grab his hat and rush out to some bank or loan agency with the proposition before the applicant has had time to give him the information he needs to get action.

"To do the thing right he should carry with him when he goes out on the street a complete word picture of his property; everything in detail. And just as it's necessary to know your goods in an individual case it's also desirable if you are generally engaging in the mortgage loan business to have a thorough and intimate knowledge of the whole field embracing Chicago and its immediate suburb."

Edward F. Judd, former president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will talk on "Real Estate Practice" on Tuesday evening before the Y. M. C. A. realty class.

$1,000,000 Theater for Roosevelt Road

Above is the newest west side amusement enterprise, a $1,000,000 vaudeville and movie theater, designed by C. Howard Crane and Kenneth Franzheim, to be built on Roosevelt road just west of Crawford. There's a possibility of a large dancing academy in connection with it. Work will start in six weeks, with a fall openng in prospect. Its name will be decided by a contest. More is told in another column.

Hoover Declines to Direct Exposition in Philadelphia

Washington, D. C., March 11.—Announcement of Secretary of Commerce Hoover's refusal to accept the directorship of the sesquicentennial exposition in Philadelphia was made here today.

Apartments at Evans and 62d Turn Co-operative

The latest coöp flat is announced for the southwest corner of Evans and 62d, where the Evans Avenue Apartment Building corporation has taken title to the twenty flats for a reported $130,000, subject to $75,000, from Lars Olson, through M. Hoffman & Co, and is selling the individual apartments. This is the fourth coöp organized by H. H. Decker & Co.

IRA COUCH WOOD SELLS RESIDENCE.

Ira Couch Wood has sold his Winnetka residence at 1154 Pine street, with an acre of ground, to Kent Chandler of Gorrell & Co. through J. L. Floyd for $26,000.

REALTY BOARD TO HAVE BOOTH AT HOME SHOW

Urging Chicagoans not to rent may seem a paradoxical position for the Chicago Real Estate board to be in, but according to I. Whiteson, chairman of the Own Your Home committee of that organization, the board will assume that attitude on March 25 when it opens its booth at the Own Your Home exposition at the Coliseum. For in large and conspicuous lettering will be the warning: "Don't Rent; Own Your Home and Be Better Citizens."

I. WHITESON. [Walinger Photo.]

This is the first time a real estate board has taken an active interest in an own your home exposition, so it is claimed. One of the most prominent locations on the Midway, the contemplated big north and south thoroughfare in the Coliseum, has been rented for the seven day show, and everything that any one wants to know about home building or home buying will be on tap via experts ready and willing to explain every detail.

For the person who likes to absorb his information from the written page the Own Your Home committee is getting up a special number of the Chicago Realtor, the regular monthly publication of the Real Estate board, which will explain just about everything possible to explain on how to go about owning your own home.

Realty Jottings

James J. Glassner, attorney and member of the faculty of Northwestern University Law school, will speak at the Real Estate Market of the Cook County Real Estate board on Tuesday at 2:30 on "Arrest and Habeas Corpus in Relation to Crime Waves." The members' regular monthly meeting will be at 3:30 p. m. the same day.

JAMES J. GLASSNER. [Mabel Sykes Photo.]

The first step to establish the Torrens system of land title registration in Kankakee county was taken last Tuesday when President William H. Loehde of the Cook County Real Estate board and J. F. Hecht, chairman of the Torrens committee of the board, were guests of the Kankakee County Real Estate board at a dinner and meeting.

The new escrow department of the Cook county Torrens system has been placed in commission by J. Scott Matthews, chief Torrens examiner, for County Recorder Joseph Haas. This is in compliance with a recent law. The Lake View State bank had escrow No. 1.

That readers of this page like to know when there's a new map issued or one revised is shown by the phone calls we get whenever we tell about one. Unquestionaby the most convenient map of Chicago is the one published annually since 1889 by Tillotson in small book form and in recent years edited by Mr. Kandul. The 1922 issue is just out, with many changes and improvements. To forestall phone inquiries: It's on sale at all stationery and book shops.

Hugo L. Goetz, president of the 3400 Sheridan Road Building corporation, announces four more tenants for his harbor apartments at Roscoe and Sheridan. Leonard A. Busby of the Chicago Surface Lines, Architect Walter W. Alschlager, William Nelson Pelouze, brother-in-law of Mayor Thompson, and Dr. James J. McCarty have all signed five year leases. A private entrance now being cut through between Dr. McCarty's flat and the adjoining one of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Connery, parents of Mrs. McCarty, will enable them to throw the two into one great apartment of twenty-seven rooms. There are now only four vacant apartments.

Brokers' Notes

Douglas B. Robertson of John R. Robertson & Co., is back in Glen Ellyn, his home town, and the loop from a three months' trip across the Pacific to Australia with Mrs. Robertson.

James A. Bidderman of James A. Bidderman & Co., has just returned from a trip to Hawaii, Mexico and California.

Jacob S. Wolbach announces that he is now associated with Lackner, Butz & Co.

News of the Architects

This is a sort of photographic "beg your pardon." Last week we had a half column cut made of Philip B. Maher to use in conjection with the announcement that he had become associated with his father, George W. Maher, architect and city planner, under the new firm name of George W. Maher & Son. But the cut disappeared right on the dead line and wasn't located until the next day. Unless Mr. Maher's likeness vanishes again it'll be tucked in with these words on the left.

PHILIP B. MAHER. [Raymor Photo.]

C. H. Whittaker, founder and editor of the Journal of the American Institute of Architects, published at Washington, will speak on "The Architect and his Relation to the Industrial Situation" on Tuesday evening at the Art institute before the Illinois chapter of the A. I. A.

Architect Jacob Lewis will move to suite 1118 in the Garrick theater building on March 15. His new phone will be Central 5785.

Some Miscellaneous Sales

O. P. Curran Jr. reports twelve flats, southeast corner Grace and Rokeby, Charles E. Lublow to Ottilie Allmendinger, $45,000, subject to $29,000; B. R. Kiely, broker for buyer. Thirty flats, 5336-44 Winthrop avenue, Harold J. Muir to Gertrude Meyerovitz, $125,000, subject to $75,000; Cochran & McCluer represented the buyer. Twenty-one flats, southwest corner Kenmore and Foster, $116,000, subject to $80,500.

ADD 721 ACRES TO FOREST PARKS; COST IS $481,388

More than 721 acres, costing $481,388, were acquired by the forest preserve district of Cook county during the last few days. The largest tract was 401 acres in Orland township, from 135th to 143d street, along 104th avenue extended, bought for $111,733. In the Calumet district, along the Calumet river at 134th street extended, 109 acres were bought for $212,745.

From August Schuth seventy-eight acres were purchased at 22d street and 1st avenue, in Proviso township, between the Des Plaines river and the Speedway hospital, for $97,522. A tract of 117½ acres in Northfield township just south of the county line was bought for $46,918. This is a mile east of the St. Paul railroad and is cut through by the Waukegan road.

For fifteen and one-half acres in Niles township along the Chicago river, just west of the Waukegan road, $12,470 was paid the Poehlman Bros. company.

PLAN PALATIAL MOVIE THEATER FOR LAWNDALE

Another palatial movie theater is announced for the west side. It will cost in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 and will be on the south side of Roosevelt road, just west of Crawford. C. Howard Crane and Kenneth Franzheim have designed a playhouse to seat 2,800, and in addition there'll be eight stores and several large suites of offices.

The Crawford Building corporation will lease it to the Ascher brothers, who will operate it with combination vaudeville and films. Thirty leases have been purchased during the last seven months to clear the 140x175 site for the building.

Howard H. Hanks is president of the corporation; Albert Sedlacek, vice president and treasurer, and Sol K. Graff, secretary. The Crawford State Savings bank will underwrite a bond issue.

Plan Theater at Belmont, Milwaukee, and Hamlin

Sketches are being drawn for a proposed 2,500 seat movie, store, and office building in the triangular shaped block fronting 1,200 feet on Milwaukee, 440 on Belmont, and 370 on Hamlin avenue. According to the owners, the C. A. Johnson Real Estate company, work will start the latter part of April.

New Insurance Exchange to Be North of River

Napoleon Picard's second great Insurance Exchange is going to be somewhere in the Upper Michigan avenue district. Three tentative sites are under consideration by a committee of five. As announced in this department Dec. 20, the new building will not conflict with the present loop Insurance Exchange, originated and managed by Mr. Picard, and will house general agencies of fire insurance concerns.
